Scant Praise

By Robert DeVore

The World War II "scandals" of wasted millions and astronomical profits of a war production program mired in the confusion and red tape of multiple leadership, yesterday were placed before the Senate, where demands were made immediately for punishment of persons responsible.

Some Senators, shocked by disclosure of a year's accumulation of findings by the Senate Defense Investigating Committee, called for demotions and jail terms for Federal officials and suggested criminal prosecution of private interests involved.

The committee's report, summarized for the Senate by its chairman, Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, covered the most important segments of the Administration's organization for production of fighting equipment and had scarcely a word of commendation for any of them, save the Maritime Commission.

Summaries of the most startling criticisms in classifications as carried in the report, follow:

Aviation—Only 25 per cent of present plane production "is of combat types considered to be equal or superior to the best types produced abroad" and "prospects for the future" of this vital weapon "are not too good."

Office of Production Management—"Its record has not been impressive; its mistakes of commission have been legion, and its mistakes of omission have been even greater. It has all too often done nothing when it should have realized that problems cannot be avoided by refusing to admit that they exist."

OPM's dollar-a-year and work-without-compensation men from big business "can be termed lobbyists"—"in a very real sense." The Government should "not continue to accept the loan of these men" by companies "with so large a stake in the defense program."

Tremendous Profits

Coal Prices Here Go Up 25 Cents; OPA Investigates

Office of Price Administration officials last night began an investigation of a 25-cents-a-ton increase which District area coal dealers put into effect yesterday.

One OPA aide said Washington is the only area in which such a rise in coal prices has been laid down this year.

Rising costs were cited by one large dealer in explaining the boost. He said gasoline, automobile parts, tires, trucks and labor all cost more.

Although a survey of dealers indicated the rise in the retail price of coal is general in the city, the head of one firm said the companies did not "get together" before increasing the price. Average retail prices quoted on Pennsylvania anthracite coal per ton are egg, nut and stove, $13.95; pea, $12.05; buck, $10.25.

Forces in Irak, Iran Now Under Auchinleck

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Cairo, Jan. 15.—All British and Indian forces in Irak and Iran have been placed under command of Lieut. Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, British Middle East commander, it was announced today. These areas formerly had been part of the Indian command.

Today's announcement disposes of rumors that Gen. Auchinleck might return to his India post, which he gave up when he assumed the Middle East command.

Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, 45, was convicted in the District Court yesterday on two counts of corrupt perjury and was jailed to await sentence.

Hill's conviction came after a seven-day trial in which Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., showed how the trail of eight mail bags full of franked envelopes led from Prescott Dennett's Nazi propaganda mailing center to a House storeroom used by Hill's boss, Fish.

For swearing falsely before the grand jury that he did not have these mailbags placed in Fish's storeroom, Hill now faces a prison term of two to ten years.

For swearing falsely that he did not know the Nazi propagandist, George Sylvester Viereck, who financed Dennett, Hill now faces a second two-to-ten-year term, which Hickey and Maloney declared the verdict should be a summary lesson to the witnesses still to come before the special grand jury and issued a summons for Dennett to appear next Monday.

O'Mahoney's Price Bill Plan Loses Ground

Compromise Would Eliminate It, but Keep Bankhead Change

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A House and Senate conference committee yesterday skipped over the sharply controversial farm provisions of the price control bill amid growing indications of an Administration compromise next week.

A middle-group settlement gaining support off the floor and believed to have the backing of the powerful American Farm Bureau Federation, would:

Eliminate the so-called O'Mahoney amendment which the President has charged would touch off an inflationary spiral of food and wage increases by making industrial wages a factor in figuring "parity."

Retain the Bankhead amendment, opposed as unsound by the President, because it gives the Secretary of Agriculture veto power over the price administrator. Leaders said the President in any event could make final decisions through his power to dismiss.

U. S. Rationing Of Retreaded Tires Likely

Only 20% of Rubber Believed Available For January Demands

Rationing of retreaded as well as new tires appeared likely yesterday, while on both sides of Congress steps were taken to relieve dealers and motorists caught in the rubber shortage.

Disclosure by officials of the Office of Production Management that only 300 tons of crude rubber were made available for retreading of passenger car tires this month led to the belief that rationing of retreaded tires would be necessary. This amount of crude rubber, according to unofficial estimates, would be sufficient to take care of only about 20 per cent of the demand for retreads created by freezing new tires.

While the rubber quota for January retreading was set at 2300 tons, at least 2000 tons would be necessary for tires on trucks in essential operations, and increased truck needs were foreseen for February. Rationing was held out as an alternative to alloting sufficient rubber for all retreading or cutting off rubber for passenger cars entirely.

The Secretary of Agriculture would be authorized to plant 75,000 acres of guayule rubber plants in

Lone Eagle to Aid War Effort In Plane Research Post

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Charles A. Lindbergh has decided on a wartime job in which apparently he will cease to be a controversial figure.

He will not return to active duty with the Army Air Corps. Instead he will devote his time as a civilian to a "technical commercial project" in which the War Department is directly interested. His work on this project will have the Army's "approval."

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson made this announcement at a press conference yesterday, but gave no details as to just how the first New York-to-Paris flier would employ his knowledge and skill. It was assumed he would work with one of the big aircraft companies in doing research work on the war plane of tomorrow.

Since Lindbergh came to Washington early this month to offer his services to the Government, the Lone Eagle has been the subject of a fierce controversy. In letters to President Roosevelt and to newspaper editors, some citizens argued that Lindbergh, by his speeches in 1940 questioning an ultimate Allied victory, had disqualified himself for service.

Others argued that the bombing of Pearl Harbor on December 7 had lowered the curtain on the isolationist-interventionist debate that had raged before that, and they contended that Lindbergh, like many other erstwhile isolationists, should be credited with a sincere desire to serve the Nation at war.

Most Army officers, it might be said, took this latter view. However, unlike laymen, they never

Prelude to Action

Secretary Stimson disclosed yesterday that America's Army will be increased to about four million officers and men this year and indicated that expeditionary forces—perhaps a million troops—will be sent overseas before the end of 1942.

The present Army of 1,700,000 men will be increased to 3,600,000 in the ranks during the next 11½ months, he said, to boost the number of divisions from 34 to 71. Armored units will be doubled and motorized troops even more greatly expanded.

Air combat forces will be tremendously enlarged. Stimson would not give exact figures, but declared that the present organization will be "more than doubled." Until yesterday's announcement the Air Force goal had been 84 groups.

And, Stimson made plain, this is only the 1942 program. In the spring of 1943, he said, there will be a further expansion of the Army.

A. E. F. Likely to Be Big

The prospect of a large A. E. F. this year was indicated by Stimson's announcement of the plans for housing the 1,900,000 additional soldiers. The cantonment expansion in view provides for less than half of these.

Stimson explained in this connection that the program contemplates that some divisions now in continental United States will be sent overseas before the end of the year.

Later in the day Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, National Selective Service director, disclosed that it will be necessary to take several hundred thousand men from the new age groups to be registered under the new draft law, those aged 20 and 37 to 45, to meet the 1942 Army levies.

But, he also "guessed" that this year's announced man-power requirements—upward of 1,900,000—can be met without taking men with dependents.

Automobile Use Tax Stamps Go On Sale in Capital

The new Federal automobile use stamps went on sale at all District postoffices yesterday and business last night was reported brisk.

Every automobile owner must have one of the stickers, which cost $2.09, by February 1.

Stamps were being distributed yesterday with instructions that purchasers use their own glue in pasting the stickers on their windshields. Bureau of Internal Revenue officials want the stamps upon the windshield facing out. However, the stamps came out with the glue on the back side, like postage stamps.

Stamps bought now will be good until July 1. Then new ones costing $5 must be purchased. Those will be good for a year.

Axis Continuing Raids on Malta

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 15 (AP).—German bombers still were attacking this Mediterranean island fortress tonight during the seventh straight raid of the day.

A communique issued at 6 p. m. while the Axis planes still were roaring overhead said that no casualties had resulted and property damage was slight because heavy antiaircraft fire kept the raiders very high.

The Germans were dropping parachute flares in an effort to find their targets.

Corregidor Gets 2 Jap Bombers; MacArthur's Men Still Hold Firm

One of the queens of Japan's merchant marine—now possibly converted into an aircraft carrier or troop transport—has been sunk by an American submarine, the Navy announced yesterday.

A roving U-boat of Admiral Thomas C. Hart's Asiatic Fleet accounted for the craft, one of the 17,000-ton Yawata class, Navy communique No. 28 disclosed.

At the same time, the War Department announced that two Japanese bombers have been shot down over Corregidor, and revealed the safe arrival of the United States Army hospital ship Mactan at Port Darwin, Australia, carrying wounded soldiers and sailors evacuated from Manila.

Others Are Hit

The Jap planes were destroyed when nine enemy bombers attacked the fortifications of Manila Bay Wednesday, renewing these assaults after several days' absence from the air over Corregidor.

Besides the two shot down, others were hit, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported to the War Department. He said that damage to the fortifications and casualties among our troops were slight.

The enemy army opposing MacArthur's forces on Bataan Peninsula confined their operations during the day to "attempts at general infiltration all along the line," the American Army commander said. After the heavy losses dealt out to the Japs in recent days, the enemy commander made no frontal assault on MacArthur's lines.

"Although greatly outnumbered," the War Department said of the newest Japanese attacks, "American and Philippine troops are holding well-prepared positions with courage and determination."

1-Hour Daylight Plan Is Sent To President

The measure will become effective 20 days after President Roosevelt signs it.

The report was approved by the House with little debate. The Senate acted Wednesday.

Group Approves Of Christenberry

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee agreed unanimously yesterday to recommend confirmation of Herbert W. Christenberry, to be United States district attorney at New Orleans.

Chairman McFarland (Democrat), of Arizona, said he and Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, "went over the evidence and carefully examined it, failing to find anything substantial enough" to merit disapproval of Christenberry, whose confirmation was opposed by the Louisiana Association for Clean Government. A written report will be submitted to the full Judiciary Committee which may not meet before Monday.

The association, of which Samuel Ballard, of Houma, La., is president, contended that Christenberry was a "dummy candidate" for city judge in New Orleans in 1933, and that he acted as "a political spy" for the late Senator Huey P. Long.

City Faces Critical Hour

By the United Press

Singapore (Friday), Jan. 16.—Fresh Australian troops have arrived and have been thrown into the battle for defense of this vital British naval base, it was announced officially today, and have scored initial victories over the advance guard of Japanese hordes swarming southward.

The Australians have gone into action in a number of sectors and have scored relatively important local successes, an official dispatch from the front said, adding that operations are continuing according to plan.

An earlier official dispatch, sent from the front late yesterday, said that advance elements of the Australian forces had attacked and defeated a small Japanese column of infantry and tanks in the eastern part of Negri Sembilan Province, about 125 miles northwest of Singapore.

"Our bombers attacked targets at Port Swettenham and started a number of fires," the official message said.

One of the bombs set fire to a large oil depot.

"Our aerial gunners are increasing the extent of these oil fires by machine-gunning oil streams which have run from broken tanks," the dispatch added.

News that the Australians were in action electrified Singapore but military quarters warned against undue optimism pointing out that the enemy still possessed superiority of numbers and equipment.

Welles Urges Latins to Oust Axis Diplomats

United Front Essential To American Defense, He Asserts at Rio

(Partial Text of Welles' Address, Page 9.)

By Alburn West
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 15.—The United States urged the nonbelligerents of the Western Hemisphere today to abandon neutrality and to form a united front against aggression by driving out Axis agents, now serving under the cloaks of diplomats, from the New World.

This plea was made by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles at the opening session of the third consultative conference of foreign ministers of the Pan-American Republics.

Welles warned bluntly that in this day to cling to "the tattered fiction of an illusory neutrality" is suicidal.

He spoke to the assembled delegates of 20 other American republics, 10 of whom already are at war. Of the others, Argentina alone stood out as the only nation reported unwilling to join a united front of outright diplomatic hostility to the Axis.

Backed by Other Spokesmen

Spokesmen for Brazil, Uruguay, Chile and Mexico, who shared the platform with Welles in the opening session, all stressed the need for united action.

Dr. Alberto Guani, the Uruguyan foreign minister, in particular announced that his nation was willing

Advance From Kalinin Carried to 200 Miles From Latvian Border

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Jan. 16.—The northern arm of the Russian pincers movement, apparently aimed at crumbling the entire Nazi central front, has swept westward to Selizharovo, 175 miles northwest of Moscow near the Volga headwaters, the Russians announced officially today.

The southern Red arm on this front stretches southwest from Moscow 160 miles to Kirov, representing a giant "V" with Moscow as its base. Should the Russians succeed in closing the top of this V, all the German armies based on the Rzhev-Vyazma-Mozhaisk triangle would be trapped.

Another Moscow dispatch said the Russians, counting up their gains in the past ten days of their offensive against the Germans, said today they had killed more than 14,000 soldiers, including one general, and captured several railway trains loaded with material.

The Moscow radio said that on the central front Soviet troops had captured 331 guns, 50 tanks, 155 trench mortars, 747 machine guns, 59 anti-tank guns, 199 automatic rifles, 4644 rifles and 1446 trucks.

The captured trains carried tanks, trucks, motorcycles, railway and industrial equipment and ten trucks loaded with clothing.

It Happened 500 Feet Up

British Cadet Clings to Plane's Tail After Falling Overboard

By the United Press

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Jan. 15.—The story of how British Aviation Cadet Derek M. Sharp, of Yorkshire, England, fell out of a training plane at 500 feet, but caught on to the ship's rudder and rode to earth was told today.

An official release from the United States Air Corps Training School here said Sharp went through the experience unruffled late yesterday afternoon.

According to the release, the plane was flying at about 500 feet when suddenly he "found himself sitting on thin air . . . his next impression of the mishap was a severe rap when his head hit the tail and, throwing his arms around the tail with his legs dangling below, he managed to hold on long enough to wiggle himself up onto the elevator surfaces."

The instructor, Jay McCausland, soon discovered by the peculiar behavior of the ship that his passenger was missing, and saw him on the tail. Since Sharp could not jump safely from that height, the instructor climbed to 2500 feet "with extreme difficulty."

"In an attempt to attract the student's attention, McCausland kicked the rudder bars back and forth, and to his surprise felt Sharp take hold of the tail and wiggle it back at him.

"On looking around McCausland saw that Sharp had straddled the tail and was signalling him with the typically British 'thumbs up,' conveying the message that he chose to stay with his instructor and risk the ride down to earth with him."

The pilot made a perfect landing. Said Sharp: "I was pretty comfortable and, anyway, I've seen it happen before in England."

Vessel Stricken Off Long Island; Cold Balks Effort To Rescue Crew

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 15.—Striking for the second time within 32 hours, enemy warcraft attacked an unidentified tanker off the south shore Long Island town of Hampton Bays today, only 75 miles from New York, it was announced by Coast Guard officials at Quoque, Long Island.

At the New York headquarters of the Third Naval District, the commandant, Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, declined comment on the reported attack. He said he had ordered his staff not to release information concerning ship sinkings in the future and added that all such information must come from Washington.

Navy Not Informed Here

In Washington, the Navy Department said it had not received any information concerning an attack or a torpedoing since announcement last night that the Panamanian tanker Norness was torpedoed three times by a submarine, 60 miles southeast of Montauk Point, Long Island, at 1:20 a. m. (Eastern standard time) yesterday.

The time of the new attack reported by the Coast Guard was unofficially placed at 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) today at a position 19 miles offshore and approximately 50 miles west of the spot where the Norness fell victim to a brazen raider that surfaced and casually torpedoed her.

The Coast Guard said that one of their patrol planes from Quoque had sighted the second vessel and had dropped food and whisky to some 14 crewmen seen tossing about on a rough sea in a lifeboat and on a raft.

New Steam Siren To Be Tested In D. C. Today

Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council, announced last night that the Bureau of Standards would test between 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. today one of the seven steam sirens contemplated as additions to the city's air raid alarm system.

Long blasts will be used, he said, to prevent confusion in the public mind with the standard alarm signal which is five blasts at half-second intervals repeated three times.

If the device is considered satisfactory, the order for all seven will be completed. They will be added to the 41 electric sirens ordered for the city.

Whether the 41 together with the 7 will make a satisfactory sound, defense officials do not yet know.

Jap Bombers Blast Amboina, Dutch Indies' Second Largest Air, Naval Base

Netherlands Fliers Go Out To Hit Back

By the Associated Press

Batavia, N. E. I., Jan. 15.—Japanese warplanes struck deep into the Dutch East Indies today to raid the naval air base of Amboina, second in importance to Soerabaja in the Netherlands' western Pacific defense.

The shortest communique of the Pacific war announced the raid. It said merely: "This morning the Japanese carried out a bombing attack on millitary objectives on Amboina. Further exact particulars are being awaited."

This base is on the island of Amboina in the Molucca group between Celebes and New Guinea, some 400 miles southeast of the Minahassa Peninsula of Celebes, where Japanese landings have been effected.

It was raided once before, on January 7, by Japanese flying boats.

Radio communications with the Minahassa Peninsula had been broken since Monday, newspapers reported tonight. There was, likewise no news from the Dutch Borneo-Sarawak border, where a skirmish was reported yesterday.

Confidence was rising high, however, among the Dutch in these islands, following the arrival of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell to set up headquarters of the Allied Far East command.

Newspapers proclaimed: "Victory will start from the Indies."

American-made Dutch planes roared out from their airdromes again to hunt for Japanese targets on land and sea.

The Japanese landings on Celebes and the island of Tarakan focussed new attention on the defenses of densely-populated Java, and the result was encouraging.

A party of observers returning from a tour of ammunition dumps somewhere on the island said they were scattered in dense jungles and so well camouflaged as to defy the most expert air reconnaissance or ground espionage. Even the roads leading to them are invisible from the air in the undulating sea of green.

In those dumps are millions upon millions of shells, bombs and cartridges.

As for the landings in the northern islands, the one at Tarakan, just off northeast Borneo, appeared to be in the greatest force. Reconnaissance disclosed that six heavy cruisers and six destroyers supported a fleet of 14 transports in the operation, and that landings were made at three points on Tarakan's east coast Sunday morning. The defenders, who fired all oil installations on the island, finally had to surrender, partly because of the terrible heat of the flames.

Assurance of the loyalty of the population on the mainland of Dutch Borneo was received today by Governor General A. W. L. Tjarda van Starkenborgh Stachouwer from the Sultan of Bulongan, one of the autonomous rulers.

Lindbergh to Aid In War Effort

expected that Lindbergh would try to play an active role as a war flier. Lindbergh is now 39. For a man who has not had much more than basic training in combat flying, that is a pretty advanced age. Most combat fliers are in their early 20's.

Lindbergh, after his memorable flight to Paris at the age of 25, was appointed a colonel in the Missouri National Guard, and he held this same rank as a colonel in the Army Air Corps Reserve. On April 28 he resigned his commission because his commander in chief — President Roosevelt — had implied certain things about "my loyalty to my country, my motives and my character."

It turns out that when Lindbergh came here on January 8 to talk to Secretary of War Stimson he made no attempt to get back in the Air Corps. Col. Stimson said yesterday that Lindbergh, in calling on him, asked whether he could be of any use to the Government or the War Department.

"I told him," Stimson narrated to reporters, "that we were always glad to receive information, help or advice from anyone who thought he could be of service, and I asked him what he thought he could do most usefully.

"He replied that he thought for the present he could be most useful in the line of technical experimentation."

Stimson said that the next day Lindbergh conferred with Lieut. Gen. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, and Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air.

Axis View of Singapore Fight

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

JAPANESE PINCER MOVEMENT against Singapore was indicated yesterday by an Axis radio report, announced through London. Jap forces reportedly landed on an island of Rhio Archipelago (arrow, 1), across the narrow Singapore strait. The same source reported the Japanese driving down the east coast of Malaya (arrow, 2) and outflanking the town of Endau. To the west, Tokyo said, the invaders occupied Gemas (3) and reached Tampin

Landing in Western Malaya 'Considered' to Aid Singapore

By the United Press

Rangoon, Jan. 15.—Possibility of a sea-borne attack on the west coast of Malaya by British imperials massing in Burma to provide direct aid to Singapore's defenders, was discussed by observers today after official revelation that an offensive from Burma was now possible.

A high military spokesman said last night that an Anglo-Chinese offensive from Burma against the Japanese in Thailand, Malaya and French Indo-China "naturally is being considered."

It had just been announced that more British and Indian troops, more air personnel and more anti-aircraft batteries had reached Rangoon.

The spokesman did not intimate, however, that a drive against the Japanese was imminent, and he emphasized that the territories to which Lieut. Gen. T. J. Hutton, Burma commander, would have to send his forces are very difficult to reach.

Mountain ranges in Thailand not far from the border are a barrier to land operations against Bangkok and other areas the Japanese are using. Mountainous country and swampy jungles protect the Japanese rear north of where the landings were made for the drive into Malaya.

Though it might compel the Japanese to divert some of their strength from the southward offensive on Singapore, a drive from Burma into this territory would be difficult and slow.

Thus observers said that only if the British could assemble a large fleet of transports to carry enough troops to Panang, Port Swettenham or other Malayan coastal points to wrest them from Japanese control would it be possible to ease the pressure on Singapore in the immediate future.

Reinforcements Reach Singapore

front line positions Tuesday evening, it was revealed, and continued to take up their positions during Wednesday. Their movement to the front was accomplished without a single casualty.

It was apparent that the crucial battle for Singapore was now at hand. Reorganized imperial forces, after retreating 250 miles through Malaya to within approximately 100 miles of this great naval base, were turning on their tormentors by land and air. They defeated one tank-paced Japanese infantry column in Negri Sembilian Province and strewed fiery distruction through Port Swettenham behind the enemy lines.

[A Friday dispatch of the International News Service from Singapore said three Japanese columns were reported in advices from the front to have reached Britain's new defense line, believed to be only 80 or 90 miles north of Singapore itself.

[The front was said to have been narrowed to a line 80 miles wide across the lower tip of the Malayan Peninsula.]

At the same time Allied fighter planes and imperial ground gunners hoisted an umbrella of steel and flame over Singapore which Japanese raiders, plugging away for hours at the Gibraltar of the East, utterly failed to penetrate.

Effectiveness of the aerial operations over Malaya, both offensive and defensive, reflected an upsurge in confidence for which the only logical explanation was the arrival of badly needed reinforcements.

For the first time in days the jungle warriors churning through the western battle zone seized the initiative, a general headquarters communique revealed. Advanced units of Australians tackled and routed the Nipponese infantrymen in the eastern part of Negri Sembilan Province, it said.

Though the blows against the Japanese still were too light to speak of a counteroffensive or a change in the initiative, they were doubly encouraging to the anxious people of Singapore, who for two days had been without any official news whatever of the land operations to the northwest.

(A London radio report heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System said that "on the Malaya Peninsula a Japanese army of 100,000 men is advancing" and "the battle is now nearing the real defense zone of Singapore.")

(Japanese reports through various channels said the Japanese push down the west coast of Malaya had engulfed the town of Malacca, 110 miles from Singapore, and Gemas, railroad junction on the border of Johore and Negri Sembilan; that Japanese tanks had advanced down the east coast to Endau, 90 miles above Singapore; and that Johore had been entered "from the east and west."

(The Exchange Telegraph in London recorded a Rome radio report—a source that heretofore has proved notoriously unreliable—as saying that Japanese forces had made a landing on an island of the Rhio Archipelago lying directly south of Singapore.)

The daylight raid on Singapore, following up determined assaults for the last three days, was the least successful from the Nipponese standpoint of any of them. The big bombers during a prolonged attack entirely failed to find a gap in the defenses, and turned tail to the imperial chaser planes.

At least two raiders were reported downed over Johore as the defense planes streaked northward in pursuit of the worsted Japanese.

(London reports were that the Allies were determined to defend Singapore with every ounce of available strength.)

(The Daily Mirror of Sydney said: "Singapore's fate depends on planes. Unless adequate air reinforcements are made available promptly, only a miracle can save Singapore. Singapore must not fall. Its fall would be a calamity for Australia, the British Empire and the whole Allied strategy in the Pacific. If Singapore falls, Churchill will fall with it and the political repercussions will be cataclysmic."

Line—were built in 1939. There were three of them, all designed for rapid conversion into aircraft carriers. One is understood to have been already converted, a Navy spokesman here said.

The vessels are 557 fee long, with a beam of 74 feet, and have a speed of about 23 knots. One of the craft broke the speed record between Yokahoma and San Francisco last year.

Departure of the Army hospital ship Mactan from Manila was announced here December 31, two days before the Philippine capital fell to the Japanese. It was marked as a Red Cross ship in accordance with treaties giving such vessels safe conduct through war zones.

Meanwhile yesterday as General MacArthur's defense lines continued to hold in rocky Bataan Peninsula, Secretary of War Stimson was again asked if the Philippine commander would be ordered to leave the Philippines if the "situation became desperate." Stimson replied:

"To borrow a phrase from Mr. Lincoln, we'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

Kent Coal Miners Remain on Strike

London, Jan. 15.—After six days of negotiations between strikers and management over wages, 2000 miners of the colliery pits of Kent were still idle today and wartime coal needs are suffering heavily, according to reports from the important Betteshanger pit district near Deal.

The strikers demanded 15 shillings 3 pence per shift and asserted that the employers have broken the wages agreement reached on December 19 after arbitration.

Film Queen of China Killed

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SHRAPNEL TAKES LIFE OF BUTTERFLY WU—Butterfly Wu, movie queen of China, was killed by shrapnel during the siege of Hongkong, press reports from Chungking said last night. Butterfly Wu was a romantic figure whose name had been linked with warlords, rich men and poor men. When the Japanese took Manchuria in 1931, some persons blamed her because Manchuria's overlord, young Marshal Chang Hsuehlang, who had been seen frequently in her company in Peiping, wasn't in Mukden when the crisis came. Butterfly fluttered quickly back into popularity, however will be needed for the expanded military machine, Stimson said, and disclosed plans for raising 75,000 men from the ranks this year and for greatly enlarging the number in the Air Force. Officials estimate that from 350,000 to 400,000 officers are required to lead the 3,600,000-man force—a total of about four million.

Nine large new cantonments for 30,000 men each and five additional temporary camps are contemplated to house part of the enlarged army. Present posts and training centers will be expanded to take care of 250,000 more.

The first three of the new divisions will be formed 10 weeks from now, the Secretary said. The commanders of the units have already been named and training cadres of officers and non-coms are now being assembled. On March 25, each will receive 15,000 men to bring them to full war strength.

The Nation's field army now totals 27 infantry or motorized divisions, five armored and two cavalry divisions, not counting units in the Philippines, Hawaii or other overseas possessions. A sixth armored division is in immediate prospect.

Thirty-two additional motorized or infantry divisions are to be created this year, Stimson said. All of the infantry units, he stated, will be of the triangular or three regiment type as distinguished from the square or four regimental setup.

Doubling of the field divisions will give the Army at least 71 such fighting groups. In addition, the expansion to 3,600,000 enlisted men will provide a proportionate increase in antiaircraft, engineer and other special units. No expansion of the cavalry is contemplated, it is understood.

Fifty or more new military police battalions are also to be organized to replace troops now guarding important industrial facilities and public utilities in continental United States.

Finally, there will be a large increase in the number of men at training centers. They will provide replacements for the new and existing units, and the necessary men for additional divisions to be formed in the spring of 1943.

To provide the large number of officers necessary for the new ground units, some 90,000 men in the ranks will be sent to officers schools this year. This is a ninefold increase over the program as originally established. It was enlarged from 10,000 to 14,000 recently. About 75,000 officers are expected to be drawn from these schools this year.

Gen. Hershey told reporters that while it probably would not be necessary to take men with dependents this year, local boards probably will be stricter in deferring men for this reason and in reviewing those already deferred for this reason.

Similarly, the physical requirements probably will be lower, the draft chief stated, and men with minor defects, such as bad teeth and correctable eyesight may be accepted. Reexamination of all deferred men will be intensified, he stated.

Hershey estimated that the Army's 1942 needs could be met from some one million men now registered and in Class 1A, about 1,200,000 men aged 20 and 21 and some 300,000 to 400,000 men aged 37 to 45 who will register February 16.

Changsha Costs 60,000 Japs

By Spencer Moosa

Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, Jan. 15.—Only 10,000 of the 70,000 Japanese hurled against Changsha escaped the counter-offensive of the Chinese, an army spokesman said today, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek called it only the beginning of greater triumph for the United Nations.

A communique tonight said further severe casualties have been inflicted on the remaining troops of the Japanese offensive, with 1300 prisoners captured and 90 motor vehicles destroyed. Only a small band of Japanese now are holding out south of the Sinsiang River, northeastern Hunan Province.

This area, about 20 miles south of Yochow, on Tungting Lake, and about 60 miles north of Changsha, received the Japanese in their retreat from the Hunan capital, and it was there that the Chinese, aided by their fledgling air force, cut in to complete the disaster before the Japanese could reach their base at Yochow.

(The Chungking radio, heard by the N. B. C. listening post at Los Angeles, said Japanese transport planes were shuttling back and forth to save as many as possible of the remnants of their shattered force.)

The Chungking spokesman said the campaign "may be regarded as more or less concluded."

(The Chungking radio, heard Thursday night in London, announced a new Chinese offensive had been started west of Canton, South China, and now is in full swing.)

In another sector of China's offensive effort, northeastern Honan province, the siege of the walled city of Hwaiyang was tightened, according to the Chungking communique, by interception of a Japanese relief column, 1700 strong. This force was said to have been routed with 50 per cent casualties.

In Kwangtung province, south China, Chinese gains around Canton were reported to have restored the positions obtaining before January 14. Japanese forces that had advanced north from Canton along the West River were said to have started a withdrawal after reaching Lupao, 25 miles northwest of the metropolis.

Roosevelt Calls Parley on Plan to Aid Workers Displaced by War Program

60% of Pay For 26 Weeks Is Proposed

President Roosevelt will meet with Congressional leaders and Government welfare officials tomorrow to discuss a tentative plan providing "emergency displacement benefits" to workers made idle by the conversion of industrial factories from peacetime to military production, it was learned yesterday.

The plan, calling for unemployment compensation to supplement existing benefits and to include workers not now eligible for such payments, was presented to the President yesterday by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt and OPM Associate Director General Sidney Hillman.

McNutt said that Mr. Roosevelt favored the plan in broad outline, but that the details, which will require legislation and an appropriation, must be worked out with Congressional leaders.

Would Affect Thousands

As proposed, the plan would provide additional benefits to workers already receiving unemployment compensation. Other unemployed workers would be recompensed at the rate of about 60 per cent of their previous average weekly earnings. The compensation, which may reach a maximum figure of $24 a week, would continue for 26 weeks.

It was expected that the benefits would extend to several hundred thousand persons temporarily unemployed by reason of shutdowns of plants pending their conversion to war work, or shutdowns caused by shortages of materials. The time limit of half a year during which benefits would be paid, McNutt explained, is based on the supposition that the conversion process can be completed in that time and that increased demands for labor in war industries will absorb the idle workmen.

Who Would Benefit

The emergency displacement benefits under the proposal would go not only to persons who have exhausted their benefits under State unemployment compensaion plans, but also to those not eligible under State systems because of the small size of the plant in which they worked or for other reasons.

A basic feature of the plan is the provision that no benefits will be paid to anyone who declines to accept vocation training or bona fide employment offers.

Ship Sunk Off N. Y. Had No Time to Fire

By James F. King
Associated Press Staff Writer

Newport, R. I., Jan. 15.—The captain of the torpedoed Panamanian tanker Norness revealed tonight that his ship was armed, but was struck so quickly by an enemy submarine that there was no chance to fire.

Capt. Harold Hansen, one of 38 men rescued from the doomed vessel, which was attacked only 60 miles from Long Island during the early hours of yesterday morning, said he did not see the submarine until "we already were in small boats."

"It was only about 75 yards away from my boat," said the skipper.

Hansen, a blond Norwegian of 30-odd years, said that three torpedoes were fired at his oil-carrying vessel—first on the starboard, then port, then starboard again—"about eight or ten minutes between each."

He said all but two men—who were lost—managed to get aboard two small boats and as many rafts "just before the last torpedo."

Sub Vanished Quickly

He said the submarine disappeared quickly and that it was so dark "I saw it only for a couple of minutes."

He explained that the submarine did not surface fully—although apparently it was operating with better than periscope sights—and that he could not see clearly enough to determine its nationality during the sudden, savage attack.

Earlier, Rear Admiral Edward Kalbfus, commander of the Newport Naval Operating Base, told how the undersea craft had deliberately circled the Norness after firing its first torpedo, so that the tanker was punctured from both the port and starboard sides.

Even so, he said, the Norness had remained afloat today, approximately 50 feet of its bow sticking almost vertically from the water. It had been marked as a menace to navigation.

Kalbfus said some of the men had been forced to wallow around in icy water and fuel oil for some time before they were picked up, but predicted all of the 38 survivors would be out of the hospital shortly, with the exception of one man with a fractured kneecap.

Third Officer Divino Ask said at a mass interview tonight that a large number of the crew were asleep at the time of the attack—1:30 a. m. Wednesday.

"We had no warning," Ask said. "The sea was not rough.

"We were in boats and on rafts 12 hours. I saw nobody on the sub. Most of us were sleeping anyway when the first shot struck. She made no attempt to shell us."

Ask explained that one of the crew members was an Icelander and that all of the others were from Norway, Sweden or Denmark.

Several crew members said the worst part of the experience was that they were hungry and many lacked sufficient clothing to remain warm in the small boats and aboard the rafts.

A 20-year-old deckhand, Charles M. Karlsen, a Norwegian who said he had been going to sea for two years, disclosed that the deck "blew up when the first two torpedoes struck and oil spouted as if from faucets all over the place."

20 Killed, 5 Injured in 3 Crashes by Army Bombers

Twenty officers and men of the Army Air Corps were dead and five were injured yesterday as the result of three bomber crashes in widely separated parts of the country.

Near Boise, Idaho, two officers and seven men were killed late Wednesday seven minutes after their medium bomber took off from Gowen Field, the War Department announced last night.

Bodies of two officers and seven men were found near Lake Arrowhead, Calif., yesterday in the wreckage of a medium bomber which disappeared in the San Bernadino Mountains December 20.

An investigation was begun yesterday into the crash of a medium bomber near North Woodstock, N. H., Wednesday, with two men killed and five officers and men hurt.

Wreckage of the plane lost in the San Bernardino Mountains was found by a ground searching party on the north slope of Keller Peak. The bomber disappeared during heavy weather the night of December 30 from a formation of planes over Cajon Pass.

Its occupants were identified by the Fourth Interceptor Command as: Lieut. Frank A. Kobal, pilot, Queens Village, N. Y.; Lieut. Joseph B. Maloney, copilot, Waterbury, Conn.; Technical Sergt. Waldo C. Jenson, Langley Field, Va.; Sergt. Roger F. Organ, Springfield, Ohio; Private William R. Chinn, Ironton, Pa.; Private Vernon H. Engleberch, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Private George G. May, Foxworth, Miss.; Private Robert N. Enyart, Columbus, Ohio, and Private Jack C. Shirley, Lavonia, Ga.

The dead in the Boise crash later were identified as:

Second Lieut. Elmer W. Munn, jr., Fort Worth, Tex.; Second Lieut. Darrell S. Wing, Phoenix, Ariz.; Staff Sergt. Carl Funkhouser, Skedee, Okla.; Staff Sergt. Carmen R. Gismondi, Oliver, Pa.; Private First Class Andre A. Chisholm, Woodside, N. Y.; Private Robert F. Adams, Vale, Oreg.; Private Lloyd Knight, Thompsonville, Ill.; Private Leland Sanders, Odessa, Mo., and Private Stanley Sansenbach, Parkersburg, Iowa.

The bomber lost in New Hampshire fell into dense woods near Mount Moosilaukee on a training flight from Westover Field, Mass. Killed were Privates Raymond F. Lawrence, Worcester, Mass., and Noah W. Phillips, Fayetteville, Ark.

Hitler Appoints New Reich Price Chief

Berlin, Jan. 15 (Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press).—Adolf Hitler tonight appointed Dr. Hans Fischboeck as Reichs commissioner for prices with the rank of secretary of state.

He succeeds Gauleiter Joseph Wagner, who had held the position since 1936.

This announcement did not say what became of Wagner, who was an early Nazi leader.

Army Relaxes Air Corps Rules Regarding Age and Education

The War Department announced yesterday it had dropped previously enforced educational requirements for Army aviation cadets and would hereafter accept men 18 years of age, as well as married men.

The requirements were changed to step up the supply of pilots, navigators and bombardiers for the Army.

The minimum age was lowered from 20 to 18 years, the maximum remaining 26; married men, heretofore rejected, now will be accepted; and the educational requirement of at least two years of college or written examination in equivalent subjects has been dropped in favor of a uniform aptitude test.

Under the new system, a candidate may be on his way to an Air Corps replacement training center the same day that he applies for the first time at an Army recruiting station.

The department explained that several cadet examining boards will be set up in each of the nine corps areas to grade the aptitude, or "screening," tests immediately.

There will be no exemptions from this test because of college credits earned, and the examination itself, instead of emphasizing detailed academic knowledge, is in the nature of an intelligence test to determine the candidate's ability to comprehend the subjects which will confront him at the aviation schools.

However, candidates for engineering, meteorological and other technical training for air corps operations still must meet extensive educational requirements.

The department expects these revisions to make approximately 2 million more men eligible for air corps enlistment. The new standards apply both to civilians and to men already in the Army who wish to become aviation cadets.

Move Gains to Drop O'Mahoney Plan

bill, as against the 121 per cent of parity implications of the Senate bill.

Eliminate if possible the so-called Paul Brown amendment forbidding price-fixing below the 1919-29 average of farm prices. A sharp fight in conference and on the floor will come on this move as the provision is identical in House and Senate bills.

Sidetracking until next week a farm price showdown, House and Senate conferees reached agreement only on rent control provisions and minor features of other sections.

Rents prevailing on or about April 1, 1941, were made the yardstick for establishing rent ceilings in any defense area, as against the April 1, 1940, date set in the House bill. The commodity price yardstick in both bills is October 1 to October 15, 1941.

Authority for tenants to petition the administrator for rental adjustments was stricken from the bill, Senator Prentiss Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, explaining that the District rent law will be the control in this community and in any defense area the administrator could step in if local controls break down.

Brown, heading the Senate price conferees, meanwhile, made public a letter from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, tacitly implying a basis for compromise.

O'Neal omitted any demand for the O'Mahoney amendment or the 1919-29 farm price average, the two provisions believed most objectionable to the Administration, but insisted on inclusion of the Bankhead amendment.

He forwarded resolutions adopted by the Farm Bureau Federation at its December convention declaring "no price ceilings should be established on any agricultural commodity, or the products thereof, at a price less than 110 per cent of parity." This ceiling was fixed in the House bill and is apparently unopposed by the Administration.

Brown called attention of Senators to the bureau's December resolution which read in part:

"We deplore efforts that are being made to raise the parity prices of farm commodities through a revision of the formula upon which parity prices are determined. If these efforts are successful, the sound and defensible basis of present parity, which is intended to give farm commodities a price structure representing a fair exchange value with the products of industry, would be destroyed, and agriculture would be breaking faith with the masses of the people."

The conference committee apparently has the votes to eliminate the Bankhead amendment, as well as the O'Mahoney. As there was doubt of Senate concurrence in deletion of both, modification of the Bankhead and sidetracking of the O'Mahoney may be attempted instead.

Douglas Dam Fight Dropped By McKellar

By the Associated Press

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, yielded yesterday to Presidential insistence, paving the way for quick Congressional approval of the construction of the Tennessee Valley Authority's 32-million-dollar Douglas Dam, which OPM officials hold vital to the war program.

He reiterated in a letter to President Roosevelt his conviction that the dam was neither necessary nor desirable, but added that since the commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy insisted on it, he had no course but to "acquiesce" and fight it no longer.

William L. Batt, director of OPM's materials division, praised McKellar for his action and called it "a step of real statesmanship," which removed all doubt of passage of an appropriation financing initial construction of the dam.

A House Appropriations subcommittee, of which Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, is chairman, planned immediate consideration, probably today, of an appropriation of 30 million dollars to finance major cost of the project which TVA officials estimated would ultimately provide 100,000 kilowatts of continuous power when the dam, on the French Broad River near Danridge, Tenn., is linked with downstream units. Part of the 30 million dollars will be used to build connecting lines.

TVA officials said they would have initial power available in 1943, when a crucial aluminum shortage was expected.

McKellar wrote Mr. Roosevelt that in view of the Executive's assumption of the entire responsibility for building the dam, "there is nothing left for me to do but acquiesce."

McKellar's opposition has been based on a contention that farm acreage producing crops with an annual value exceeding one million dollars would be destroyed by the dam.

Douglas Dam was turned down by the House Appropriations Committee early in December in spite of a personal plea from the President, and the Senate Appropriations Committee declined to add it to a special TVA defense program.

Members of both groups said that in view of McKellar's decision, the appropriation probably would become law "within a few days."

Retreaded Tire Rationing Likely

the Western Hemisphere under terms of a bill passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House. The Senate Military Affairs Committee had reported there are now 700,000 tons of crude rubber in the United States, about sufficient for a year under normal conditions. Held to military and essential civilian requirements, the committee said, this supply might hold out for 30 months.

Before the Small Business Committee of the House, independent tire dealers yesterday recommended some type of Government aid to tide them over the rationing period and received support of their contention that tires already sold should be delivered.

Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), of North Carolina, informed that tires sold, paid for and held by dealers for customers when the rationing order went into effect, could not be delivered, said the committee should take up the matter with OPM.

The committee also received a complaint fromthe dealers, through their president, L. Claire Cargile, on the Office of Price Administration order requiring tires on "frozen" new cars be turned over to OPA. Cargile expressed himself as "shocked beyond expression" by this order which, he said, applied to approximately 132,000 new cars tied up by the rationing order.

The Government should buy up all new tires to prevent "bootlegging," J. Penfield Seiberling, president of the Seiberling Rubber Co., told the committee. He said dealers have a large part of their capital tied up in tires and so far have received no assistance or suggestions from the Government.

Under rationing regulations, Seiberling pointed out, it may be years before dealers can release money now tied up in tires.

Germany Gives Long-Interned Liner to Brazil

Santos, Brazil, Jan. 15 (AP).—The German consul today turned over to the Brazilian government the 16,000-ton German passenger liner Windhuk, which has been in refuge here since December 7, 1939.

Terms of the transfer were not disclosed immediately, but the general impression was that the German government had ceded the ship to the neutral Brazilian government as a gesture on the opening day of the Pan-American conference at Rio de Janeiro.

The ship will be part of the Lloyd-Brazilian Line, owned by the government.

Wenner-Gren Protests U. S. Blacklisting

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Jan. 15.—Axel Wenner-Gren, Swedish multimillionaire industrialist who has been blacklisted by the United States State Department, asked today that the Washington Government either make public the grounds for its decison or else "clear my name of what is a cruel and unfounded charge."

Wenner-Gren's name was included in a list of 1800 issued by the State Department last night, all of whom are considered by the United States authorities to be acting for the benefit of Axis powers or exporting goods deemed detrimental to United States defense. Their assets were frozen.

The industrialist, whose list of reported friendships ranges from the Duke of Windsor to Greta Garbo and Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, returned to Mexico City today from a trip to Vera Cruz. He said:

"I want to say simply and directly that a serious mistake has been made by the State Department and that I am confident that a public examination of the evidence on which the State Department acted in my case will quickly clarify the error. It will also reveal that I am, in fact, as I always have been, a friend of the United States and British governments and peoples."

London, Jan. 15.—More than 1,500,000 members of the National Allotments Societies of England and Wales were awaiting anxiously tonight the arrival of 100 tons of vegetable seeds from America.

The seeds, collected and shipped from the United States by the British War Relief Society, were the first of 150,000 packages to be sent to this country from America this year to relieve England's food problem.

no reports as to the whereabouts of survivors.

Fate of the stricken vessel also was uncertain.

In a report to Hampton Bays Police Chief John H. Sutter, Coast Guard officials of the Tiana Station said they had dispatched speedy boats to the position given them by their plane but that the boats, buffeted for hours by strong waves, had returned without survivors.

Sutter said that the guardsmen told him they had seen no sign of the crewmen and had been forced to return landward by the intense cold.

Net Closing on Axis Troops at Halfaya

Enemy Air Activity Is Increasing Farther to the West, Cairo Admits

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Jan. 15.—British imperial and allied troops have thrust forward to new positions in the siege of the Axis' last remaining "Tobruk"—the Egyptian-Libyan border region of Halfaya Pass.

The positions were won under cover of an aerial and artillery barrage, British general headquarters for the Middle East announced today.

For nearly two months, while the British offensive into Libya surged past them, German and Italian troops—estimated variously at 5000 or 10,000 strong—have clung to their entrenchments around Halfaya Pass which British imperials, with reason, like to call "Hellfire Pass."

Salum Already Taken

Originally the Axis' "Tobruk" covered the Halfaya-Bardia-Salum region but the Bardia-Salum resistance has been wiped out.

Today's communique said that with the R. A. F. hammering from the skies and with British, South African and Polish artillerymen pumping shells into the Halfaya positions, "our infantry moved forward to new positions which now are being consolidated in the face of enemy patrol and artillery activity."

Blown up by the Allied shells were an important enemy ammunition dump and a number of gun emplacements, the communique said.

Much Axis Air Activity

The GHQ communique acknowledged that the Allied columns along the Gulf of Sirte, 300 miles from the Halfaya region, had undergone Axis air attacks "on a considerable scale." Authoritative quarters held this was more a result of improved weather than an indication that heavy plane reinforcements had reached Libya.

The Allied offensive also was meeting strong resistance aground, especially in the coastal sector about Gasr El Brega, 40 miles southwest of Agebadia and on the road to El Agheila, 30 miles farther southwest along the Sirte coast. The main Axis army under Gen. Erwin Rommel for days has been maneuvering in this area.

Cooperating with the advanced land forces, the R. A. F. was said to have "carried out protective steps" for the offensive itself as well as attacking "enemy concentrations of mechanical transport in the rear."

Dies Sounds New Warning On Axis Agents

By the Associated Press

The House Committee on Un-American Activities began a new investigation of alleged Nazi and Fascist propaganda yesterday and Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, asserted that the Nation is "still not on the alert against those foes that are within our borders."

The committee summoned dozens of witnesses, whom it declined to identify, for statements about activities of the National Workers' League of Detroit, which Dies previously had identified as the "fountainhead" of Nazi, Fascist and religious hatred propaganda.

At the start of the hearing, which was behind closed doors, the Texan said the league was a council of representatives of many other organizations and had operated secretly, apparently with ample finances.

In a speech in the House later, Dies simply announced that hearings had started on "these pro-Nazi organizations which constitute a dangerous Fifth Column in our midst."

A preliminary examination of seized files and documents, he said, indicated that the nation had been flooded with "a literature of hatred" which was inspired by Nazi theories and constituted a "brutal assault" on racial and religious tolerance.

One of the witnesses awaiting the committee's pleasure was identified as Bessie Burchett, a former Philadelphia school teacher, whose anti-Red crusades there have won her the sobriquet of "Two-gun Bessie."

During his speech, Dies charged that persons with Red leanings were employed by the Office of Price Administration and that Leon Henderson was once associated with technocracy, "one of the craziest economic propositions that ever was hatched in a crackpot's brain."

Henderson later denied he ever served on the original technocracy committee, explaining that he joined a later group in studying technological employment.

Other charges by Dies were:

That the Civil Service Commission had recommended dismissal of "Robert A. Brady and Mildred Edie Brady" who, he said, were among OPA workers with "Communist views and connections."

That the OPA senior business specialist was Harold Loeb, who wrote books "which veered emphatically to the crackpot side."

That Malcolm Cowley, who for ten years "was one of the most ardent Communist intellectuals in this country," had been employed as chief information analyst in the Office of Facts and Figures.

First American Prisoners Of War Arrive in Japan

Berlin, Jan 13 (Radiocast Recorded by U. P., London).—The first American war prisoners, comprising 432 from Guam and 10 from an unnamed island in the Gilbert Archipelago between Hawaii and Australia, have arrived in Japan for internment in camps near the inland sea coast of Shikoku Island, the D. N. B. news agency reported from Tokyo today.

Among them, it said, was Capt. George J. McMillan, U. S. N., governor of Guam.

The ten Americans from the Gilbert Archipelago island were the staff of a radio station (presumably operated by Pan American Airways) which was occupied in a surprise attack.

The announcement said camps would be set up for the prisoners at Zentsuji, Tadotsu, on Shikoku Island, separated from the main Japanese island by the inland sea. The plan was a reversal of the original decision to have prisoners kept exclusively in the areas where they were captured.

A representative of the camp commander was quoted as saying Japan would "treat the war prisoners in a decent way in accordance with the dignity of a great nation."

They need not fear, he added, "any measures in reprisal for the inhuman attitude of their countrymen who sank a Japanese hospital ship in the South China Seas."

(The name Zentsuji suggests that the place is a Buddhist temple. Tadotsu, on the inland sea coast of Shikoku about 20 miles from Takamatsu City, is connected by steamer with Kobe, about 88 miles to the east.)

Fishermen Strike, Boston Market Idle

Boston, Jan. 15 (AP).—Boston's giant fish market virtually went out of operation today when the last of 40 trawlers came into this port, where a tie-up of the fleet has left 1000 fishermen and 2100 shore workers idle.

The ship standstill started several days ago when crews refused to put out unless owners provided them with $5000 war-risk insurance and bonuses.

Sidelights on the War

Nazis Have 'All to Win, More Than All to Lose'—Goebbels

Berlin, Jan. 15 (Official Broadcast Recorded by (AP).—"If we win, we have won everything, if we lose, we lose more than all," German Propaganda Minister Goebbels told a meeting of German political and cultural leaders in Hamburg today.

Again Goebbels referred to the "dumb stubborness" of the Russian armies as proof of "the magnitude of the danger which has been hanging over us," but again he expressed confidence that ultimate German victory was certain.

List Reappears

Istanbul, Jan. 15 (AP).—An informed Axis source just returned from Greece told friends today that Field Marshal Siegmund Wilhelm List, German conqueror of the Balkans, reappeared at Salonika recently after an absence during which he underwent an operation for appendicitis.

List's absence had stirred rumors that he had disappeared and that his friends were concerned for his safety.

This source said he had seen the field marshal as recently as ten days ago in Salonika, where he again took over command of German forces in the south.

Pope's Provender

Vatican City, Jan. 15—(Andi Agency to Associated Press.)—Four large truckloads of food and other supplies presented to Pope Pius XII by a group of New Yorkers will start for Vatican City from Lisbon some time next week, it was announced today.

The shipment includes canned goods, coffee, soap, cloth and other materials that are scarce here. The goods were given to the Pope when a purchasing commission under Enrico Gazeali, a Vatican official, visited the United States last November.

Malayan Mines Flooded

Singapore, Jan. 15 (AP).—Malaya's only large gold-producing property, the Raub Australian gold mine in Pahang State, has been flooded and rendered unworkable.

A coal mine at Matu Arang, Selangor State, operated by Malayan Collieries, Ltd., also was flooded before the arrival of the Japanese.

Jap March Contest

Tokyo, Jan. 15 (Official broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.)—Twenty-five thousand entries have been submitted in a contest started by the newspaper Nichi Nichi and the war ministry immediately after the outbreak of the Pacific war for the words of an "East Asia March."

When the winner has been chosen it will be put to music by the Tokyo naval band.

Laval Back in Paris

Berlin, Jan. 15.—(Official broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.)—Pierre Laval, one-time premier of France, has returned from his country home at Chateldon, near Vichy, to Paris and already has received numerous visitors, according to a German dispatch from Paris.

(The return to Paris of Laval, strong advocate of French collaboration with Germany and Marshal Petain's chief aide until he was ousted from the Vichy regime in December, 1940, may herald important developments in French-German relations.)

U. S. Diplomats In Reich Pass Time in Study

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 15.—American diplomats and newspapermen caught in Germany by the war have started their own "university" at Bad Nauheim, near Frankfurt, to pass the time while awaiting exchange.

The correspondent of the Bern newspaper Der Bund said in a dispatch today from Berlin that the Americans had arranged lectures and recitals.

There are courses in German, Spanish and French as well as other subjects. Louis P. Lochner, who was chief of the Associated Press bureau in Berlin, is lecturing on the United States Constitution.

After breakfast the Americans usually have some physical exercise and in the afternoon have an hour in which they may walk along Nauheim's fashionable street while natives look on with curiosity. There is also considerable chess and card playing.

The Americans all are quartered in the Hotel Jeschke which had been closed for some time. Extensive repairs had to be made.

While this was being done the entire party slept in railway cars in the station.

An official of the German foreign office is in charge. A representative of the Swiss government, which has charge of American interests in Germany, also is looking out for the well-being of the Americans.

Book Drive For 'Buddies' Totals 3261

The "Books for Buddies" campaign had 3261 books to its credit yesterday toward its goal of 100,000.

Persons interested in giving books in this drive to get reading matter for men in the armed forces should take them to one of the public library branches, to one of the District Grocery Stores, Inc., to the George Washington University library or to a Catholic parochial school, Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, chairman of the campaign, said.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., president of the Junior League of Washington, issued a statement yesterday urging members to contribute.

They should take books to Junior League Clubrooms, 2001 Massachusetts Avenue, whence they will be delivered to a collection center.

Vichy Counts On Allies to Win, Deat Says

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Jan. 15.—Continuing his press campaign against the Petain government, Marcel Deat wrote today in an editorial in L'Oeuvre, leading Paris collaborationist newspaper, that Vichy "hopes for and counts on Anglo-Saxon victory."

"The government is playing a comedy. There are outward gestures which fail to conform to innermost intentions. It may be officially collaborationist, but it remains understood that its real hopes are of another sort," the Rightist editor declared.

"It salutes the occupying power (Germany) politely, but it hopes for and counts on Anglo-Saxon victory."

In his article, under a caption, "The Ache Comes from the Head," Deat wrote: "The high administration at present is rotten with De-Gaullism and fermenting with virtual treason. The only thing lacking is the opportunity to start action."

He declared that the hardiest opponents of collaboration at Vichy, "underhandedly encouraged in high places, systematically propagate Anglomania and Americanophile watchwords."

Yugoslavian, Greek Kings Form Union

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 15.—The exiled monarchs George of Greece and Peter of Yugoslavia took the first step today toward the formation of a post-war Balkan union by pledging to unite their countries, when liberated, in defense, foreign policy and foreign trade.

They signed the agreement in the presence of Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary. Thus, it was the first concrete indication that Britain is supporting a reorganized Europe on the basis of small groups of Federated states divided according to geographic and economic necessities.

The document—described in authoritative quarters as a "constitutional pact"—was designed as the foundation of a political, military and economic Balkan federation. The Czechs and Poles already have an agreement, signed last year, preparing central Europe for similar postwar cooperation. Other geographical units are understood to be under consideration.

The Yugoslavia-Grecian preamble stated that the two monarchs had so acted "considering that in order to assure independence and peace for the Balkan states the fundamental principle of their policy must be the principle of the Balkans for the Balkan peoples."

The past, it was added, had "demonstrated that the lack of closer understanding between the Balkan peoples has been exploited by powers of aggression in their aim at political and military penetration and domination in the peninsula"

Men of St. Pierre, Miquelon Join Free French Navy

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Jan. 15.—Following the plebiscite taken on Admiral Muselier's orders in St. Pierre and Miquelon late in December, 200 men out of a total population of about 5000 have enlisted for service in the Free French navy, according to a reliable source here tonight. Seven former officers also enlisted for service under Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

These enlistments are additional to those who have taken service in the Free French mercantile marine and men of the army who enlisted before the plebiscite was taken.

Red Spearhead Pushed 175 Miles Westof Moscow

and men were reported killed by a Soviet unit which slipped through German lines and waylaid the retreating Nazis.

The recapture of Selizharovo represented the deepest Russian wedge yet driven into the Nazi Central Front defenses since the counter-offensive began early last month.

The town is a junction on a road leading westward 110 miles to Velikie Luki, and to the Latvian border, 90 miles farther. A sweep along this road would result in the outflanking of Smolensk.

New Successes in South

In the south new Red successes also were reported.

Russia dispatches said last night that Marshal Semon Timoshenko's southern armies had pierced a ring of German forts outside the big Ukraine industrial city of Kharkov, once Russia's Pittsburgh, and had landed troops west of Taganrog on the Sea of Azov.

These attempts to hurl the Nazis westward into less defensible terrain coincided with continued Russian landings in the eastern Crimea, and new gains on the Moscow front where Red troops narrowed the avenue of escape left to 100,000 Nazis based at Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow.

A day ago the Russians were reported only 12 miles from Kharkov, and the German high command acknowledged bitter defense fighting there and at Taganrog. In each case the Nazis reported repulsing the Russians.

The Germans fell back to Taganrog at the end of November after being hurled out of Rostov, 40 miles to the east. The Russian units which now have landed west of Taganrog apparently crossed the Sea of Azov from the Crimea or were loaded into ships at Rostov itself.

Crimean Gains Indicated

Several days ago the Germans asserted they were "throwing the Russians out of the Crimea," both at Feodosiya and in the west at Yevpatoriya, 40 miles north of Sevastopol. But the Russians were believed here to be making steady inroads from both sides of the peninsula in an effort to cut the Perekop Isthmus and trap the Germans and their Rumanian allies.

From Taganrog on the mainland the German defense line extends northward through Stalino, Kharkov, and Kursk to Orel.

Red units have been attacking Orel from three sides for several days while other detachments have by-passed it to drive on toward Bryansk. Kaluga and Maloyaroslavets on the central sector of the German line already have fallen, and the Russians are beyond Medyn which is 35 miles southwest of Mozhaisk.

Other Red units are operating still farther west in the Kirov and Lyudinovo sectors north of Bryansk, and Soviet ski troops cutting southward between Rzhev and Volokolamsk are trying to make a junction with these units across the Mozhaisk-Vyazma-Smolensk road.

Russian accounts of the capture of Medyn said the "German flight was so hurried that a staff of an infantry division headquarters had no time to take important documents with them."

Hundreds of Nazi bodies littered the streets of the town which the Russians said the Germans fired before retreating. Despite this demolition the Soviets said they captured much equipment, including tanks, trucks and guns.

RAF Bombs Leave Big Shipyard Afire at Hamburg

London, Jan. 15 (AP).—The big Bloehm & Voss shipyards at Hamburg which turn out submarines and other craft for the German navy were bombed heavily and methodically last night in an RAF raid which left the yards and docks ablaze, the air ministry news service reported tonight.

Returning fliers said fires started by their bombs flared up with "explosive violence" and could be seen for 20 minutes after the British planes turned toward their bases.

The news service also reported that a drydock and two floating docks and a destroyer and submarine in them were damaged in an attack on Hamburg last October.

ON THE WAY TO STARDOM—we hope, we hope, are Consolo and Melba, now dancing at the Shoreham. Senator "Happy" Chandler presented them to "Oley" Johnson, original "Helzapoppin'" luminary, the other eve, and it looks as though Consolo and Melba will be spotted in a new Olsen and Johnson musical show. The meeting nearly slipped up because Senator Chandler and Olsen lingered so long in the Mayflower Lounge with Mayor La Guardia. But they all finally got together in a confab that may make some theatrical history . . . Speaking of "Helzapoppin'," the Casino Royal stars took double honors in the Wednesday matinee gift-giving. Emcee Bob Preble drew a bottle of firewater and "Jivin Jack" Schaffer received a wash tub.

Don Carper and his Five have had their engagement extended indefinitely at the Cafe Caprice. It's a fine and proper reward for the rollicking rhythm they've been spreading around Capice since last fall.

The Balalaika's Yourloff and Yoder not only dance with Slavic fire and finesse, but their costumes of burgundy and pearl color harmonize perfectly with the stage setting . . . The "Radium Dance" of Lotus' "Broadway Revue of 1942" merits the word spectacular with the big chorus blending in a rainbow of fluorescent color

Strauss waltzes, including "Tales of the Vienna Woods," "Blue Danube" and "Artists' Life," are the subjects of the new murals in Restaurant "823," with another large panel representing "The Spirit of America."

FOR THAT HAPPY WEEK-END. The Nightingale and Jack Maggio's Band are all primed for the Friday and Saturday crowds. Fresh musical novelties and parking room for hundreds of cars . . . At the Log Tavern, just a short drive into Virginia, you'll find Garry Black's Band "giving out" the newest 1942 tunes . . . And Kavakos' Grill, right over northeast, is putting on Friday and Saturday floor shows with plenty of trimmings. Dance music by Louis' Band.

APPETIZERS A LA MODE. The hickory smoked cheese cubes at the Restaurant "400." They taste like more . . . The zestful hors d'ouevre at the Copocabana. Every plate is a work of art . . . And the clam chowder at Olmsted's certainly whets your appetite for the following steak or seafood.

THIS TAG was on one of the mailbags full of franked speches hustled away by Prescott Dennett when he was summoned by the special grand jury on Axis agents last September. Rent Chief Not Interested In Deadbeats

Persons who fail or refuse to pay rent to which a landlord is entitled may expect no redress from his office, Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell warned last night.

During the past several days, he reported, tenants threatened with eviction for failure to pay rent have appealed for help. In each case, Cogswell said he informed the complainants he had no jurisdiction.

In addition, he also warned landlords who refuse to accept rentals authorized by law that they face prosecution in District courts.

Following through on this statement, Cogswell yesterday was instrumental in obtaining a warrant against a rooming house proprietor who had evicted a 70-year-old woman from his premises—after boosting her rent.

Serving of the warrant, however, was held up after the landlord agreed to reinstate the roomer's original status with no rent increase.

Hill, Aide to Rep. Fish, Convicted on 2 Counts of Perjury

as an important cog in the Nazi propaganda machine in this country. Pointing to the evidence that Hill bought 621,000 copies of anti-interventionist material and turned tons of it over to Dennett to be mailed postage free under Congressional frank, Maloney said Hill got the money for this from Viereck, who is an admitted Nazi agent.

The special grand jury on Axis agents which indicted Hill also accused Viereck of violating the Foreign Agent Registration Act by concealing his Capitol Hill propaganda activities. A secretary of the late Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, appeared as a witness against Hill and testified that Viereck's activities included writing two speeches which Mr. Lundeen delivered on the floor of the Senate.

Hill was charged with contacting Viereck through Mr. Lundeen's office. When Viereck was asked about these things on the witness stand he refused to answer, claiming the replies would incriminate him.

The 12 men who heard Government witnesses for five days reached their "guilty" verdict on their first ballot, several of their number said. However, the jury discussed the case for a while "exploring the possibility that a reasonable doubt might be found." The deliberations, including time out for lunch, took 1 hour and 33 minutes.

The jury foreman was David J. Guy, of 5519 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. After he announced the verdict, former Representative John O'Connor, who appared for Hill, demanded that the jurors be polled.

While Hill stood flushed, but silent, the roll was called and each man responded twice with the word "guilty," once for each count of the indictment.

O'Connor then asked that Hill be allowed to go free on his $5000 bond until a motion for a new trial could be heard.

"That motion must be overruled," the court replied.

"But your honor," O'Connor protested, "this is an unusual case. It is hardly likely that Mr. Hill will repeat this crime. This is not an ordinary case . . ."

Whisked to Cell Block

"In this court," Justice Letts commented gently, "all defendants look alike. The defendant will be committed."

United States deputy marshals promptly whisked Hill out of the courtroom to the court cell block, where he was kept until late yesterday. Last night he was at the District Jail. Attendants said he was "taking it all with a smile."

Walter L. Reynolds, another secretary to Hill's boss, Fish, yesterday afternoon issued a statement which he said the Congressman left with him before going to New York.

Said the statement:

"I am very sorry to learn that George Hill, a disabled, decorated veteran of the World War and a clerk in my office, has been convicted of perjury on two counts, neither of which—if he had admitted the charges—constituted a violation of law, nor did either of the charges impugn his loyalty or patriotism.

"Mr. Hill is of English ancestry, his mother and father having been born in England, and had no use for the Nazis. As a disabled combat veteran he had an obsession against our involvement in the war before we were attacked in Pearl Harbor."

Drafted in World War

Hill was drafted in the World War, was gassed in France and received the decoration of the Military Order of the Purple Heart, which was first conferred by Gen. Washington.

Shortly after the war Hill went to work for Fish and has been 21 years in his employ. The prosecutors said that when grand jurors asked Hill how he could be such a free spender on his $2000-a-year salary, Hill admitted he had received $12,000 in the previous few months but would not tell whom he got it from or what he did with it.

Fish told The Post after Hill was indicted that he knew the source of this money, but would not reveal it. He issued a statement that the "insinuation that any of this money came from subversive sources . . . is utterly ridiculous and preposterous."

When Viereck was asked twice on the witness stand whether he ever paid Hill any money, the German agent refused to reply, claiming the answer might incriminate him. Viereck refused also to say whether he knew Hill or Fish, on the same ground.

After The Post exposed the part played by Fish's office in spiriting the bags away from the Dennett mailing center, Fish denounced the report as "false" and "scurrilous" and said it was part of a plot to smear him. Fish referred to Hill as "my secretary" numerous times in his two violent speeches in the House and in several statements to the newspapers.

After Hill was indicted, Fish professed confidence in his integrity, said he was "100 per cent" behind him and would back him to the limit. However, Fish then said Hill was a "clerk in my office, not my secretary."

Former Congressman John O'Connor, who was vice chairman of an antiforeign war committee Fish set up shortly before his trip to Germany in 1939, appeared for Hill the day that he was indicted. "I am here to plead Congressman Fish not guilty," said O'Connor.

Soon he was appearing directly for Fish, trying to persuade the House that it ought to save Fish from being a witness before the grand jury that indicted his secretary.

As Hill's trial drew near, O'Connor said he would produce "scores" of defense witnesses. But when the Government's case was in, O'Connor suddenly announced that there would be no defense and not a witness took the stand for the "disabled, decorated veteran of the World War."

Not even Fish.

Fast Train Hurls Man 25 Feet in Air; He Walks Away

Decatur, Ill., Jan. 15 (INS).—The distinction of being the only person ever struck by a streamliner traveling 90 miles per hour and walking away from the scene was claimed tonight by John Walters, 20.

Walters' cattle truck was hit by the Illinois Central's Green Diamond at a grade crossing northwest of Decatur.

The cab of the truck, with Walters in it, was thrown 25 feet in the air.

The four hourses he was transporting were killed.

But John walked away from the debris with only minor injuries, commented:

"I felt like I was floating."

Parley Called On Expanded Health Budget

The Commissioners and their health and budget officers will meet at 10 a. m. today for discussions of the supplemental budget estimate of $712,001 submitted by the Health Department yesterday.

For immediate expansion of public health services—principally through addition of new personnel—Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, asked the city heads to obtain before the end of the current fiscal year a sum of $412,085 from yesterday's deficiency requests.

The total new money requested by Dr. Ruhland is over and above the $3,196,427 included in the municipal budget estimates sent to Congress more than a week ago.

Ruhland Answers Challenge

Health Department requests for additional funds followed recent Congressional hearings at which Dr. Ruhland was urged to "get out and fight for what you want."

"This is my answer to that challenge," said Dr. Ruhland yesterday.

His supplemental requests included items excluded from his earlier budget either by the Commissioners or Congress.

In asking for additional funds, the health chief included:

A medical officer for the Southwest Health Center.

Four dentists and four dental hygienists for the public school dental service.

One hundred public health nurses, ten supervisors and one assistant director for the department's nursing bureau.

9 Medical Inspectors Asked

Nine medical inspectors for the Bureau of Preventable Diseases.

Two physicians for the Tuberculosis Clinic.

Seven physicians for the Venereal Disease Clinic.

Twenty food inspectors.

A public engineer to be in charge of the Bureau of Sanitary Inspection and 22 inspectors for water, housing and rodent control work.

New equipment to cost a total of $134,440 for the Glenn Dale (Md.) Sanatorium.

Goldsborough To Preside at Viereck Trial

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, who assigns criminal cases in the District Court, yesterday assigned himself to the most sensational German propaganda trial on the docket—that of the admitted Nazi agent, George Sylvester Viereck.

Viereck's lawyers made three efforts in open court last fall to maneuver the case before Goldsborough, but were thwarted until the justice acted on his own initiative.

Brushing aside the agreement of defense and Government counsel to start the trial on February 2, Goldsborough set the date for next Wednesday.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., said they told the justice they could not possibly get ready in five days. They said the justice replied that they would have to, explaining that he wanted to try an antitrust matter on February 6.

Suggests Another Judge

The prosecutors suggested that another judge could hear the Viereck trial, which has been scheduled for Justice F. Dickinson Letts. They said Goldsborough told them:

"I am going to try the case myself. Get that through your head."

Maloney and Hickey are due to be with the special grand jury on Axis agents Monday. They have been busy for weeks on the Hill perjury case, which ended yesterday. Goldsborough sent for them while the Hill case was going on. When they went to his chambers yesterday they found that the defendent, Viereck, was not represented.

The prosecutors said that at first Goldsborough insisted that they start the Viereck case on three days' notice—next Monday—and declared that unless they were ready he would dismiss the indictment.

"Have to Be Ready"

Hickey said all the Government's plans were based on the February 2 date previously agreed upon and that he feared the prosecution of the admitted Nazi agent would be hampered if the Government were forced to trial with its preparations hasty and incomplete.

Emil Morosini, jr., of Viereck's counsel, told The Post, "it was our understanding that the trial would be February 2, and we have made our plans accordingly. I was shocked when the judge's secretary telephoned me and said we must be ready by Wednesday. We shall do our best. I suppose we can be ready if we have to be."

Justice Goldsborough told The Post counsel would "have to be ready," commenting that he could conceive of no reason for postponing the trial.

Pogue Named CAB Chairman

L. Welch Pogue was appointed chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Pogue succeeds Harllee Branch, who will continue as a member of the board. The appointment was made immediately after Pogue had been sworn in as a board member to fill the vacancy left by expiration of the term of G. Grant Mason, jr.

A native of Grant, Iowa, Pogue has been serving as general counsel of the Civil Aeronautics Authority since 1939.

'How Green Was My Valley' Brings Classic to Palace

Twentieth Century Picturization of Novel Is a Great Work Interpreted by Superb Cast; Varied Supplementaries Augment Rich Bill

"HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY" is a picture no judicious theatergoer will permit himself to miss. Once seen, it will lodge itself hauntingly and tenaciously in memory among the few film classics that deserve to be remembered as great.

The conventional mold of romantic, emotional, melodramatic drama has been cast away in fashioning this superb screen version of Richard Llewellyn's absorbing novel. In adapting the work to the uses of the camera, Scenarist Philip Dunne captured the essence of the book, and, like its author, was content to record a segment of homely and simple life, rather than the artificialities and extravagances of a sterotyped and hackneyed "plot." Thus, while it does embody some hint of the grand passion, "How Green Was My Valley" is not dedicated to an insistent and dominant "love story;" somber in many of its moods, it still is not a tragedy; occasionally humorous, by no stretch of the imagination can it be charged with a definite pattern of deliberate comedy. Combining all of these usual elements of drama, as they are etched by life in terms of common experience, the screen play reflects the dignity and the majesty of mankind immersed in the gay, grim and gripping realities of human existence. It is stanch in its virtues, deep in its affections, tender in its sympathies and rich in the grandeur of the commonplace.

The narrative is unfolded as the living interpretation of the memories of a lad who has attained manhood in the little Welsh coal mining valley in which the scene of the play is laid. His commentary on the passing of events from early youth through the years encompassed by the action of the play forms the basis of the scenes that are disclosed upon the screen. It begins when the valley was green and beautiful and ends after the march of industry has smudged its pristine verdure, just as age always holds the power to dim the visions of imaginative childhood. With this passage of the years come industrial turmoil to the valley—wage cuts, strikes, bickerings and violence—the disruption of the Morgan home, unrequited loves, unhappy marriages, the tribulations of early school days, deaths in the collieries, dissension in the church and all that makes up the grueling average of life—but all suffused with the lad's glorious memory of "How Green Was My Valley, then, and the valley of them that have gone." It is something that lives in the heart, unforgettable.

Marked by Distinguished Performances

In a long cast that permits no flaw to mar the fulfillment of either scene or character, there are still portrayals that rise slightly above all the others. These are contributed by Walter Pidgeon, in his finely human assumption of the role of the village minister; Donald Crisp and Sara Allgood, as the admirable elder Morgans; Maureen O'Hara, as the unhappy Angharad, in love with the pastor, but married to the "best catch" in the community; John Loder, Ianto, the eldest son, and, above all, by Master Roddy McDowell, the youngest son, whose mental pictures supply the substance of the drama. Of the scrupulously chosen adults in principal roles such a concert of superlative acting is to be expected, but by his wistfulness, the expressiveness of his great brown eyes and his instinctive sense of drama, frail little Roddy McDowell takes his first firm grasp upon preeminence among all of Hollywood's most gifted juveniles. In less conspicuous roles, but still vital to the rounded perfection of the picture, Barry Fitzgerald, Patric Knowles, Arthur Shields, Rhys Williams, Evan S. Evans and Eve March magnify the importance of their assignments by the skill of their work. And throughout the action, the richly blended voices of the Welsh Singers lend the movement of events a musical background that is one of the film's most precious assets. Its most precious, perhaps, is John Ford's incomparable direction.

Despite the 2-hour length of the feature, the new Palace bill manages to find place for a considerable group of diverting auxiliaries. Of most immediate concern is the OEM film, "Women in Defense," with commentary by Mrs. Roosevelt, delivered by Katharine Hepburn. In more flippant mood is Pete Smith's "How to Hold a Husband," which should have the word "Not" as the second in its title, and the Hugh Harman color cartoon, "The Field Mouse." The newsreel is the final supplementary of a feature that is entitled to be rated by all the stars in the firmament or on any typewriter keyboard.

Memorable in Masterful Film

MAUREEN O'HARA AND RODDY McDOWELL as they appear in the poignant roles of Angharad and Huw, in the Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Richard Llewellyn's novel of "How Green Was My Valley," now being presented on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Walter Pidgeon is costarred with Miss O'Hara, and an incomparable cast offers flawless support in this unforgettable drama of life in a Welsh mining village

Now It Seems That Dr. Kildare Has Gotten Himself a Protege

By Richard L. Coe

Those busybodies of Blair General Hospital are mixing it up with the stuffed-shirts on its board of trustees at the Capitol Theater these days. Again. Still. Yet. Only new wrinkle we observed is that Dr. Kildare has gotten himself a protege, is acting exactly like Dr. Gillespie, who, in turn, is now behaving with all the cordiality of the Grand Llama of Tibet. Oh, yes, as its part in the Defense Program, no doubt, this latest in the Drs. Kildare-Gillespie series is titled "Dr. Kildare's Victory." Young as it is, 1942 will have to stoop some to get any lower than this one in the abyss of fatuity.

Of course, there's no use trying to act like George Bernard Shaw and John Mason Brown rolled i o one for a joint blitz on this accepted tradition of American movie-going. The gruff oldster and his puzzled protege are likely to pop up on any double bill and be received with open arms by people who have gotten used to their tiresome crochets. Up to now we've been feeling pretty brotherly about Kildare and the nasty snares people insist on dropping in his path, but since he's grown up and gotten himself someone to influence, we just can't keep up. Why, it doesn't seem anytime at all that he was a struggling young intern and here he is acting like grandfather and making Dr. Gillespie seem like someone from an Egytian tomb. Donald Winthrop is the new young man's name, played by Robert Sterling and we've no doubt at all that pretty soon he'll be influencing somebody and maybe breaking out in a series of his own. Yes, it's all much too much for simple us.

As is their way, just about everything seems to happen to Kildare and Gillespie. Their main problem this trip lies in a question of clinical boundary lines. If Suzy Q. is floored by falling glass in Sixth Street, which hospital picks her up, the one with an ambulance on the spot or the one in whose territory she lies? Recent tragedy in actual life upholds the fact that such blunders of red tape can occur, but its handling is utterly botched in the plethora of events that weigh down "Dr. Kildare's Victory."

Ann Ayars, as a society girl with a heart of gold, makes a charming, not to say gorgeous figure in her first appearance, while also new to the series is boyish Robert Sterling. There are all sorts of devious operating room explanations which make your medical friends shake with rage whenever you bring up Dr. Kildare's career in polite conversation. The Messrs. Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres, are, of course, well broken in as Gillespie and Kildare. Completely broken in on his first assignment at such a stint is Director W. S. Van Dyke 2d.

A more notable screen venture at the Capitol this week is the OEM short, "Women in Defense," which was written by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and is narrated by Katharine Hepburn. This is an excellent, straight-forward exposition and an audience which didn't deign to lift an approving paw at the conclusion of the Kildare exploits, yesterday gave it a round of sincere applause.

The Capitol's stage presents "The A-B-C-D Revue," a salute with appropriate performers and settings to the anti-Axis nations. Paul Draper headlines with his remarkable tap-ballet technique that sounds highbrow yet never fails to interest a variegated audience. John Hoysradt, partly British, represents the Empire with caricatures that are most appreciated when mocking the American football fan. Hoo She, a Chinese belle who is not too shy, is a novel songstress, presenting other of her countrymen, the Jim Wong tumblers. Lynn Allison sings of "Gretchen" with a Dutch background and the four nationalities join hands for a "V for Victory" finale.

Art Brown organizes "The White Cliffs" with the Vox Humana and Tremolo all the way out, and Sam Jack Kauffman leads his men through their quarter-annual dose of "Poet and Peasant."

And a Very Good Judge Was He!

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 15.—David Selznick is patting himself on the back for his good judgment. The two actresses under contract to him have both received acting awards—Joan Fontaine from the New York critics, and Ingrid Bergman from Look . . . By the way, has anyone thought of Fredric March for the priest in "Keys of the Kingdom?"

INGRID BERGMAN

Mainboucher, famous French designer, arrived to visit his mother for a couple of days. She's living in Laguna Beach. Then he's on his way to San Francisco to design the clothes for Katharine Cornell's new play.

Donald Oenslager, famous New York stage designer, also is here painting scenery and doing sets for the play which opens in San Francisco on January 19. I found Donald lunching at Lucy's the other day with Kate Lawson, who always worked with him in New York. But she's now busy decorating David Selznick's offices at United Artists, which formerly belonged to Sam Goldwyn.

Understand many more changes are to be made at Metro among the producing staff. Rumor is that "Panama Hattie" will be entirely redone. Rather a costly venture.

Metro's having quite a time getting background shots and opening scenes of quaint old Monterey, because on either side of a gorgeous old home you're liable to find a drugstore or service station. The idea for the opening is to have a sea gull fly out over the bay, onto the steeple of the old church, look down into the church, see a woman praying, then fly out over the harbor to where the set is built. But while we train most everything here, we've overlooked the Monterey gulls, which are so fat from the fish up there that the Hollywood bait doesn't seem to intrigue them.

Samuel Goldwyn was the smart lad who bought "The Washington Angle," an original by Leonard Q. Ross and Leonard Spiegelgass, eight hours after it was on the market. Paid $30,000 for it.

Arline Judge is sending her younger son, Dan Topping, jr., back East with her mother to visit his father. What that will do to the reported troubled waters of the Sonja Henie-Topping menage remains to be seen.

Coming out from a projection room after seeing "Captains of the Clouds," an exec was saying, "Brenda Marshall's not only a beautiful girl—she's intelligent and cultured as well." Whereupon Jimmy Durante exclaimed, "Yes, she is! She's the most gawjuss thing I ever seen in TECHNICULTURE!"

Well, blow me down! Ann Rutherford's vacationing in the steam caves at Arrowhead. For a gal with her figger, that's sheer affectation!

Bob Stack may be ace high with his picture fans, but he's slipping fast with the folks in his neighborhood. Some bright soul gave him a clarinet for Christmas, and he uses it! . . . Martha O'Driscoll threw a housewarming for her new Toluca Lake home other night, with guests bringing own chairs. That's one way to get your house furnished.

The Joe E. Browns, bound for a camp near Ontario with Linda Darnell and Ann Miller in their car, got hopelessly lost and missed out on their engagement, but they stumbled accidentally on another camp, so they just piled out and gave them the works. The boys hadn't seen a show in 15 months, and maybe you don't think it was a hit!

Maxie Rosenbloom saw a sign in a local market which reads: "We are American Japs—don't get us mixed with those other saps!"

Letter of the Law!

New York, Jan. 15.

The first book about the Japanese war has been written by Prof. Blake Clark, of the University of Hawaii, and Will Williams, a Hawaiian newspaperman. It will be called "Remember Pearl Harbor," and Modern Age will publish it . . . In it the authors will tell of the civilian who was flying his own plane near Diamond Head when the Japs arrived. "Practical jokers," he thought when he saw the foreign insignias. When bullets streaked toward him he screamed, "Hey, fellas, this isn't the target plane." Then he saw the face of a Jap flyer—and immediately dived to a vacant spot between the mountains, thereby saving his life . . . The next day the officials barred him from the Civilian Flying Corps—for failing to report his emergency landing.

CLARK GABLE

Prof. Maurice Wormser, of New York Law Journal fame, is expected to handle Lepke's appeal . . . Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy is headed for new posts of more importance . . . Clark Gable has arrived in New York, alone . . . A high Government official stated unequivocally that Stalin isn't coming to Washington, as was reported. "In the first place, overseeing the Russian campaign is a one-man affair," he declared, "and, secondly, a dictator never leaves his country" . . . Joe Frisco, the comic, is working again, at last. But he's requested his night club employer not to advertise it. "No publicity on that, please," said Joe. "I owe money to too many people."

Lord Beaverbrook stayed at the Waldorf-Astoria Towers during his recent visit to New York. When he departed, last weekend, he stopped in the lobby, and turned confusedly to the manager, who was escorting him to a side exit . . . "Is this the way I came in?" asked Beaverbrook . . . "Yes," said the manager . . . "Well, it looks different," said Beaverbrook. "I'm looking for an old friend of mine, who was here when I came in. I want to say good-by to him—there he is" . . . Beaverbrook darted through the door and made his farewells with Pat Grady, who's been the Waldorf doorman for 45 years.

The film rights to the entire Jack London library have been sold to Sam Bronston, the producer who just arrived here with the Columbia print of the first London story, "Martinique." Bronston will produce two Jack London stories a year—in preparation for the reopening of the movie market in Russia, where London still is revered . . . Maxie Rosenbloom wants to start training again, for a charity bout with Joe Louis . . . When Justice William O. Douglas becomes head of the new war program setup his aide will be Mr. Justice Black . . . This column's newest paper is the South Bend Tribune.

Robert Capa, the Life photographer, has covered all the war fronts except the Russian. He now is trying to arrange a trip to Moscow to record the war scenes in the Soviet Union . . . Ernest Hemingway, who once described Capa as the best photographer in the world, has helped finance the cameraman's recent trips . . . "I put up $100 to get him to Spain, and $200 to get him to China," said Hemingway. "Now I'll have to put up $400 to help get him to Russia—which means I'll have to put up $800 to get him back."

The Foreign Students Club at Cornell University includes among its members the son of Chinese Ambassador Hu Shih. The president of that club is a Japanese, who came to America when he was 2 years old. The members all vouch for their president's loyalty . . . Bill Hardy's Gay 90's Revue, broadcasting over C. B. S., is the only night club show ever to be sponsored on a radio. Hardy keeps none of the radio salary for himself, but distributes it all among his actors . . . When the owner of a Washington parking lot tried to charge Leon Henderson $2 for parking his car the price administrator tendered his card, and challenged, "Send me the bill."

When Joe Louis appeared at Army headquarters for his induction an alert publicist had a Navy recruiting poster placed behind the heavyweight champ at the moment when he was being photographed by the news cameramen . . . The Navy Relief Fund show will be held at Madison Square Garden March 10 . . . On the night "Lady Comes Across" closed, after two days, Tommy Manville went to see this Joe E. Lewis-Mischa Auer musical. The chorus line and show girls asked him if he'd finance the continuance of the show. "I would," said Manville, "if I were married to Joe Lewis"

Partial Text of Welles' Address to the Delegates at Rio

Urges Solid Front Against Tripartite Powers of Axis

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 15.—Following is the partial text of an address by Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State of the United States, at the meeting of foreign ministers of the American republics:

SUMNER WELLES

The peoples of the Americas face today the greatest danger which they have ever confronted since they won their independence.

We are meeting together under the terms, and in the spirit, of inter-American agreements to take counsel as to the course which our governments should take under the shadow of this dire threat to our continued existence as free peoples.

We meet as the representatives of nations which in former times have had their differences and controversies. But I believe that I may speak for all of us, and not least in the name of my own Government, when I say that we all of us have learned by our past errors of omission and of commission. We are assembled as representatives of the 21 sovereign and independent republics of the American continent, now welded together as no continent has ever before been united in history, by our faith in the ties of mutual trust and of reciprocal interdependence which bind us, and, most of all, by our common devotion to the great cause of democracy and of human liberty to which our New World is dedicated.

Recalls Buenos Aires Parley

The calamity which has now engulfed humanity was not unforeseen by any of us.

Just five years ago, at the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace of Buenos Aires, we met because of the clear signs that the earth would be engulfed by the tidal wave of a world-wide war. By common accord we determined upon measures indispensable to our common security. At the Inter-American Conference at Lima further measures were taken. After the war broke out, at the Meetings of the Foreign Ministers at Panama and Habana, the American Republics adopted additional far-reaching measures of protection and of cooperation for their common safety.

The people of the United States, because of their determination to defend their country, and to safeguard the security of our common continent, determined to lend every form of assistance to that gallant band of nations who, against great odds, continued nevertheless to defend their own liberties.

We had learned our lesson so clearly that we saw that the defense by these peoples of their independence constituted likewise the defense of our own independence and of that of the Western Hemisphere.

Attack on Russia

Then suddenly, last June, Hitler, distraught by the realization that he could no longer attempt successfully to invade Great Britain, but intoxicated by the easy victories which he had achieved in other parts of Europe, perfidiously attacked the Soviet Union with which he had only recently entered into a pact of nonaggression.

"Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad."

Many months ago, Japan entered into the Tripartite Pact with Germany and Italy. My Government learned that this arrangement, which made of Japan the submissive tool of Hitler, for the primary purpose of preventing the United States from continuing to give assistance to Great Britain, was not supported by certain elements in Japan. These elements clearly foresaw the ultimate destruction of Japan if the Japanese government dared to embark upon an adventure which would ultimately bring Japan into conflict with all of the other powers which had direct interests in the Western Pacific.

U. S. Sought Peace

These elements in Japan also realized that, while Hitler had been able to inveigle the war lords in control of the Japanese government into believing that should Japan carry out German orders, and were the Western democracies defeated, Germany would permit Japan to control the Far East, Hitler would, of course, take her spoils from Japan whenever he saw fit.

My Government sought over a period of more than ten years to negotiate with Japan a peaceful and equitable adjustment of differences between the two countries so as to prevent the outbreak of war in the Pacific.

During those last two weeks before December 7, when Japan's notorious peace emissary was protesting to my Government that his country desired nothing except peace and profitable commercial relations with the United States, the airplane carriers were already on their way to Pearl Harbor to launch their dastardly attack upon the United States Navy.

A few days later Germany and her satellites declared war upon the United States.

And so war has been forced upon some of us in the American continent.

The greatest assurance that our great association of sovereign and independent peoples—the American family of nations—can survive this world upheaval safely, lies in the unity with which we face the common peril.

Some of us by our own power, by our own resources, by the extent of our population, are able successfully beyond the shadow of a doubt to defend ourselves. Others of us who do not possess these material advantages, equal though they be in their courage and in their determination to resist aggression, must depend for their continued security upon the cooperation which other members of the American family may give them. The only assured safety which this continent possesses lies in full cooperation between us all in the common defense; equal and sovereign partners in times of aggression as in times of peace.

Whether to Stand Together

The security of the 300 millions of people who inhabit the Western Hemisphere and the independence of each of the countries here represented will be determined by whether the American nations stand together in this hour of peril, or whether they stand apart one from the other.

I know what representatives of Japan have been saying to some of you. They are telling you that the Japanese government is sure that the governments and peoples of the American Republics will certainly not be influenced by any thought that Japan may harbor ulterior motives toward them. They are telling you that Japan desires nothing but peace with you and the maintenance of profitable commercial relations.

You will remember that they told us that also!

But there is no useful purpose to be served by our dwelling on the lies with which the Axis governments still attempt to deceive us. We all of us know that no sane man can place the slightest shred of credence in any solemn or sworn assurance which the Axis governments give.

Twelve months ago Hitler solemnly assured the German people that before the end of the year 1941, Germany would complete the defeat of all her enemies in the greatest victory of all time.

On October 3 last Hitler swore to his people that before the first of the new year of 1942 Russia would be crushed, "never to rise again."

What are the facts? Today the German armies are retreating from Russian territory, routed and dispersed by the magnificent offensive of the Russian armies. Hitler has lost over one-third of his air force, over one-half of his tank force, and more than three million men. But more than that, the German people now see for themselves the utter falsity of the promises held out to them by the evil charlatan who rules them. Their morale is running low.

Turn in the Tide

In North Africa the British armies have utterly destroyed the Axis forces in Libya and are clearing the southern Mediterranean littoral of Axis threats.

In the Atlantic the British and United States convoys are moving ever more safely to their destinations, and the loss of merchant shipping through German submarine action has steadily diminished during the past six months.

In the Far East the United States and Great Britain have met with initial reverses.

But the commencement of the year 1942 has marked the turn of the tide.

The United States is now in the war. Our industrial production, the greatest in the world, is fast mounting towards the maximum. During the coming year we will produce some 60,000 airplanes, including 45,000 military airplanes, some 45,000 tanks, some 300 new combatant ships, from the mightiest battleships to coastal patrol craft, and some 600 new merchant ships. We will attain a rate of 70,000 per year in the training of combat airplane pilots. We have drafted for military service all of our men between the ages of 20 and 44 years, and of this great total we will soon have an initial army of three million men fully trained and fully equipped. We will spend 50 billions of dollars, or half of our total national income, in the year thereafter in order to secure the use of every ounce of our national resources in our war effort. Every weapon that we produce will be used wherever it is determined that it may be of the most service in the common cause—whether that be here in the Western Hemisphere, on the deserts of Libya, on the steppes of Russia or in the territory of the brave people of China.

Praises Declaration

But may I assure you from my heart today that the spontaneous declaration of war upon the enemies of mankind of nine of the other American Republics; the severance of all relations with Germany, Italy, and Japan by Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela; and the offical declarations of solidarity and support by all of the other American Republics, including our traditional and unfailing friend, in evil days as well as good, the great Republic of Brazil, whose guests we all are today, represents to my Government and to my fellow citizens a measure of support, of strength, and of spiritual encouragement which no words of mine would be adequate to express.

All of the American Republics have already taken some form of measures breaking off financial and commercial intercourse between them and the non-American aggressor states and to eliminate other alien economic activities prejudicial to the welfare of the American Republics.

It is of the utmost importance that these measures be expanded in order that they may prevent all business, financial and trade transactions between the Western Hemisphere and the aggressor states, and all transactions within the Western Hemisphere which directly or indirectly redound to the benefit of the aggressor nations, or are in any way inimical to the defense of the hemisphere.

U. S. Ready to Help

The universal character of the war is placing increasing demands upon the merchant shipping facilities of all of us. The increased production of strategic materials will be of no avail unless adequate transportation can be provided, and it is consequently of vital importance that all of the shipping facilities of the Americas be mobilized to this essential end.

The Government of the United States is ready to enter into broad arrangements for the acquisition of supplies of basic and strategic materials, and to cooperate with each of the other American republics in order to increase rapidly and efficiently their production for emergency needs. Finally, it stands ready through the United States Maritime Commission to render every assistance in the efficient operation of merchant vessels in accordance with the plan of August 28, 1941, of the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee.

My Government is also fully aware of the important role which imported materials and articles play in the maintenance of the economies of your nations.

The attack by Japan and the declarations of war by the other members of the Tripartite Pact have resulted in greater and unprecedented demands upon our production facilities. But I am able to state today, as I did on December 5, that the policy of the United States toward the satisfaction of your essential requirements remains firm.

Our allocation of 218,600 tons of tin plate for your needs during this year has been followed by further allocations, which I am privileged to announce today. The Office of Production Management has advised me that allocations have been made to you for the next quarter. In amounts adequate to meet your needs for rayon; for 20 essential agricultural and industrial chemicals, including copper sulphate, ammonium sulphate, soda ash and caustic soda; for farm equipment, and for iron and steel products.

In addition, I am able to announce that a special mechanism has been organized within the Office of Production Management which is now facilitating the clearance of your individual priority applications.

"Arsenal of Democracy"

In the light of this action, it seems appropriate to recognize that the arsenal of democracy continues mindful of its hemisphere responsibilities.

I am confident that your people will join the people of the United States, who are sharing their civilian supplies with you, in recognizing that military and other defense needs must continue to be given precedence over civilian demands.

The United States is prepared to participate in and to encourage complementary agreements among the American republics for dealing with problems of health and sanitation by provision, according to the abilities of the countries involved, of funds, raw materials and services.

The responsibility with which we are all charged requires that we plan for broad economic and social development, for increased production of the necessities of the world, and for their equitable distribution among the people.

If this economic rehabilitation of the world is to take place it is indispensable that there be a resurgence of international trade—international trade, as was declared by the second meeting of ministers of foreign affairs at Habana, "conducted with peaceful motives and based upon equality of treatment and fair and equitable practices."

I urge upon you all the imperative need for unity between us, not only in the measures which must presently be taken in the defense of our Western world, but also in order that the American republic, joined as one, may prove to be the potent factor which they should be of right in the determination of the nature of the world of the future, after the victory is won.

In the determination of how our stupendous problems may best be solved, the united voice of the free peoples of the Americas must be heard.

Notwithstanding the hideous blunders of the past generation; notwithstanding the holocaust of the present moment, that great ideal of "a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free" still stands untarnished as the supreme objective of a suffering humanity.

That ideal will yet triumph.

to support a declaration rupturing diplomatic relations with the Axis powers which is to be introduced by Mexico, Venezuela and Colombia.

Dr. Guani agreed with Welles in stating that Axis diplomatic and consular agents in the Americas are "foci of infection," and he proposed calling a Pan American military meeting immediately after the present conference.

Mexico's allegiance to the unity program was voiced by her foreign minister, Ezequiel Padilla, who, constantly applauded, declared that "if the American republics are not united, they will suffer aggression themselves."

Talking extemporaneously after five earlier speakers had read their addresses, Padilla drew the longest and loudest ovation of them all.

"We are here to settle the fate of the world," he said.

President Getulio Vargas of Brazil, in the welcoming address, pledged that his country, which juts out into the South Atlantic toward Africa and Europe, would never be used as a "point of vantage for aggression against sister nations." Brazilians, he said, are determined to "defend their own territory inch by inch against any incursions."

Declaring that Japanese aggression and the declarations of Japan and Germany "of necessity had to bring us together once again," Vargas said:

"We sovereign representatives of the American family, free countries and lovers of peace, are therefore here to reiterate to that nation so abruptly attacked our unanimous solidarity and to resolve with wisdom and decision what is convenient to the safety and protection of our peoples."

Replying to Vargas in behalf of the visiting delegations, Foreign Minister Juan Bautista Rossetti, of Chile elaborates upon the unity theme by calling on the delegates to "use all our faith and enthusiasm" to make the hemisphere "one and indivisible in the defense of her inalienable right to decide her destiny for herself."

Argentina's position held the close attention of all, with the success or failure of the entire conference perhaps hinging on the stand to be taken by this strong nation.

Welles and the Argentine foreign minister, Dr. Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, had a 25-minute conference in the Argentine's hotel room this morning after which Welles said: "I have had a cordial and pleasant conversation with my old friend, the foreign minister of Argentina." He and Guinazu otherwise were silent on their meeting.

An authorized source in the Argentine delegation, however, said after the two-man conference that Argentina would "hold a firm position against the proposal to sever diplomatic relations with the Axis powers." He said Argentina would not adopt any measures of "prebelligerency."

Dr. Ruiz Guinazu told the Associated Press that Argentina would put forth "every resource in its possession to maintain united solidarity of the hemisphere." He stressed economic collaboration.

"Argentina," he said, "comes to the conference with a full spirit of collaboration, especially in economic matters, which are so important in view of the problems raised among American nations by the international situation.

"Regarding political collaboration, official decrees show the attitude of solidarity of our government with the United States, which is declared a nonbelligerent in accord with Article XV of the Havana Conference.

"Our country, always watchful of its international promises, hastened to place in effect this instrument (nonbelligerency) because it considered the time had arrived for reciprocal and defensive cooperation."

The conference was opened at 5:30 p. m. (3:30 p. m., E. S. T.) by the Brazilian foreign minister, Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, in the Palacio Tiradentes, formerly the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies. Dr. Aranha was elected president of the parley.

In his opening address Dr. Aranha was cheered when he praised Welles' efforts to avert war and he was cheered even more loudly when he termed the Japanese attack on the United States "unexpected and brutal."

50 GPO Workers Will Donate Blood for Red Cross Today

A blood-donor parade, led by police motorcycle escort and a District Red Cross ambulance, will take 50 Government Printing Office employes to the Blood Donor Center at Twenty-third Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest at 2 p. m. today in what is described as a "record-breaking give" of blood to America at war.

The 50 donors will be accepted from a total of 114 G. P. O workers who volunteered blood. All 114 will gather at 1:30 p. m. in the green room of G. P. O. Building No. 1 and from the number 50 will be chosen. The parade will start at 1:45 p. m.

Arriving at the center, the donors will be greeted by Mrs. Dorothy Mason Walton, director of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service. A former Ziegfeld Follies girl, Mrs. Walton established the blood donor service single handed. A part of the money now being raised in the District Red Cross War Fund drive will be used toward the expenses of this greatly expanding service, it was announced yesterday.

At 10 a. m. today, 10 members of the Junior League will go to the center to donate blood.

Meanwhile, the drive for $750,000 had recahed $137,494.39 yesterday.

Sir Vivian Gabriel, of the British Air Commission; Temple Bailey, the novelist, and Daniel Hoan, associate director of Civilian Defense, will address the Red Cross speakers' dinner to be held at 6:15 p. m. Monday at the Y. W. C. A., 614 E Street Northwest.

U. S. Allocates Materials to Americas

A branch has been established in the OPM to allocate critical materials to the Latin American republics in accordance with the announcement made yesterday at the Rio de Janeiro conference by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, it was announced yesterday.

Douglas MacKeachie, OPM director of purchases, disclosed that first quarter allocations, totaling hundreds of millions of dollars in vital raw materials and processed commodities, have aready been made, and that, assuming continuance of present conditions, equal amounts would be allocated throughout the rest of the year.

At a press conference closely following Welles' announcement, MacKeachie explained that the materials allocated were in curtailed amounts, reduced from normal demands of the South American countries in the same ratio as curtailments in the United States.

Announcing detailed amounts of more than a score of commodities for which allocations had been made, MacKeachie added that in all, 110 items were under study and allocations of them would follow.

Included in the first quarter allocations were substantial amounts of a long list of chemicals, 3,300,000 pounds of rayon, 375,000 tons of steel, 13 million dollars worth of farm equipment, 218,000 tons of tin plate and 3,500,000 pounds of lead.

Over the Top Again

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 15.—Washington County, which last week bought six times its $35,000 quota in National Defense stamps, again exceeded its quota of $25,000 in the Red Cross War Fund campaign. With returns not wholly complete, $27,000 had been subscribed.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Mr. Jones' Syrup

In times like these it is very dangerous for Government officials to administer soothing syrup to a public that needs strong stimulants. Yet that is what Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones did when he predicted that in 18 months there would be enough synthetic rubber to make new tires and tubes available for public use. The echoes of this reassuring statement had hardly died down when Price Administrator Leon Henderson asserted with equal emphasis that synthetic rubber production in 1943 cannot be counted on to provide large enough supplies for the usual civilian products. Indeed, he warned that every pound of synthetic rubber that can be produced may be needed for direct military use. Even a cursory examination of estimates of actual and prospective rubber supplies and domestic rubber consumption should dissipate any optimism aroused by Mr. Jones' utterances. But unfortunately the majority of people pay slight heed to statistics. Furthermore, they would rather believe the man who tells them it is not necessary to worry about future tire shortages than the man who warns them of worse shortages and greater deprivations to come.

Voluntary cooperation by the public in plans for conserving rubber is an essential part of our war effort. Legislative compulsion alone cannot be relied upon to effect the savings required to safeguard our pitifully inadequate rubber reserves. In underrating the seriousness of the supply situation Mr. Jones has again called attention to the conspicuous lack of governmental teamwork that has so greatly handicapped the vigorous prosecution of our defense-war program. Mr. Lippmann yesterday said that it is "surely the business of the Office of Facts and Figures to see to it that Government announcements do not mislead the public." We agree. It was distinctly harmful to the war effort for Mr. Jones to ladle out syrup along with his announcement of the building of new synthetic plants.

About Tin

At the current rate of consumption it is estimated that our supply of tin will be exhausted in a little more than a year. Since we obtain virtually all our tin from areas in the Far East, now cut off or threatened by invading Japanese forces, conservation of our limited reserves is imperative. For very little had been done before the war to restrict domestic tin consumption. Discussion had centered chiefly about plans for development of domestic smelting facilities to utilize Bolivian tin. Faced by a war emergency that calls for immediate action, the OPM recently announced that the use of tin in the manufacture of 29 specific commodities, such as toys, novelties, fasteners, etc., would shortly be banned and the amount of tin used in all other manufactured articles (excepting cans and containers) cut in half.

But that is only a modest beginning. These initial moves are counted upon to save only 15 per cent of our normal tin consumption. To make supplies stretch over a longer period of time, it is rumored that tin plate production will soon be cut to 50 per cent of current output. Since the largest portion of tin plate produced goes into cans and containers, substantial savings of tin can be made by reducing the amount of tin per can and by finding substitutes for tin plate containers. Mills are said to be considering the installation of equipment for producing electrolytically coated plate which would result in a saving of one-third of the amount of tin used under the old process. Unfortunately from four to six months are required to install the new equipment. And meantime other methods of limiting the consumption of tin must be promptly introduced to prevent overrapid depletion of existing supplies.

Months ago the OPM asked can manufacturers to make a 10 per cent reduction in tin coating. Attention is now being given to the practicability of utilizing lacquered containers with a silver coating. Here is one substitute for tin that might well be furthered if manufacturers could borrow the hoard of useless silver which the Treasury has accumulated under the silver purchase program. We bespeak Secretary Morgenthau's cooperation in this vital matter of making the fullest use of our resources in remedying shortages and prosecuting the war. There has even been some talk also of substituting silver for tin in solder—a suggestion of the National Academy of Sciences. More general use of returnable containers, of glass jars and bottles, would also reduce the drain upon our tin supplies. The real difficulty in cutting down on the use of tin, as well as most other scarce articles, lies not so much in devising ways and means to get along without accustomed articles as in adapting our industrial operations to the changed methods required by material shortages. Faced by the prospect of exhaustion of our tin supplies, no time should be lost in compelling industrial adjustments to release tin for defense and other essential uses.

How About It, Mr. Fish?

George Hill has now been found guilty on two counts of perjury in connection with his version of the notorious mailbag case and with his relations with George Sylvester Viereck, the well-known German propagandist. The facts which have now been proved to the hilt and acted upon may be recalled. Last summer ten mailbags of material containing isolationist propaganda were taken from the House Office Building to the headquarters of Prescott Dennett, secretary of the phony Make Europe Pay War Debts Committee. Dennett was under investigation by the same grand jury investigating Nazi activities which returned a true bill against George Hill. Those mailbags were hauled away from Dennett's office after Dennett had been summoned before the grand jury investigating Nazi activities. Twenty mailbags from Dennett's office were disposed of in all, and eight of them were stored at the request of Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, in a House Office Building storeroom in front of a bin used by Mr. Fish. Hill is the secretary of Mr. Fish in question. Several of the bags taken away from Dennett's office after he had been called by the grand jury bore tags indicating they were "from" Representative Hamilton Fish "to" Dennett—tags which were placed in evidence in open court. Hill denied the bulk of these facts, but the grand jury accepted our version, and now Hill has been convicted and committed to jail, where he awaits sentence. The grand jury returned a true bill after it had heard the witnesses, interviews with whom this newspaper had already published, and after making Hill bring the bags from the very room where this newspaper found, sampled, and photographed them.

Representative Fish proved to be a very loyal employer. He came to Hill's defense—not to mention his own—in several impassioned orations in the House of Representatives reaffirming those statements by Hill which the court has now found to be perjuries. The first speech was on September 29. Mr. Fish branded our reports as lies in a decorative speech which applied to this newspaper such terms as "contemptible," "dastardly," "lying" and "smear." Conceivably, if Mr. Fish had made only his first speech, he might have asserted that he was taken in. But he had three days in which to inquire into our reports, to weigh the evidence printed in our columns, and to examine the House records. Still he stuck to and improved upon his support of Hill and his insults to this newspaper. On the floor of the House he said, October 2, "In all fairness to my secretary, I want to repeat that it (our report) is a lie." He then branded our reports as "malicious charges," took a fling at the publisher of this newspaper, and urged that our "smart aleck reporter" be haled before the bar of the House. The case is now concluded. But the postscript belongs to Mr. Fish, or, in default, to the House of Representatives. The privilege of the members of that body is not personal, but belongs to the House, so that the dignity and authority of the House may be upheld.

Mr. Welles At Rio

The address delivered by Sumner Welles at the opening session of the Rio conference was a superb statement of this Nation's position and a cogent plea for the fullest measure of inter-American cooperation in a struggle which will determine the fate of all free nations everywhere. The danger which the peoples of the Americas face today is, as the Undersecretary of State told his listeners, "the greatest danger which they have ever confronted since they won their independence." This fact the majority of American nations realize. Nine of them have joined the United States in war on the Axis powers. Three other nations have broken off diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan. Yet, despite the events of the past few years, there is still a disposition in certain quarters, particularly in South America and most notably in Argentina, to fly in the face of facts, to insist that a policy of caution and circumspection based on what Mr. Welles calls "the shibboleth of classic neutrality in its narrow sense" is still feasible.

Actually, of course, Hitler has no more intention of respecting the freedom and independence of any American nation, no matter how scrupulously neutral its policy may be, than of respecting the neutrality of such countries as Norway, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands, Yugoslavia and Greece. The struggle upon which this country is engaged is a struggle to preserve not only our freedom and independence but also the freedom of all the nations of the New World. For any nation to be laggard in responding to the plain implications of this fact is to do injury to its own interests as well as to the welfare of the great American community of nations.

Mr. Welles made the severance of diplomatic relations between the nations of this hemisphere and the powers with which we are at war the primary aim of our policy at Rio. The second great aim is economic. Mr. Welles promised this country's wholehearted support in any and every effort being made and planned to integrate the economies of the American republics so as to alleviate the difficulties that have arisen as a result of the war. To this end the United States is prepared to enter into very broad arrangements regarding the acquisition of supplies of raw materials, the most efficient employment of merchant shipping and the allocation to Latin-American nations of supplies which they lack and need. The response at Rio to Mr. Welles' eloquent speech will be a touchstone of the readiness of the other American republics to implement the ideal of inter-American solidarity at this critical time. Words are not enough. The times demand action.

Strategy Down Under

For obvious reasons the rapidity of the Japanese advance in the South Pacific has aroused serious misgivings in Australia. The Dominion, it appears, has sent large expeditionary forces overseas. Yet neither in man power nor in materiel was Australia ever adequately equipped to protect its vast land area from really powerful thrusts by the Japanese. One can readily appreciate, therefore, the enthusiasm which must have greeted Australian Navy Minister Makin's recent declaration that "reinforcements from the United States are coming as soon as possible."

From our standpoint this development would have been called for regardless of the status of Australian defenses. For, despite its distance from us, and the consequent difficulty of maintaining supply lines, Australia possesses an invaluable reserve position from which American forces can—and indeed, must—operate. From the Australian base at Port Darwin, near the northernmost tip of the continent, it is only about three hours' flying time to the Dutch naval base at Soerabaja. Less than half that time divides Port Darwin from the Dutch base at Amboina. It is from these two and other Dutch bases in the East Indies that American forces are already operating. Thus the quicker American reinforcements are able to clear through Port Darwin, the stronger will be the Allied defensive position in and around Dutch bases.

But time is of the essence, and it would be gross self-delusion to minimize what must be done first before we shall be in a position to make the most of Port Darwin. Since the start of the war naval and military facilities there have been greatly expanded and communications south have been improved. But the base is still really an outpost, it requires further development; and it is separated from industrial Australia by hundreds of miles of desert and uninhabited land. To the problem of overland supply and attendant protection there must be added the more difficult job of supply by sea through waters in which Japanese raiders and submarines will lurk. Thus the material difficulties to be overcome are enormous. Yet they point up anew the global nature of a war which forces us to pit our strength against an enemy who is operating, so far as we are concerned, at the strategic end of the earth.

Propaganda Note

As yet there has been no detailed account of the vicious and barbarous damage which the Japanese wrought in the open city of Manila. It is known that a great deal of harm was done to some of the priceless architectural treasures of the Dominican and Jesuit orders, but the particulars are lacking. The Dominican Church of Santo Domingo is said to have been totally destroyed. This structure, of the purest Gothic lines, was one of the most exquisite churches in the Philippines. Nearby is the University of Santo Tomas and the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, but there is no reliable information as to how they fared. Similarly the Jesuits are without knowledge of what exactly happened to their property. For instance, one of the ecclesiastical gems of the Catholic world is the Church of San Ignacio. Fear is expressed for its safety, since bombs are known to have been dropped in the district two blocks away, and fires have spread. The wanton destruction of church property, together with the killing of the nuns, should surely be catalogued and put on the short-wave radio at once for the information of the entire Catholic world. That would be a useful service for the Donovan Committee.

HILL-VIEW

By dusk, upon the twinkling town,
From this high hill-top we look down.

A thousand lamp-lit windows fair,
Like golden flowers, are blooming there;

And still, when flowers fade away,
Long after moonrise, here we stay,

Above the town, so high, so high,
So near the stars, my love and I.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Too Many Complaints

From many sources one hears criticism of the police force, the traffic laws and regulations, the lack of planning in Government offices, the lack of courtesy and breeding on the part of she-dragon secretaries employed in the same, the acts of criminals, the lack of justice in the courts, the lack of living quarters for Government employes, the higher prices for foodstuffs, the slums, the blindness to the colored situation etc. etc., ad infinitum. There is a fuss about the high rents which probably have been up since the last war, and a fuss about cheap construction in houses.

Judging from letters to the editor, newcomers are greatly disappointed in the Nation's Capital; disappointed in the way situations are mismanaged; disappointed in the shortsightedness of those in authority; disappointed in the White House down.

Isn't there some one to whom we can attach the blame for all these disappointments? Just think what the defense workers are writing home about! There are few newcomers who are not disillusioned about Washington. We can't start off in a war, on the right foot, with so many people disgruntled about something in the Nation's Capital. People from other States write that they envy us living in such an interesting place as Washington, but they also pity us. Isn't that a pretty kettle of fish? We should have a Bureau of Complaints, with many subdivisions, sanctioned by, and responsible to, the Government but operated exclusively by volunteers who have no complaints to make.

An elderly gentleman of 96 was once asked to what he ascribed his longevity. Proudly he replied, "I jest never made no complaints!" So we had better watch out!

We Want Willkie

Quoting Walter Lippmann under the heading: "The Trumpet's Uncertain Sound." "For the paramount and urgent task of organizing supply, it would seem as if there were one preeminently qualified man, he is Mr. Wendell Willkie."

In a time when there should be no more Republicans, only a Republic to be repaired, nor any more Democrats—only a Democracy to be rededicated, we believe in an all-out on resources, including man-power in high places. We can't afford to lose this man's energy, devotion, and preparation. We don't care who wins the next election, but we are concerned about who wins this war!

Orchid For Ickes

News stories of the possibility of bombing our Atlantic coast by the use of zeppelins remind me that away back before the war—was it 1937 or 1938?—we would have sold to Germany noninflammable helium gas and thus have made such a zeppelin venture far safer for her, had it not been for the intervention of the w. k. Harold Ickes. Thanks to him, zeppelins still use inflammable hydrogen. When Ickes guesses wrong, as on gasoline, he is a "short-sighted alarmist." Why not give him an orchid now for having been a far-sighted statesman on helium?

A Race Horse Analogy

If you owned a race horse that could run a mile in a minute and a half, do you think that the same horse could make 20 miles in 30 minutes? Of course, not! Isn't it true that a race horse can maintain the same speed only after periodical rests?

Germany may well be compared to a race horse. Let us look at the record starting from the beginning. Germany began her campaign by marching into the Rhine, and having met no opposition, she waited several years before annexing Austria. Again she waited, this time almost a year, at the end of which she again was eager to race, just like the rested race horse.

Having convinced the Chamberlain appeasement clique, she attained the Sudetenland. And then what happened? Needing the inevitable rest between races, she waited and prepared for many months before taking over the remainder of Czecho-Slovakia. Again she rested. Months passed and the race horse once more felt the need of seeing the race track before her. Thus began the drive for Danzig and the Polish Corridor. In spite of many obstacles and the ultimatum by England and France, the race horse had gained so much self-confidence through past victories that she was willing to take the risk. She attacked Poland. And then England and France declared war, challenging this ever-triumphant champion The race in Poland was a short one. Poland capitulated.

Did Germany immediately turn against her new enemies, England and France? No. She needed another rest. So she prepared, for almost six months, until the spring of 1940. Then ready to begin anew, she charged against Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and France, conquering all in record time. Confident of her power, she then tried an air invasion of England, but soon realized that the race horse must not try to run too far without stopping to relax. So she waited and the English breathed more easily, thankful for the time given them to prepare against the German onslaught.

Meanwhile, the Greeks were engaging in battle with Germany's partner, Italy, and were delivering real knockout blows. Did Germany come to her partner's rescue? No! She needed the rest. So Germany's race horse took her rest and recovered sufficient energy to take Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and, with a desperate fight, Yugoslavia and Greece.

Then, having accomplished her task in Crete, the horse again rested. While she was inactive, the French and British were fighting in Syria, which, while it was important to Germany, could not be rescued until the race horse had regained its strength, and so Syria was permitted to fall into British hands. When powerful once more, into North Africa she raced, chasing the British, who had defeated the Italians, out of Libya. Having completed this, our record shows that once again the race horse lay down and rested until, feeling sure of the power within her, she attacked Soviet Russia on June 22.

What a glorious race! The most wonderful of all. The vast Russian territories she thought she would conquer in a short time. Most military experts predicted that from six weeks to two months would suffice for the race in Russia. And the German horse was tearing at a wild pace down the homestretch. But when she suddenly realized that this race was too long, she had reached the culmination of her speed, she was beginning to slow down, she was tiring. She needed her usual rest. But the Russians, the truck horses, were not tired. The German race horse, panting, out of breath, unable to push forward, is being driven backward. The truck horses may stage a race of their own all the way to Berlin.

Filipinos At War

When the last spark of military resistance is finally extinguished by the Japanese on the Island of Luzon, the Filipinos, though they may have lost a battle, have won an everlasting prize. That prize is the confidence of the American people in them for unchanging loyalty to the Government of the United States in time of crisis. In this tragic hour of their national history their unity as a people and as a country is being challenged. But tragic though the situation may be, to them this is an opportune moment to show undivided loyalty and gratitude to the American people.

The Filipinos are aware of the causes which have ushered them into this conflict. They didn't have any quarrel with Japan. They are at war with Japan because Japan is at war with the United States. The war that is now raging over their country has imposed upon them tremendous sacrifices in lives, property and human suffering. Nonetheless the Filipinos are willing to bear these colossal sacrifices because they also realize that their ultimate destiny as an independent country is closely linked with the victory of the United States in this conflict. So long as Japan remains a dominant power in the Western Pacific an independent Philippines, which the President of the United States has pledged to "restore and protect," can not hope to remain safe. Thus America's stake in this war, therefore, is also the cause of the Filipinos. It is because of this that Americans and Filipinos have merged together as comrades in arms, fighting for the same ideals and dying for the same principles.

The will of the Filipinos to resist aggression of the enemy has remained unshakable. This resistance will continue until every last man on the battlefield of Luzon has fallen down. The greatest guaranty that any Filipino soldier can give to America is perhaps his willingness to fight for the Stars and Stripes.

But in the art of modern warfare, man power and the will to fight, important though they may be, alone can not win a battle. The implements of war—such as tanks, planes, machine guns and food supplies are indispensable. These are the machineries necessary to the effective prosecution of the present hostilities. Without them soldiers in the battlefield will be rendered helpless.

It is a common knowledge that the American forces in the Philippines are outnumbered five to one both in men as well as in material. This is an ugly fact to swallow, especially if we take into consideration America's enormous potentialties. But nonetheless it is true. Whatever may be the fate of General MacArthur's army in the Philippines, the people of the United States can rest assured that every Filipino soldier will fight the enemy to the last bitter end.

A Thought For The Day

Just remember this war is not for the freedom of only a few but for the freedom of all. Remember, too, there is no word that does not produce an effect of one sort or another that some form of expression must of necessity result. Every word and every demand we make gets an answer. How much greater, then, shall be the scope of that answer when we persistently speak the truth. Day by day we erect the walls of our sacred temple of peace, and each stone is the symbol of some word spoken in the dark night of our souls, but from an abiding faith, yet that faith is the glimmering of our dawn, and soon the rising sun shall flood our souls with the radiance of a day that shall never end. Just remember, if your hair is gray, don't let that stand in your way; come on through and show what you can do.

The Post Impressionist

School Themes

My mother saves everything—first baby shoes, stray wisps of hair, watches that can't possibly be repaired, bone hairpins and what not. I wasn't a bit surprised when she announced the other day that she had saved my English themes from Grades IV through VIII. Once she had seen me through grammar school, her interest seemed to lag, for there were no themes after the one that closed with the ominous prophecy: "Now we enter uncharted seas. A new world challenges us, high school."

Those themes, Grades IV through VIII, reveal a confident and not unknowing person. The first one, September 2, 1917, deals with World War I and tells that "It is an awful thing, but President Wilson is good and smart." There is much reference to my father, who is "over there," and my mother, who "nits socks." There is even a suggestion for a peace settlement—"beet the Germans up."

But few of the themes dealt with war and politics. There were innumerable parties and games and picnics. Picnics. You would think my early childhood was spent packing and unpacking lunch baskets. Each picnic theme contained a complete listing of the food packed and transported to "the most beautiful spot I ever saw," ending always with "devil eggs, 2 for each one."

Another recurring theme was the one variously titled "A Trip in a Glass-Bottom Boat," "Seeing the Bottom of the Ocean Through Glass" and simply "Glass-Bottom Boat." Somewhere, some time, perhaps on a lake in Michigan, we had been in such a boat. I didn't know that I was storing up for many years a rich source of grammar school themes. In Grade IV themes there was a simplicity and directness about the wonders seen through that glass-bottom boat. "There was fish, shells and sand." By Grade VI this simple under-water scene had become "a real fairyland of coral, fish of all colors, and beautiful sea weed."

As a matter of fact, by Grades V and VI I had become a full-fledged liar. Apparently I had run out of exciting theme material, or perhaps the competitive instinct was keen, because I started to invent adventures that my conservative mother would never have stood for in her wildest dreams. There were trips on sailboats, trips up the mountain and one trip which, apparently, was too much even for my good-natured Grade V teacher, for penciled in the upper left-hand corner of the paper is a bright red "E," which in our school was not for "excellent." It was about a trip to my grandfather's house. I pictured a white-haired old grandfather waiting to welcome me in. Now, I never saw either of my grandfathers, but so beautiful was my description that I'm sure Miss Faulkner would never have flunked me if it had not had grandfather reminiscing not only about the Civil War but the Revolutionary War and playing in both contests a "noble part."

In Grade VI there seemed to be a preoccupation with death. Our household pets seemed to have been struck by a plague, judging by my themes. Let the English teacher make an assignment and Tip was doomed. Canaries, rabbits, my aunt's parakeets—nothing was safe during this year of morbid themes. There were the most minute descriptions of burials in the back yard for "the best friend one could have." As I look back now I can't remember a single one of these poor animals actually dying.

In Grade VII, most of the themes were concerned with the grammar school sport world. Our school always seemed barely to triumph over larger and more experienced opponents. "Joe Maxson threw a basket just in time," or "No one realized that Ray Kenendy could run that fast." But more important always than the contest itself was the moral lesson which I appended regularly. "Winning wasn't the important thing. Everybody on both teams played good, hard and clean." In looking at my early themes you would gather that all of us were a lot of young masochists engaging in sports merely for moral discipline, and that ultimate victory and the total destruction of our opponents were remote from our thoughts.

Toward the end of Grade VIII there was a sudden shift in theme topics and it was due, I know, to the fact that Marjorie Uprichard had come into my life. Actually she had been in the same class with me since kindergarten, but never before had she had any influence on my weekly compositions. Spring no longer was a season that simply ushered in the baseball season; it was the time "for the robins to return. They have been in the South too long." The themes of this period were neater; the penmanship and the grammar better, too, for there was always the chance that my theme would be read aloud to the class—the best one always was—and Marjorie Uprichard would know that my theme was written not for Miss Pennington, not for a high grade, but for her.

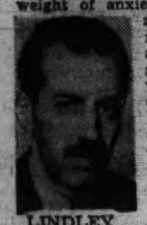
Administrative Knots

By Ernest Lindley

Nelson's Appointment Eases Tangle

THE APPOINTMENT of Donald Nelson as generalissimo of war production lifted a heavy weight of anxiety and discouragement from many who have a part in the program and most who have been observing it in Washington. A single head was clearly necessary, and Nelson was the most promising of the men who have had experience with the program during the last year and a half.



LINDLEY

In the first rush of publicity, Nelson is being portrayed by some as a superman. Perhaps he will demonstrate that, in this job at least, he is as near to one as a mortal man can become. Certainly it looks as if he would have more leeway than any administrative official appointed by Roosevelt since Hugh Johnson was put at the helm of NRA. Nelson has drive, experience and a grasp of the dimensions of his task. No more can be asked. But his job is tremendous and depicting him as a miracle-man who can solve all difficulties is not much service to him or to the war production program.

Comparing Nelson to Lord Beaverbrook is also of doubtful usefulness. Beaverbrook appears to have done a good job of accelerating the British war production. Competent American judges who have observed his work report that he is a driver, and that he has a knack of breaking bottlenecks. But others report that he is weak on the planning side and on "follow through." Although his advice has been sought in Washington—including the White House—because of his experience, he has not impressed many here as having abilities which cannot be matched by dozens of men on this side of the Atlantic. The British production program is not regarded as a model for us. At best, it is not comparable in size and complexity with the program which Nelson has to organize and put across.

A YEAR AGO, when it became clear that the National Defense Advisory Commission had to give way to a more effective agency, Nelson was the choice for top man of most of the New Dealers directly concerned with the defense effort. He had done an excellent job of modernizing purchasing methods by the Quartermaster Corps. But the President chose the Knudsen-Hillman combination instead, and for a time Nelson was almost ostracized by the industrial group around Knudsen. Leon Henderson received the same treatment. Nelson submitted his resignation at least once.

When SPAB was created, Nelson was given more of a chance as its executive director. But he was under a board and, in his alternative capacity, he was Knudsen's subordinate as OPM's director of the division of priorities. But his work won the approval of Vice President Wallace, chairman of SPAB, and Wallace was perhaps the most influential of those who urged that he be put in full charge of war production. Some of the other New Dealers wanted William O. Douglas, a tough minded, highly competent administrator. But Douglas would have come in cold from two years on the Supreme Court bench, and he has had no experience with purchasing and industrial production. Willkie had support, chiefly from outside the Administration, but he, too, would have come in cold.

NELSON KNOWS at first hand the problems and faults of the production program for the last year and a half. He knows the personnel in OPM and other war agencies. He is a businessman, but he has won the confidence of New Dealers, who, in their vision of the over-all requirements of war production, have been much more far-sighted than any but a tiny handful of the businessmen brought into the Government.

There is general disappointment because the President was not more incisive in his reorganization of the Office of Civilian Defense. However, he went at least one step farther than the public generally realized. James Landis, the new "executive," refused to take the appointment until he was assured full control. The choice of Landis has been criticized on the ground of his inexperience. The fact is that his experience has been considerably greater than that of many others urged for the appointment. He was chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and during the last six months he has been the OCD's regional chairman for New England. It was his efficient work in the latter capacity which led to his selection to run the national headquarters. However, until Mayor LaGuardia gets out entirely, Landis is likely to be embarrassed. LaGuardia has become, in effect, a spokesman without authority, a thoroughly incongruous role which is almost certain to cause misunderstandings.

ON ADMINISTRATION of farm prices, likewise, the consequences of the President's position may be confusing. Here Secretary Wickard has a persuasive argument: If he is responsible for farm production he must be able to fix prices for farm products. The farm program has been ably planned and administered by the Department of Agriculture. Leon Henderson cannot manage it with his left hand, and he may do it irreparable damage. Wickard is opposed to the O'Mahoney amendment and to other Congressional tampering with present parity formulas. Here the only sharp dissent comes from the farm lobbyists and the professional politicians who cater to them.

Many tangles in the war administration remain to be straightened out, but the naming of Nelson cuts the most important knot of all.

American Solidarity

By Jean Anne Crawford

A New Issue

"DON'T LEAN too heavily on Pan-Americanism!" This common-sense warning to the people of the United States comes at a time when the results of the Rio conference are still unpredictable. However unsatisfactory or disappointing these results may be, the fact remains that American solidarity has not had time to become a part of South American thought.

Colombia was an indignant nation when Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, when it seemed for a day or two as though the attack might be extended to the Panama Canal and Colombian naval bases. By December 11, the opposition was criticizing the ambiguity of the Havana Convention. "According to international law, what ought to be understood as the territorial integrity of a nation which possesses colonies and bases distant from the mother country, above all, when these are extra-continental?" the pro-Nazi newspaper El Siglo asked.

Answering its own question, the opposition brought up a point which may well be heard in the Rio discussions. The "zone of security," they reasoned, should coincide with the 300-mile limit set as American territorial waters by the Havana declaration, and beyond that limit no American nation should be called to the aid of another! In other words, the Conservative Party of Colombia feels attracted by the policy of hemisphere solidarity when Buenaventura or Cartagena is threatened, but does not feel obliged to support the United States in a war to save the outposts of continental defense.

AS AN AMERICAN living in Colombia, I cannot help noting the similarity between the attitude here now, and that prevalent in the United States at the time Germany invaded the Low Countries and France. The war seems far away from South America. The rapidity and success of the Japanese advance in the Philippines makes resistance look hopeless. The national election, less than a month away, fills the newspapers, although the question of who will be President is generally considered settled.

In Bogota, people stop before the newspaper bulletin boards and ask aloud where the United States Navy is keeping itself. "Many citizens in commenting on the news from the various fronts of war do so with the same levity of judgment which they were accustomed to use before Colombia broke relations with the Axis powers," the newspaper El Liberal objects, commenting even more sarcastically on the tendency to assume that Colombia has picked a "bad card" because of the democratic reverses in the Far East.

The fighting tone of President Roosevelt's opening speech to Congress, and the production figures which he presented were well received. His promise to carry the war to enemy territory, and his determination to keep the enemy from the Western Hemisphere were editorially interpreted as: "... a guarantee for the normal development of life in the Americas, by which will be secured the maintenance of the economic power of the continent, as necessary for decisive victory as war power."

COLOMBIA can scarcely be blamed for tending to emphasize the economic side of hemisphere cooperation. Already the war has made unsolvable problems of unemployment, profiteering and shortage of raw materials. Such factories as the republic had developed were almost entirely dependent on imports of prime materials. The building industry imports all the steel used in reinforcing concrete. Even now, blocks of new buildings in Bogota remain uncompleted because of the priority rulings for the necessary materials cannot be obtained. The cost of drugs has gone up so sharply that the government is considering price-control measures.

Presidential Candidate Alfono Lopez's newspaper has advocated that Colombia demand the formation of a permanent Pan-American Economic Committee to allot the materials available from the States. The purpose behind this is quite clear: the smaller countries must get their share.

While the United States would be foolish to allot the materials without regard for maximum benefit to the war industries, we would be equally unwise to disregard completely the demands of the less efficient countries. In the case of Colombia, considerable ill feeling could be avoided if the United States Government made clear in a public statement where certain materials were to be allotted and why, and attempted to give compensation in some other form.

Eventually, if the isolationist attitude of South America is not broken down, a point may be reached beyond which the price of artificially produced continental solidarity exceeds the benefits obtained. Then the people of the United States will know, as they should know even before the Rio Conference, that the issue of the present war is in their hands, and in their hands alone.

The Rio Meeting

By Barnet Nover

Pan Americanism's Greatest Test

THE NEWS emanating from Rio de Janeiro, where the third conference of American foreign ministers has just opened, follows a familiar pattern.

NOVER

Once again, as during the initial stages of the Havana conference of 1940, the Lima conference of 1987, the Buenos Aires conference of 1936 and other inter-American gatherings of the past decade, the present meeting is being described as a struggle between the forces of light and the powers of darkness, the former represented by the American Undersecretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles, the latter by Senor Enrique Ruiz Guinazu of Argentina.

This is palpably an over-simplification, indeed a dangerous over-simplification, of a complicated state of affairs. There can be no doubt that the position taken by the Argentine government toward the war has been and remains out of line with the stand not only of this Nation but of at least 12 other American republics as well, Nine Latin-American nations are our allies in the war on the Axis. Three others have broken off relations with Germany, Italy and Japan. Argentina is neutral.

IT IS WELL to remember, however, that while the Argentine government has been most vociferous in its professed determination neither to wage war on the Axis or break off diplomatic relations with those powers, the attitude of seven other South American nations has differed only in degree, not in kind, from that of Argentina. On the other hand the Argentine government has declared the United States a "non-belligerent" which means that her neutrality decrees will not be applied to United States vessels and nationals.

There is still the further consideration to keep in mind that regardless of preliminary clashes between the United States and Argentina at various inter-American conferences the latter has always come around at the end. Thus Argentina signed the Declaration of Lima and the Act and Convention of Havana.

The Rio conference may have a similarly happy conclusion regardless of initial differences and difficulties. That possibility certainly cannot be dismissed in view of the fact that the people of Argentina are overwhelmingly anti-Axis in their sentiments.

Certainly it is doubtful if Argentina would be willing to maintain her present attitude if she had to do so alone. What is more likely is that she will gauge her course at Rio by the stand taken by the neighboring republics of South America.

DESPITE the superficial similarities between this conference and those that have preceded it, the Rio meeting belongs in a class by itself. Old criteria which could be applied to determine the success or failure of past conferences do not apply now.

In the past, no agreement was without the unanimous consent of all 21 republics. It was possible, therefore, for any one nation to block an agreement simply by refusing to accept it. The Rio conference is, however, not a conference whose end purpose is a written agreement. Its purpose is to bring about a parallelism of action.

If, as a result of the discussions now taking place in the Brazilian capital, some of the South American republics that are still on the fence get off the fence and join the United Nations or, alternatively, take their cue from Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela and break off relations with the Axis powers, the Rio conference will be a success.

FROM THIS POINT of view the Rio meeting must be adjudged the most important ever held in this hemisphere. It is one thing to ask nations to sign a compact which binds them to consult together in a crisis. It is asking much more of them to go to war or to take steps just short of belligerency. After all, the United States did not go to war until it was attacked. It is not surprising that, despite our experience and the experience of many other one-time neutrals, some of the nations in this hemisphere continue to cling to the hope that they will be spared if they continue to operate on a "business-as-usual" policy vis-a-vis the Axis.

IN HIS BRILLIANT opening address to the Rio conference, Mr. Welles made clear the naivete of such a stand. The Axis philosophy of international relations allows no permanent place for independent nations. It recognizes only master nations, on the one hand, subject states and satellites, on the other. If the Axis wins no nation in this hemisphere will be free. The fight against the Axis is, therefore, of common concern to all.

The Undersecretary of State took the realistic position that while the United States would welcome the entry into the war on our side of any American nation which has not yet done so, active belligerency is in some cases of less immediate importance than the breaking off of diplomatic relations between the American republics and the Axis. For as long as Axis missions are permitted to remain in the capitals of South America so long will Fifth Column movements continue to flourish and Axis espionage have American bases from which to operate.

MR. WELLES' speech was a powerful argument for action. But what will finally determine the attitude of the Latin-American nations still on the fence are not words and arguments, however sound and cogent, but the course of the war. As long as there are any doubts in South America as to the outcome of the struggle a certain degree of hesitancy can be expected. Some of them—Argentina is a case in point—feel themselves too exposed, too weak, too uncertain of American capacity to defend them, to risk war. And Axis agents have done everything possible to hammer home the idea that the Axis will triumph.

The outcome of the conference at Rio, therefore, is being decided on the battlefields of Russia and Libya and in the far-flung Pacific theater, far more than around the conference table. Fortunately the over-all picture is, from a long-range view, not unfavorable.

The war may be long as it certainly will be hard. Much remains to be done, particularly in the field of American production, before final victory is won. But no American has any doubt as to the outcome. That ringing certainty, expressed by Mr. Welles in his notable address, should help undermine any beliefs which certain governments of South America may have entertained to the contrary.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Mrs. Roosevelt

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT is one of the most formidable topics in the United States at this writing, hardly less forbidding than that great journalistic taboo, religion, but, nevertheless, she has come out for condemnation and punishment without trial in the case of a picket line at a New York theater, and that, I believe, calls for a challenge and for this busy lady's retirement from the public eye and ear, although it is not to be hoped that she would cease to exert herself politically and personally in the departments of the Government. Of course, any ordinary individual may refuse to cross a picket line, "fair or unfair," but Mrs. Roosevelt partakes of the highest office in the Nation, and when one who personifies the Presidency as an office publicly repudiates fairness and right of citizens to be heard in disputes affecting their livelihood and property, everyone has a stake in the case.

This is no mere interpretation of Mrs. Roosevelt's attitude.

It is her expressed position.

She wrote in her column, "I don't cross picket lines," and she said at the theater that she couldn't cross a picket line, "fair or unfair," which just means that the owner of the property, the producer with his investment of work and money, the playwright, and all the workers in the show, from the box office to the doorman in the alley, deserved no hearing on the merits of the case, even if they had been victims of a racket, however vicious, if the pickets bore credentials or merely acted under orders from some professional unioneer who might have corrupt motives.

EVEN in Moscow the defendants in the liquidation trials were given a chance to face their accusers and state their defense, except those who had fled the country, but Mrs. Roosevelt is not that generous.

If Mrs. Roosevelt is ignorant of the great moral fallibility of the professional unioneer, ignorant of the corruption and persecution which commonly mark the operations of unions, then she has a public duty to inform herself, and even before that she has a further duty never to make blanket commitments, involving the Presidency, to condemn without trial persons who are victims of injustice.

She has no right to be ignorant now of the commonness or corruption, criminality and persecution in the union movement. There is a substantial heap of undisputed disclosures and court convictions proving this, and the union involved in the instant case is known to everyone who knows anything at all about a subject on which Mrs. Roosevelt presumed to take sides, as a dictatorship whose constitution may be revoked at will and entirely by its president, who then may rule by his own decree or whim.

That is written in the constitution of the Musicians' union, and Judge Ferdinand Pecora, certainly no labor-baiter, was so astonished to discover this clause in a trial which came before him that he exclaimed incredulously: "Do you call that a constitution?"

I AM coming to the belief that Mrs. Roosevelt knows almost nothing about unionism and that she has closed her mind to the truth. In the present case her written discussion certainly suggested a vague and confused idea of the dispute, but that would make no difference to anyone who was firmly determined to prejudge and precondemn the union's opponents, regardless of the rights and wrongs of the issue.

For nine years Mrs. Roosevelt has been crossing, recrossing and cross-hatching the United States in endless, restless travels, covering hundreds of thousands of miles. She has written and spoken millions of words and collected a vast income, and the net public result in accomplishment today is no reform or substantial achievement, but an aggravation of certain extremely dangerous group relationships within the population and the salting of Government agencies with personal friends, not all of whom are free of the taint of a political philosophy and association which wars implacably and uncompromisingly against everything that Americanism is.

It was bad enough in time of peace and mere internal economic and social distress that Communists and fellow travelers should infest the Government by invitation of honored and trusted personages, but to welcome them now in droves to departments having to do with public security is to invite the ghastliest treachery in certain conceivable circumstances in the future course of this war.

Mrs. Roosevelt's complete retirement would not impair the efficiency of the war effort and would contribute appreciably to peace and unity at home.

Supreme Command

By Mark Sullivan

Nelson Needs President's Confidence

THERE IS the man, Mr. Donald Nelson, set up by President Roosevelt to have supreme command. And there is the thing Mr. Nelson is supposed to do, namely, produce war supplies in maximum quantity.

It is with the first that current discussion deals—who is Mr. Nelson; can he do it; how monumental the job; the difficulties in the way. Most of this discussion is excited in tone, creates the impression that our production of war goods is in a bad way. In some respects it is. Yet if some cool and competent engineer and auditor were to examine America's progress toward becoming one great arsenal, he would probably make an assuring report.

What we are attempting is mass production on a national scale—in effect, turning the whole industrial structure of the country into a single factory. Under the best of conditions, the early stages of mass production, even in one plant or industry, such as took place in Mr. Henry Ford's plant years ago, are awkward, cumbersome, attended by set-backs and discouragements. In the nature of things, progress must be made by trial and error, for it is a new thing; and much of the trial and error is attended by what seems monumental waste.

YET SOMEHOW, slowly, the great wheels begin to turn. Gradually they achieve a momentum beyond what was originally hoped for. Probably in every American industry where mass production has been adopted, the ultimate output has been beyond what was in the beginning expected. And ultimately the output of our American arsenal will be beyond what either we or Hitler now expect.

We are today making war planes in astonishing numbers. President Roosevelt told Congress the other day that in this present year, 1942, we shall produce 60,000 planes. Mr. Roosevelt is conspicuously a man in whom confidence prevails over caution, and hope over experience. But cool and even pessimistic persons familiar with the field say that at least we will make 50,000 planes; and our achievement is comparable in ships, tanks and other armament.

That is our direction, our momentum, and it exists throughout perhaps five-sixths of our effort. True, our experience with rubber reflects deplorable lack of foresighted action. The lack is not to be charged against any one person, because there was no one person who had the responsibility—this one-man responsibility is what Mr. Nelson is supposed to supply, belatedly. There should have been someone with responsibility and authority, and also vision and drive, long ago. Somewhere along the line of events, someone ought to have foreseen the possibility that our supply of rubber from the East Indies might be interrupted. It should have been foreseen either when our tension with Japan first began, in 1937, or when the war in Europe broke out, in 1939, or when Japan united with the Axis in 1940, or certainly when our relations with Japan became definitely menacing.

BECAUSE we did not foresee and act, there now descends upon us, in our scarcity of rubber, a calamity which, in its effect upon our war effort, to say nothing of civilian inconvenience, is as great a setback and slow-down as the disaster at Pearl Harbor. Had we foreseen and acted, there were steps we could have taken—we could have piled up a great store of rubber. We could have made forehanded arrangements to produce an inferior but usable rubber from South America. We could have planted on our own soil a kind of plant which would have produced some rubber; most readily of all, we could have set about manufacture of synthetic rubber.

There were those who foresaw—but they did not have responsibility and authority. Authority is the thing Mr. Nelson now needs. It is suggested that, in order to have authority, he should be made a member of the Cabinet. There is little in that. If Mr. Nelson has the authority he ought to have, he is above the Cabinet—to make him a member would make him merely an equal. During the Great War Mr. Bernard M. Baruch was not a Cabinet member, but had authority that enabled him to do a superb job. He had authority just because everybody knew he had it—everybody knew that President Wilson trusted him completely, would back him up without limit. If, now, Mr. Nelson has that kind of relation to President Roosevelt, he needs no seat at the Cabinet table nor other formal designation of rank.

The kind of authority Mr. Nelson needs is that which is expressed, not in formal rank, nor official documents, but in the personal attitude of the President. The relation between the two will be watched by persons within the Presidential circle and in the Administration. There are some among them whose whole place in the world depends upon their known intimacy and access to the White House. If these are made to understand that Mr. Nelson has Presidential authority and confidence, then Mr. Nelson will have authority. If the President should happen, by so faint a sign as a fleeting facial expression, to show any abatement of confidence in Mr. Nelson, then Mr. Nelson's prestige will vanish, and with it his authority and effectiveness.

Aliens To Receive Registration Certificates Under New System

A registration system which will equip all enemy aliens in the United States with identification certificates, as required by the President's recent proclamation, was announced yesterday by Attorney General Francis Biddle.

Expected to affect more than a million German, Italian and Japanese nationals residing in this country, the registration machinery will be started on the West Coast—the zone where immediate danger is most likely and home of 135,843 enemy aliens.

Aliens elsewhere in the country will be registered later.

Biddle said the aliens, after investigation, will be issued cards somewhat similar to a driver's permit, which will bear the individual's photograph, index fingerprint and signature.

The regulations require that all enemy aliens living in the Army's Western Command—California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona, Montana, Utah and Idaho—must apply for the cards between February 2 and 7, while those living elsewhere will apply between February 9 and 28. Applications are to be entered at the nearest first or second class postoffice or county seat, Biddle added.

Biddle said the objective of the stricter check on identity is "the dual one of strengthening our own internal safety and protecting the loyal alien, even if he has technically become an enemy."

He emphasized that the new program will not duplicate 1940's registration of all noncitizens, but will "obtain supplementary information" and facilitate regulation of travel by the aliens.

He also pointed out that under the new system, the registrants are required to report all changes of employment, while under the 1940 registration they were required only to report changes of address.

The check-up on the applicants under the indentification order will include queries about relatives, he added. The aliens will be asked, for instance, whether they have any near relatives serving in the armed forces of foreign nations.

The program, worked out after consultation with Lieut. Gen. J. L. DeWitt, commander of the Ninth Corps Area, will be under the direction of Special Assistant Earl G. Harrison. Biddle said he was considering setting up a special Justice Department division, headed by Harrison, to handle the regulation of aliens.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 15.—If the average British family could sit down at dinner with the typical American family to discuss war experiences, what would the Britishers say are the best preparations that an American family can make for war?

The common people of Britain have been through more than two years of harrowing war experience, full of suffering, misery, mistakes—as well as hope. In order to profit by the British experience, the American Institute of Public Opinion asked its British affiliate, the British Institute, to conduct a survey among the common people of Britain on the following question:

"From your own experience, what would you say are the best preparations an American, living in the United States, can make in case this is a long war?"

The chief piece of advice which the British would give to the average family in America is to begin getting accustomed to a simple and spartan life now, with few luxuries and no waste.

Following are the principal items of advice given, in order of mention, in the survey:

1.—Get used to doing without things NOW. Live simply; cut out luxuries. Conserve your money, lend as much as possible in war savings. Volunteer for war work immediately and be prepared to make all necessary sacrifices for the war effort.

2.—Insist on efficient civilian defense. See that there are sufficient shelters and that people know where those shelters are. Also, be sure the fire fighting service is thoroughly organized.

3.—Save everything possible. Avoid waste. Throw nothing away. Americans are too wasteful.

4.—Keep fit; keep calm; don't worry. Don't listen to rumors. Be prepared to take the rough with the smooth. Above all, don't talk too much.

5.—Insist on immediate rationing of goods that may become scarce. Don't wait.

6.—Insist on price control and stabilization of wages NOW. Don't postpone it until inflation is upon you.

At least three of the items in the above list are already under discussion in the United States. A price control bill is now before Congress. The principle embodied in the bill is strongly approved by American public opinion, Institute polls show. The public would, however, go farther than Congress, for it would approve wage control in addition to price control.

There has been widespread discussion also of rationing, and many basic items, such as rubber, have already been brought under rationing programs.

There has likewise been heated discussion and some criticism of the American civilian defense program.

Netherlands Indies' Industry Expands Under War Effort

As a part of the mobilization of economic resources in the Netherlands Indies, the government has been encouraging the establishment of new industries, according to reports reaching the United States.

"War has greatly altered the foreign trade of the Netherlands Indies," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "Previously these Pacific islands engaged in world-wide distribution of commodities for which there was a general demand. Imports came mostly from the Netherlands, Great Britain and Japan.

"In 1940, the United States became the colony's principal source of supplies; trade relations between the two countries had been practically war-born only a quarter of a century ago. The latter half of 1940 showed a 60 per cent increase in goods imported from the United States.

"The colony's exporters also have been reported disturbed by the possible effects of war on their virtual monopoly of quinine and their extensive trade in rubber, petroleum, tin, sugar and other products.

"Though possessing many essentials to industry, the islands had developed few factories. Basic minerals were largely undeveloped. There are extensive coal fields in Sumatra, and coal is found on other islands. Iron is also available on Sumatra and has been mined on the island of Pulu Laut, off the southeast point of Borneo.

"In addition to much raw material and an available labor supply, water power is so abundant on the island of Java that hydroelectric plants supply electric light to the most remote mountain villages and hotels.

"The turn to industry by the Netherlands Indies became apparent by imports from the United States in the latter half of 1940, especially shipments of metals and chemicals. United States exports of 'iron and steel semimanufactures' exceeded the preceding year by 180 per cent.

"More than tripled were orders for structural steel, pipes and fittings, nails, bolts and other factory building material. Forty times the normal amount of railway track material went to the islands. Shipments of industrial acids and other chemicals increased twentyfold over 1939.

"Plans for further utilization of hydroelectric power were reflected in increased shipments of electrical machinery. Demand also increased for United States motor trucks and buses for operation over the extensive network of excellent highways covering the principal islands.

Takes a Good Man to Be Pilot, but Not Superman, Army Finds

By the Associated Press

New York.—The Army's sharply accelerated pilot training program is expected to put to rest once and for all the idea that it takes a superman to fly.

It takes a good man, who reacts quickly in an emergency.

It takes a man who is reasonably cautious, the kind who will turn on his own oxygen supply before he actually feels the need.

It takes a man with a good heart, lungs and eyes, and the ability to concentrate hard on a job.

But there aren't enough supermen in the United States to create the big air force in contemplation for this war.

For years, various agencies have been carrying on intensive studies of pilots to find out what caused crashes.

Conclusions Drawn

Among the findings are these:

That the emotional stress on a pilot probably is greater than that on persons in any other calling.

That they can develop functional nervous disorders lumped together under the aeroneurosis.

That ordinary physical defects, principally bad eyesight, account for rejection of most candidates for flying training. There is no mystery in the process of pilot selection.

That personally, a good pilot is a four-square individual. He is intense, generous, warm-hearted, friendly, frank, vigorous and devoted to duty and family.

Pilots Made, Not Born

The most important conclusion is that good pilots are made, not born.

Almost equally important is the fact that fliers are thrown into an unnatural element, the air, and the sooner they accustom themselves to funny reactions, the better off they are.

In a measure, they have to overcome their instinct for self-preservation and an inborn fear of falling. They have to get used to what doctors call psychic shock — seeing someone else get killed in a plane. So does the ordinary foot soldier.

They have to recognize signs of their own fatigue and quit flying until they are rested. And they have to divest themselves of a hero status.

"Flying has become an occupation instead of a stunt," wrote Capt. Harry G. Armstrong, of the Army Air Corps' engineering laboratories in Dayton, Ohio, in a study reproduced by the American Medical Association.

"This slow but definite change has deflated the pilot's ego and thereby created a further emotional stress."

Unusual Strains

Flying subjects the body and brain to unusual—and, in the case of the inexperienced, frightening—experiences. A pull-out from a dive drains the blood from the head momentarily, causing blurred vision and sometimes lack of consciousness.

Oxygen-want in the tissues was a common complaint, and the cause of many crashes, until medical science decreed that fliers must begin breathing a mixture of oxygen and air at altitudes of 2 miles or even lower.

The torment of cold at high altitudes has been overcome with electrically heated flying suits.

But such things still fall far short of a buildup of a superman for the average flier.

"The popular idea that a flier must be a superman is utterly absurd," Lieut. Col. Fabian L. Pratt, commandant of the School of Aviation Medicine, at Randolph Field, Tex., said two years ago.

"It would be much nearer the truth to say 'Anyone can fly.' Flying itself is now just as prosaic and commonplace as riding in a motor car, and not more dangerous."

Young men make the best airmen. They have vigor, zest for adventure, enthusiasm and courage untamed by the caution of experience. Emotionally they ought to be a bit on the unstable side. Occasional anger would not be a drawback.

Candidates should have a blood pressure well below 135, a pulse below 80, good teeth and no serious physical defects. Above all, they need good eyesight. It takes a sharp eye to manage a machine which covers more than 500 feet in the time it takes for the heart to beat once.

London Life Nearer Normal As Blitz Mementoes Fade

By Russell Landstrom
Associated Press Staff Writer

London—Great, ugly gaps appear in rows of buildings in some of London's busiest streets . . . jagged sections of wall remain with rusty iron pipes coiling about them in wayward patterns . . . a few bomb craters gape as of old.

But thanks to months of respite from heavy air raids, London and other cities in Britain have managed not only to tear down ruins and haul away debris, but do a good deal of reconstruction.

So severe was the damage that crews still toil with heavy machinery and by hand to remove the more unsightly evidences of the Battle of Britain. Often the work of demolition and new construction goes on side by side.

More than 85,000 workers have been on the job of patching upward of 95 per cent of the damaged houses in the London region. Expedient repairs have been made to Parliament, Westminster Abbey, hospitals and a number of other historic and public buildings. Thousands of other workers are engaged on private and public premises.

Understandably, much of this is temporary. Real rehabilitation must await war's end.

"We hope to combine in postwar London the best of the old with the most attractive of the new," said one official. "It would therefore be wrong to try to do any building now which would fit poorly into the planned city of the future."

But while the bombed and burned contours of London and other cities have changed slowly, life therein has undergone many relatively swift alterations.

Shelter Population Dwindles

The population of public shelters in London has dwindled to some 16,000 nightly, only a small fraction of the vast number who once lived at least half their lives underground or huddled in surface refuge.

Children have flocked back to the cities—not long ago it was estimated they were arriving in London at the rate of 1500 a week—creating a metropolitan teacher shortage.

Theaters and movies are enjoying a sustained boom. People have more money than ever and find showgoing a tremendous relief from the blackout. Each week the government gets about $1,200,000 from the entertainment tax.

Londoners are able now to view their blitz experiences and even death itself with some detachment. Emlyn Williams' play, "The Morning Star," a comedy-drama of an air raid ordeal, finds favor, and the ghostly highjinks of Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit" are as popular as ever.

Some authorities accuse the public of too much letting down, citing blackout carelessness, inattention to fire-watching and wholesale failure to carry gas masks.

Records show that crime has increased in London, especially violations by headstrong juveniles. Robberies in the blackout and burglaries are more frequently in the news along with stories of sex offenses.

Magistrates have had to deal with a growing number of bigamy cases, a majority of them involving men in service. Home accidents in Britain have increased to more than 8000 a year and safety experts say most of them were avoidable.

The number of divorce petitions doubled in a year. Prof. C. E. M. Joad says, "With so many families separated and so many homes broken up, some such trend was almost inevitable."

Deprivations and curtailments continue. In one big London store there was a five-hour line-up for corsets—women customers fearing a scarcity because of the ban on manufacture of certain rubber products.

Women complain about shortages, prices and quality of merchandise. They say they need $15 to $18 for a good pair of slacks and are obliged to pay $3 a yard for dress material that used to cost less than half that amount and was better quality.

They say there is a shortage of most good cosmetics, adding: "The stuff we get now is chiefly made up by the chemist with whatever ingredients he can get."

Permanent waves are still to be had for $3 and up, but they're rationed by the operators who often are badly in need of equipment replacement.

Seeking Spending Curbs

A reduction of the clothing coupon ration is expected by some trade authorities and it has been hinted that hat rationing is in the offing.

A system of vouchers may be introduced to limit spending for clothing, food, drink, tobacco and entertainment.

Proponents of the idea say it would put an end to excessively expensive restaurant meals and kill the black market in food.

The ministry of food has warned that "we may have to tighten our belts" although it was pointed out that Britain still would be the best-fed nation in Europe.

The individual egg ration is four a month. Cheese will be reduced from 3 ounces to 2. Much of the beer is going to be weaker, and a lot of liquor is certain to be of the worst speakeasy variety.

Hot water bottles are scarce. Books will have paper backs and narrower margins, and will be printed on poorer quality paper. Authors are having to cut their copy 25 to 50 per cent because of a paper shortage.

Hotel, restaurant and apartment house help is in demand. The quality goes down in inverse ratio to the need for greater efficiency and resourcefulness. One of the nation's largest catering firms has turned 50 of its tea shops into cafeterias.

Yet as the war makes deeper inroads into the life of everyone, people write to newspapers about solving crossword puzzles or whether the British Broadcasting Co. should continue presenting a Bible play in modern idiom.

Jeremiahs thunder against what most consider unimportant, and in parallel columns, crackling voices are raised almost constantly exhorting the fatigued, the discouraged and the brooding not to fall into the twilight sleep that invites disaster.

Price Declares Censorship Won't Mean 'News Blackout'

By the Associated Press

Byron Price, director of censorship, has announced a code of wartime practices for withholding from publication "certain classes of information which might be of aid to the enemy."

The code was designed particularly for newspapers and magazines, but applies generally to published matter, such as advertising, letters to the editor, columns and interviews with service men.

At the same time, Price announced that J. H. Sorrells, assistant director of censorship who is on leave as executive editor of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, would be in direct charge of administering the code. He will be assisted by a small board of editors and an advisory council of the publishing industry, which will be appointed soon.

Discussing the code, Price said that while its observance would not represent "business as usual," on the other hand "it will not mean a news or editorial blackout."

"It is the hope and expectation of the Office of Censorship," he said, "that the columns of American publications will remain the freest in the world, and will tell the story of our national successes and shortcomings accurately and in much detail."

The code consolidates many of the restrictions on vital information previously issued by various Government agencies. In general it prohibits publication of the character and movement of troops, ships and planes, specifications and location of fortifications, war production figures, general weather conditions and certain kinds of pictures and maps.

John H. Ryan, an assistant director of censorship, announced today the appointment of Stanley P. Richardson, coordinator of international broadcasting, as an aide in his radio division.

Richardson has been given a leave of absence by the American short wave broadcasting industry to enable him to accept the Government post.

The new appointee, who is a veteran newspaperman, has acted for about a year as the representative in New York and Washington of the six companies engaged in international broadcasting, with particular reference to their defense activities.

Expert Explodes Milkmaid Myth

Blacksburg, Va. (AP).—"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"

"I'm not going amilking, sir," she said.

At least, not in this part of the United States, says R. G. Connelly, Virginia Tech extension dairyman.

Milkmaids seem to exist only in nursery rhymes and folklore. Connelly says he doesn't recall having seen a single one in many years on his job, and he doesn't expect women to supply the answer for the serious labor shortage on dairy farms because of the war and increased industrial activity.

"And there's no reason why women should have to milk cows," Connelly declares. More mechanization is a better solution. He calculates a man and two boys can care for 50 cows, milked twice daily, on a fully equipped farm—provided they work long hours and without any lost motion.

The Front Line of This War is in Washington

Never in the history of the world has there been a city like Washington today. Never before, so many people living to work, and working so that the Nation may live. America will win this war because the men behind her guns can fight; and the men and women behind-the-men-behind-the-guns can work. And when the story of Victory is written, and its heroes and heroines counted over, the Workers of Washington will be in the Front Line as they are today.

Kitchen Vital Front In War Against Axis

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

AN ARMY of women is mobilizing today to provide daily fare that will help build the strength and stamina our defense effort requires. The homemakers who make up this army will hold the front against the enemy of malnutrition.

Never before in the history of our country has the "right" food been of such vital importance. The home economists realize they have been issued a challenge, and throughout the country they are meeting it by giving their knowledge of nutrition.

Martha Ellyn

Recently I made a trip to discover what the home economists over the country were doing in the matter of nutritional defense. I found that they were not only emphasizing the value of good nutrition but were striving to meet the problem of the tug on the purse strings which defense has occasioned.

Following are some of their ideas and suggestions for thrift menus, also the recipes they have worked out in their shiny kitchens.

Mrs. Marie Gifford, director of food economics, Armour & Co., Chicago, is in the battle, "pitching" with much enthusiasm and her extensive knowledge of nutrition.

"We can't all don a uniform and enter the ranks of Uncle Sam, but we can make just as important a contribution toward our country's welfare," Miss Marie Gifford, director of food economics, Armour & Co., Chicago, told me. "Our job is to feed our families so well that they will have truly buoyant health, but be so economical in our spending that our budgets will show extras for those defense bonds and stamps.

"Meat is not only one of the important items of expenditures, but one of the most important protective foods in the diet because of its vital proteins and its wealth of B vitamins. To help the Nation's housewives select more adequately and wisely—yet spend less—we have prepared a special booklet on buying and preparing economy meats, and are filling our calendar with lectures and demonstrations before women's clubs and classes in nutrition."

"Defense of Health With Economy Meats," by Miss Gifford, is as patriotic in its red, white and blue jacket as it is in the material designed to give the homemaker help in selecting, preparing and serving more wisely that important protective food—meat.

Included in the booklet are divisions telling, "How Much Shall I Spend for Meat?" "How Many Pounds of Meat Shall I Buy?", "One Week's Meat Allowance for Persons of Various Ages" (children, girls, women, boys, men) and "Suggested Weekly Meat Orders for Family of Four," giving the Liberal Meat Budget—$4 to $4.85 per week, with meat allowance of 12-13 pounds; Moderate Meat Budget, $2.50 to $3 per week, with meat allowance of 9-10 pounds; Minimum Meat Budget, $1.65 to $1.85 per week, with meat allowance of 9-10 pounds.

This booklet may be secured by writing Miss Marie Gifford, director of food economics, Armour & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Ground Beef Delicacy

Illustrative of the way Miss Gifford uses ground beef to make a thrifty, nutritious and attractive meat dish is the following menu and recipe:

Thrift Dishes for Defense

Miss Marie Gifford, Director, Food Economics, Armour & Co., suggests an economy meat dish such as the barbecued meat loaves shown above. This is but one of many delightful dishes that can be made from ground meat which helps both to vary the menus and keep the food budget in the black

Miss Marye Dahnke, Director, Home Economics Department, Kraft Cheese Co., presents a cheese rice cutlet in the starring role of her thrift menu. Cheese is no mere extra but an integral part of the meal when prepared in cutlet form and served with tomato sauce. See recipe elsewhere on this page

Mrs. Clara Gebhardt Snyder, Director, Department of Foods and Nutrition, Wheat Flour Institute, meets the challenge to the purse strings with a vegetable shortcake as shown above. This dish deserves a blue ribbon as a real dollar stretcher, for it is thrifty and contains all the things for which the nutrition yardstick calls

Thrift Dinner

Barbecued Beef Loaves.
Brbwned Potatoes.
Creamed Carrots.
Bread and Butter.
Apple Crisp.
Coffee.

Barbecued Beef Loaves—Cut 1 strip of bacon fine and mix with ¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs, ¼ cup evaporated milk and 1 teaspoon salt. Add ¾ pound ground beef from branded beef and ¾ pound ground lean pork, and blend well. Shape into 4 individual oblong meat loaves and place in shallow oiled pan.

Next make a barbecue sauce by heating together 1-3 cup catsup, 1 tablespoon vinegar, ½ tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, ¼ teaspoon chili powder and 1 tablespoon chopped onion. Pour over the meat loaves and bake 45 minutes at 350 degrees, basting once or twice. Makes four servings.

This year of 1942 finds each of us stepping more and more firmly into full wartime activities. Volunteer war work and community endeavors dot each week's calendar.

Accent on Thrift

In keeping with the emergency of the times, Mrs. Clara Gebhardt Snyder, director, department of foods and nutrition, Wheat Flour Institute, Chicago, has met the challenge with Purse String Menus. She has so designed the food as to help keep perplexed furrows from the homemaker's brow.

I learned from Mrs. Snyder in a recent interview that menus which feature flavor, ease in preperation and concern for the wartime pocketbook are to be her Institute Idea headliners for this year.

There is no right-about-face in her point of view as to good nutrition. She cited the recent edition of a book by Dr. Henry Sherman, renowned for his work in the chemistry of food and nutrition, in which he says, as he has said for many years, that from the point of view of economy and good nutrition, the wise homemaker plans her menus around bread and milk. These two basic foods supplement each other efficiently. "In view of the fact that homemakers now have enriched flour and enriched bread," said Mrs. Snyder, Dr. Sherman's statement should have special emphasis now that flour and bread belong to the family of protective foods that supplement milk with even greater efficiency than in the past.

Uses Enriched Flour

In the following menu by Mrs. Snyder you will note that the biscuits are made with enriched flour as a basis for the main dish, and extra biscuits are suggested for the bread and butter part. The vegetables are in a cream sauce, which is a pleasing way to introduce milk into the general family dietary. The biscuits, too, are made with milk.

Here are Mrs. Snyder's menu and recipes:

Thrift Dinner Menu

Vegetable Shortcake.
Peach and Prune Salad.
Biscuits, Butter.
Spice Cup Cakes.
Coffee, Tea, Milk.

The vegetable shortcake is a recipe to be saved for a Lenten dish. Follow this recipe:

Vegetable Shortcake—Sift 2 cups sifted flour with 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Add 2/3 to ¾ cup milk to form soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead for ½ minute. Roll dough ½ inch thick. Cut with a 3-inch biscuit cutter. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes. Melt 3 tablespoons butter and blend with 3 tablespoons enriched flour. Add 1 cup hot milk gradually, stirring constantly. Cook until thickened. Add 1 cup sliced cooked carrots and 1 cup cooked or canned, drained peas. Cook until vegetables are heated. Split hot biscuits and place on serving plates. Pour the creamed vegetables between and over biscuits. If desired, a half-cup of grated, nippy cheese may be added to the white sauce. Yield: Serves about six.

With a crusade for the better nutrition of all Americans, as the Nation goes into its greatest all-out wartime effort, cheese has become more important than ever before in the everyday diet of Americans.

Marye Dahnke, director, home economics, Kraft Cheese Co., Chicago, is another nationally known home economist who is putting her best defense foot forward and sharing her knowledge of nutrition. While I was in her office she was busy calling home economists to attend a defense nutrition meeting.

Production Accelerated

The reasons for the dramatic place that cheese holds today in good nutrition were outlined by Miss Dahnke. She pointed out that cheese, a highly concentrated protein food, with its important food values, has been highlighted during the last year and especially in present months. The spotlight of increased public attention was first turned to cheese in March, 1941, when the call came to the cheese industry, under the Lend-Lease Act, for prodigiously accelerated cheese production to meet the needs of Great Britain, in addition to those of our own population.

Two hundred and fifty million pounds of cheddar cheese, more familiarly known as American cheese, was the size of the order, to be produced, over and above home consumption needs over a period of 15 months. The cheese industry set to work immediately on the most gigantic production problem it had ever faced.

Miss Dahnke says, "Cheese has been recognized from Biblical times as one of the most important of all concentrated foods—carried by the marching armies of the world since the time of David, and today for marching civilian populations as well, geared to greatest wartime effort, cheese, along with its parent product milk, has a vital function to perform in good nutrition.

Good Main Course

Discussing cheese cookery, Miss Dahnke said: "Meal planners in recent years have learned much about cheese cookery, about main dishes made with cheese, about the use of cheese with low-cost vegetables and other foods to make meals more interesting and more highly nutritious. Today when our three-times-daily meals bear the important burden of keeping the Nation better nourished, more adequately fed than ever before, cheese, along with other essential foods, should be served often, wisely, and well."

A dinner menu, planned with cheese in the starring role, is given below with the recipe for the principal dish.

Bouillon Cracker
Cheese Rice Cutlets
Buttered Green Beans
Head Lettuce French Dressing
Hot Rolls Butter
Fruit Compote Brownies
Coffee

The following is Miss Dahnke's recipe for making the cheese rice cutlets:

Cheese-Rice Cutlets—Combine 3 cups hot cooked rice with ½ pound shredded American cheese, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 beaten egg. Form into 6 cutlets, roll them in buttered fine bread crumbs and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees for 30 minutes, or until lightly browned. Heat 1 can condensed tomato soup and serve each cutlet with this hot sauce. Do not dilute the tomato soup.

These are the suggestions of three nationally known home economists, each a specialist in her class. All of them have up-to-the-minute laboratory kitchens where tests are continuously being made on the products of their companies. The Post will bring you suggestions and thrift ideas for menus and recipes from other nationally known home economists on this page at later dates.

Four Excellent Exercises Will Keep You Fit

By Ida Jean Kain

ALICE MARBLE, director of physical fitness for women in America, says that streamlines are healthy. The modern figure—well developed chest, supple waist and slim hips—is right in line with good physical condition. It goes with a normal amount of exercise.

Miss Marble recommends walking, bicycling, skating, skiing, all outdoor sports, including tennis. Get as much outdoor exercise as you can squeeze into your program. You should make it a rule to walk at least 3 miles a day in addition to your sports hobby.

To Firm the Midriff

POSITION: Lying on back on floor with feet elevated on footstool or seat of low chair.

MOVEMENT: Raise the hips off floor until the body is in a straight line from chest to toes. Hold for a second, then lower slowly. As soon as you can do this rhythmically, make it more efficient by swinging arms up from the sides and back on floor beyond the head. Do this as the hips are raised. Swing arms back down at sides as hips are lowered. The important thing throughout the exercise is the upward pull of the abdominal muscles. Do not arch the back. Repeat 12 times, gradually increasing to 25.

To Trim the Waist

POSITION: Lying on back on floor, knees flexed and feet on floor, hands clasped overhead on floor.

MOVEMENT: Try to keep the shoulders and small of the back on floor as you twist at the waist to rest alternate thighs on floor. Do the exercise slowly and forcibly, concentrating on the twist at the waist.

To Tone Hip Muscles

POSITION: Lying face down on floor, head pillowed on folded arms, legs straight down.

MOVEMENT: Slowly raise leg from hip high in air. Keep knee straight. Slowly lower to floor and repeat with other leg. Continue for 10 counts, later on 25.

To Keep Supple

POSITION: Stand with feet parallel and slightly apart, hands clasped on top of head. Have hips still throughout movement, but have arms and shoulders relaxed to avoid tension.

MOVEMENT: Bend sideward until you feel a pull all along the outer curve of the waist. Keep body in perfect alignment as you bend. Don't let hips or abdomen jut out. Return to erect position, relax, and bend to opposite side. Repeat 10 counts, later 20. This exercise should be performed slowly and accurately. To prevent tension, relax completely between each exercise.

Foster Parent of Several 'Fatherless' Children Is Stanch Advocate of 'Still-Tongue' Policy for Unwed Mother Who Is Weighing Marriage Proposal

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am hoping you will see fit to bring to your readers' attention this reaction to your reply of January 14 to "I. H. J."—a college graduate who bore a child out of wedlock three years ago and two days later renounced claim to the infant. (Or, as she explains, "two days later the child was placed in a home.") Now she is in love with a fine man who wants to marry her, and she asks whether he is entitled to know about this "chapter in her past."

While advising her to let conscience and intuition mold her decision, the general tenor of your remarks suggests that you are unsympathetic to the idea of an unwed mother surrendering her child permanently to other guardianship,—and you remind this mother that if she were to marry, keeping her secret, there might come a time when "the specter of her first-born's unknown personality and possible lack of loving care would wistfully beseech or ironically mock her, from behind the eyes of other little ones who matter-of-factly called her 'mother'."

Being the mother of several adopted children, both boys and girls, I do resent your even mildly hinting that her baby could be in anything but conscientious and loving hands. I venture to think that adopting parents have more love to give their foster children than many parents who produce their own. In my opinion, the solution of this girl's problem is simple: Let her keep her own counsel concerning the past. Most psychologists will agree that in cases of this kind, more havoc may be wrought to the individual life and character by habitual indulgence in remorseful self-condemnation and attempts to atone than by the irrevocable "sin" committed.

Stepping stones to a better life include: Facing the unfortunate facts, arriving at decisions which make for the greatest good of the greatest number, and sticking to them. Nothing is to be gained by sentimental moping, and without wishing to be flippant, I suggest the motto, "Don't cry over spilt milk." And, also, "Let bygones be bygones."

I know of two cases in which girls were confronted by the question—to tell or not to tell?—which troubles "I. H. J." One girl told her fiance about her fatherless child, who had been adopted. Result? He married her—yes. But he has been jealous and suspicious of her every action since. The other girl prudently decided, "My past is my cross to bear alone." She is happily married, and more solicitous of her husband's wishes and comfort than the average wife, because doubly appreciative of her married security.

I am reluctant to criticize one whom I admire as much as I do you, Miss Haworth, but I cannot understand why you would add to this girl's indecision by burdening her with further foreboding doubts, just when she is on the threshold of a better life. Did she not pay the full price of her "mistake" during the long, lonely months of her pregnancy? What alternative had she to giving her child away? Would it have been better to "interrupt" the pregnancy? Or would you have preferred her to cling to the child, thus stigmatizing the latter as "fatherless" and visiting a permanent social handicap on both?

I feel this girl did consider the child's welfare in giving her away. I feel that in so doing she contrived the most foresighted solution of the problem for both. And I am hoping she will decide to bury her secret in her heart, marry her "fine" suitor, and embark without misgivings on a good life with him. Sincerely,

CONSTANT READER.

A Benevolent Opinion, Colored by Gratitude

DEAR C. R.: It is devoutly to be wished that your artless analysis and recommendations (and, I venture to think, fictional illustrations)—even though undoubtedly weighted by your feeling of gratitude to those unwed mothers who produced your children—are more constructively applicable to this situation than my earlier comment may be. However, it is plain you are speaking from the hard-and-fast assumption that the child is enjoying foster-parental care. And such was not my inference.

On the contrary, I judged the girl to mean—in harking back to the infant's having been "placed in a home"—that the latter had been consigned to institutional care, such as the state holds forth to "foundlings." Had the child been claimed either then or later, by adopting parents, I believe the mother would have said so, specifically.

Her failure to clarify the point left the more melancholy assumption implicit in the picture—thus giving rise to speculations concerning the long-range possible effects upon the mother's personality of inhibited preoccupation with her disowned child's ignominious status. But let us hope, for the sake of both, that your optimistic premise is the true one.

College Girl Rebuked By One Who Envies Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl graduate of high school, writing in reference to your reply of January 13 to "L. R."—the junior year college girl who is failing in her studies because her father won't "send her away to school." I think you are right in calling her a spoiled parasite.

When you stop to consider life, isn't it singular? There are so many young persons (myself included) who would give 10 years of their life to have the chance this girl is so foolishly disdaining. I can't tell you how much such an opportunity would mean to me. I yearn to go to college, but circumstances over which I have no control make this impossible—at least for now.

My first choice of profession is registered nurse. But because of defective eyesight, I failed to pass probation. My second choice is to be a nutritionist—but so far, I have been unable to promote this ambition, due to financial handicaps. However, I am working hard now and planning for the day when I can pay for study long that line.

If only "L. R." knew enough about life to realize how how fortunate she is to have a father who can and will see her through college—even though it takes her six years, as he says—I am sure she would stop grumbling and buckle down to work, as you tell her to.

Sincerely, WILMA P.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Children In Wartime

This is one of a series of parents' questions answered by the Child Study Association of America in its booklet, "Children in Wartime."

Radio Listening— Is It Too Exciting?

WHAT about the radio? Aren't we all overdoing it? Wouldn't it be better for the children not to listen so continuously? Along with the terribly exciting and often distressing war news, they are also getting the exciting dramatic programs. It all adds up to a pretty heavy diet of excitement. Yet the children seem to be drawn to it like moths to the flame.

CHILDREN are well aware of exciting things happening in the world around them, and radio offers one way for them to take part in these happenings vicariously. One of our greatest problems is to help children feel that they have a share in all this, that they play a part in it. The radio, addressing as it does each listener directly, makes the children part of the great world outside. There are limits, of course; and a steady, nonstop stream of continuous radio should be avoided. In fact, the children themselves often turn off the radio when they have had enough. Children and adults, too, can be appealed to for some moderation in this respect on a basis of common sense and household peace.

It is undesirable, moreover, for children to have so much excitement aroused with too little chance to drain it off in action. Adults must help to provide the antidote by seeing that the children have plenty of active things to do and that other interests are not crowded out entirely.

While nobody looks at obscure me,
It's the celebrities they go to see.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

A call to Uncle Sam to help them return from their tax-exempt South Sea Island has been received from the Adam Stalactites, who with the Noah Stalactites of Pacific Beach, Ltd., California, left in their yacht, The Ark, last summer for a permanent home on their island, Excelsior. Both Stalactite families were disgruntled with the tax situation, and the way things generally were going in this country. They were building a permanent estate on their island when the Pearl Harbor incident occurred, making their further sojourn in that region unsafe. If transportation is provided them by the Government, they probably will return for the duration to the historic Adam Stalactite home in Adamtown.

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, eccentric dowager, caused another social furore yesterday at a meeting of the committee on arrangements for the Ball of Waterloo (formerly the Emerald and Champagne Ball) to be held early next month in the Belshazzer room of the Hotel Swank.

When Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger, chairman of the committee, reported a stag shortage for the ball and especially a lack of men in uniform—due to the tightening up on Army and Navy leaves—Mrs. Beetle suggested that all theater ushers, bellhops, hotel doormen, bus drivers and policemen who were off duty be induced to attend in their uniforms. "These men have even more colorful and attractive uniforms than our naval and military officers," said Mrs. Beetle.

Mrs. Bigwigger declared the suggestion "communistic," and the meeting adjourned in an uproar.

Bombing De Luxe

Swankiest thing in air-raid shelters is that being constructed by the Parvenu Popinjays under their town house. The shelter will be furnished on modernistic lines and decorated in black and orchid. It will be replete with cocktail bar, salad bar, make-up bar, cana pe bar, magazine bar and pajama bar. "We are also thinking of installing a system of Roman baths so that our guests may pass their time profitably," said Mrs. Gilderly.

Mrs. Featherton Dauber, who has just opened another dress shoppe, announces the showing tomorrow of a smart line of hostess gowns for air-raid shelters.

The Melting Pot

All of Truthtown's social sets were represented at the Pan-American tea and pottery exhibit Mrs. Roswell Clymer gave Wednesday at the Hotel Arabesque.

Outstanding members of the sporting set present were Mr. and Mrs. Mike McPace, Mrs. Slinker Hopping, the Artemus Whiffles and Ambrose Piccadilly. The ultraconservative set was represented by Miss Jennie Van Stiff, the Buffington Birdhavens, and the Julian Barnacles. Popular members of the intellectual set present were Dr. Horatio Duller, the Orlando Birdsongs and Miss Minerva Digges Dossier. From the artistic set came Montgomery Aspic, Mrs. Barclay Putter and Daphne Doolittle. The career set was represented by Mrs. St. John Chinchilla, weekly columnist for the Huntstown Bugle, and Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, who is now restoring old cellars for use as air-raid shelters.

Despite the diversity of interests represented everything seemed to move smoothly, and all of the guests told the hostess it had been a "lovely party."

Club Note

"The Fauna and Flora of the Philippines" will be the subject of a talk by Mrs. Hurlbert Opus this afternoon at a meeting of the Ivory Tower Club. Mrs. Redingote Trott will exhibit her collection of Japanese fans and Mrs. D'Arcy Bustlewaite will tell of her trip to Hawaii in 1939. "We feel that with so much attention centering on the Orient, our program will be a very interesting one," said Mrs. Perceival Dreem, president of the club.

Capital Whirl

High-lighting the month's end will be the gala ball on January 30 at North Wales, the Virginia home of Walter P. Chrysler, jr. As chairman of the Fauquier County Committee of the President's birthday celebrations, Mr. Chrysler will turn over his mansion for a fete that promises to write a brilliant chapter into Virginia's social history.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER, JR.

John Stewart Bryan, of Richmond, Virginia State chairman of the committee for the celebration, had scarcely finished relaying an invitation to Mr. Chrysler to serve on the committee than he received the following telegram from him:

"I shall be happy to share in the responsibility for the infantile paralysis victims and accept the chairmanship for Faquier County for the President's Birthday Ball with enthusiasm."

Shortly afterward plans were full speed ahead for the event, which is sure to draw social and official celebrities in droves . . . In Virginia to help with arrangements is Mrs. Kelvin C. Vanderlip, who was woman's chairman of the Greater New York celebration two years ago. She will be among those present today when Mr. Chrysler gathers in a hand-picked crowd of Virginia leaders for a luncheon at North Wales. There final plans will be made for the ball, which is sure to be attended by hundreds who come "to dance that others may walk."

Florida Wedding Holds Spotlight

Eyes south. That's the direction toward which a sizable section of official and social Washington will be looking this weekend when the wedding of Miss Cynthia Dunn and Alexander Lynde Cochrane takes place tomorrow in Boca Grande, Fla.

CYNTHIA DUNN

The quaint little island church of St. Andrews will be the scene of the ceremony. Countess de Baillet Latour, the former Marianna Dunn, will be matron of honor and the latter's 4-year-old daughter, Anne, will be flower girl. The bride will be given in marriage by her father, James Clement Dunn, adviser on political relations, Department of State, and Dudley Pickman, of Boston, will be best man for his stepson.

This evening, Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will entertain at a dinner for members of the wedding party and relatives and friends who are flocking to Boca Grande for the ceremony. Among those who have already arrived are Mrs. Charles A. Wessel, of Boston, grandmother of the bridegroom, who will play the wedding march; his three sisters, the Misses Nancy, Lucy and Jean Cochrane; his aunt, Mrs. Richmond Seering, of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan, of the same city.

Others who will attend the wedding include Mrs. Louis Shaw, of Boston, who is in Boca Grande for the winter and is entertaining the bridegroom's stepfather and mother; Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crowninshield and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Amory, of Boston.

Expects to Report for Duty This Month

Mr. Cochrane recently passed an examination for the U. S. Army aviation service and expects orders to report for duty the end of this month. His wish to enter the Air Corps was, in fact, responsible for the postponement of the wedding after the engagement was announced by the bride-elect's parents some time ago. Until recently, there has been an Army ruling against the acceptance of married men as student aviators, but with the declaration of war came a relaxing of the rule . . . and plans for the wedding were soon under way.

Incidentally, Mr. Cochrane is a cousin by marriage of Mrs. Alexander Forbes, the former Sunny Robbins, daughter of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins. Mrs. Murray Forbes, Sunny's mother-in-law, is the prospective bridegroom's aunt.

While I'm reporting for Cupid, I might as well mention that a wedding in Newport, R. I., tomorrow will be of wide interest, and a complete surprise here . . . The young man is an ensign in the Naval Reserve, and is a member of one of the most prominent families in Washington's residential circles . . . The young lady hails from Bronxville, N. Y., and the chapel of St. George's School will be the scene of the ceremony . . . Details will be announced on Sunday.

Oddments of interest: Anybody who thinks the Capital's social calendar is gradually becoming a minus quantity will have an eye-opener tomorrow afternoon when no less than three diplomatic receptions, half a dozen cocktail parties, and a number of dinners will have well-known Washingtonians out in droves from early afternoon until midnight . . . Mrs. Oliver Wendell Hammons, who has been visiting her parents in New Orleans, will return to Washington on Monday and shortly thereafter she and her husband will move to their new apartment at 1911 R Street. That's where Ensign and Mrs. Randall Hagner lived until they purchased a home on Waterside Drive . . . Lady Pascoe-Rutter, who spent most of last winter in Washington, has deserted the town for the season and is now in Nassau for an extended visit.

From a reader in New York comes a correction on a recent piece I wrote about Mme. Litvinoff, wife of the Soviet envoy . . . "She is not the daughter of Sir Sydney Low, but of Walter Low, Sir Sydney's younger brother," says my informant . . . The latter goes on to tell me that Walter died in 1895 of pneumonia, leaving a widow and three small girls . . . Ivy Low was one of them . . . As a very young girl she became very much interested in writing, and while still in her 'teens wrote two short novels, "Growing Pains" and "The Questing Beast" . . . Incidentally, H. G. Wells mentioned both books and Ivy Low in his autobiography and spoke of all three in flattering terms . . . He and Walter Low were close friends.

Society Turns Out for Benefit A.W.V.S. Show

It was a top-hatted, bejeweled audience that turned out for the American Women's Voluntary Services' benefit performance of the Ice-Capades last night in the Uline Arena. Ambassadors and ministers shared the rinkside spotlight with top-flight Washington officialdom and residential society.

Dempsey, Col. and Mrs. Frank Morrow, Dr. Eugene de Savitsch, William Davey, who is the son of the hostess; Miss Nancy Waller, Miss Marian Greenough and Peter Dewey.

Senorita Michels Gives Farewell For Aileen Harris

It was a hail and farewell gathering at the Chilean Embassy yesterday afternoon when Senorita Cristina Michels, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, entertained at an "after 5" party in honor of Miss Aileen Harris and Mrs. Alejandro Bertrand.

It was goodbye to Miss Harris, who will leave tonight for an extended trip to the Southwest, and welcome to Senora de Bertrand, bride of the Secretary of the Chilean Embassy. Miss Harris will go first to Phoenix, Ariz., for a dude ranch sojourn and will later go to Albuquerque, N. Mex., where she will be met by Miss Achsah Dorsey, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Benjamin H. Dorsey around the end of next month.

Senorita de Michels, who pinned a corsage of gardenias to the V neckline of her gold sequin decorated black crepe frock, was assisted in receiving by Senora de Senoret, a new arrival at the embassy. Senora de Senoret, who is the widow of the former Chilean Minister to London, arrived in Washington only the day before from a visit to her native country after her return from the British capital. She will stay on in Washington as an attache of the embassy here. Her small son has been a guest of the Ambassador and Senora Michels during his mother's stay in Chile. The several dozen younger set feminine guests, who arrived on the dot of 5, chatted in informal groups long after the usual tea hours.

Romance Begun on Shipboard Culminates Happily for Daughter of France's Ex-Premier

A romance that begun on shipboard a little over a year ago culminated in a wedding with a definitely French flavor yesterday, when Mlle. Gisele Bouquet Chautemps, daughter of the former Premier of France, became the bride of Edouard Guirola.

The benediction was given at 11 in the morning at the Catholic Cathedral of St. Matthew's by the French priest, Father Argot. The bride, who is the daughter of M. and Mme. Camille Chautemps, war given in marriage by her father.

An aureol of white tulle trimmed with orange blossoms fitted over her dark black hair. Her wedding gown of traditional white satin featured a long court train. Trainbearers were her 5-year-old brother, Jean-Louis Chautemps, and her little sister, Antoinette Chautemps, age 18 months. Miss Doreen Hurwitz, of Marseille, France, and Washington, was her maid of honor.

In the afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock a large reception was given in honor of the couple at the home of M. and Mme. Chautemps at 4805 Langdrum Lane in Chevy Chase. The bride's family have been making their residence in Washington for more than a year.

The bride began her studies at Neuilly sur Seine at the Ecole Lafayette and has continued them since her arrival in the United States at the Maret School on Kalorama Road. The bride's mother, a virtuoso pianist, received the first prize of the Conservatory of Paris, and is well known as a concert pianist in Europe, where she plays under the name Juliette Durand-Texte.

Mr. Guirola is Salvadorian, but has lived most of his life in France where he began his studies also. He has also studied in England and finished at Columbia University. His father is the owner of coffee plantations in El Salvador and Guatemala. He and his bride met on the American liner, Excambion when it brought them both from Europe.

They plan to leave Washington shortly for New Orleans, where they will embark for Guatemala. They will live in Guatemala City, where Mr. Guirola will take over the direction of his father's plantations.

Miss Levy Wed To Dr. Kushious

Miss Eleanor Levy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Levy, exchanged vows recently with Dr. Samuel Gilbert Kushious, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Kushious, of Portsmouth, N. H., at the Park road home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kirstein. The Rev. Harry Silverstone officiated for the ceremony at noon under a flower canopy.

The bride's father gave her in marriage. Her short sleeved powder blue dress featured a silver trim and she carried a Bible with white orchids in a cascade. David Kushious, of Portsmouth, was best man. A reception was held immediately after the ceremony. Mrs. Levy received in a gown of aqua crepe with chartreuse orchids for her corsage.

After tomorrow the couple will be at home on Woodbury Avenue, in Prtsmouth. When they left for Miami Beach, Fla., the bride was wearing an olive green dress with dubonnet accessories.

Mrs. Kushious attended Wilson Teachers' College and George Washington University. The bridegroom attended the University of New Hampshire and Middlesex College in Boston.

Other Norwegian newsmen on hand were the Norwegian press attache in Canada, Sven N. Oftedal, and the Norwegian press representative for the Middle West, Theodor Broch.

Pauline Shannon, Lieut. Beemer Wed

Although the bridegroom, Lieut. John R. A reception followed in the chapel and later the bridal couple was entertained by the officers of the 109th Infantry.

Many Leave D. C. for Sun Of Florida

Although the Capital is enjoying May-like weather and the "no skating" signs are no longer necessary on the canal, many social lights have scattered off in search of a suntan in Florida.

U. S. Is Facing Greater Sacrifices, Women Told

By Lucia Giddens

To win the war, the people of the United States are going to have to make sacrifices far beyond what they yet realize, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones told the Woman's National Democratic Club last night.

"I have no fear of the outcome, but we're going to be called on to make many great sacrifices. We cannot fight this war and live the normal lives to which we've been accustomed," Secretary Jones said.

"What will happen to our economy, no one knows. The amount of money that the Government already owes and will owe before we're through is staggering. The mind can't take it in," he said.

He spoke at the clubhouse at a dinner at which he and Mrs. Jones were honor guests.

"The war program, I suppose, is getting along as well as it could. But it is not getting along any too well," he said.

Although the outlook is gloomy in some respects, he said, the American people "have courage and ingenuity and we come nearer being independent" in resources than other nations.

"We have been trying for a year and a half to accumulate a reserve supply of rubber, tin, copper and other materials," the Secretary said, but added that because of the buying waves in 1940 and 1941 it had been difficult to do so.

"We are going to manufacture synthetic rubber. If we'll conserve tires, we'll get along somehow until substitute rubber comes in," he said.

He pointed out the success of the Government's program of loans to other nations. Among those which he cited was Spain.

"We loaned money to Spain to buy cotton, and they've been meeting payments over three years. Some people thought we shouldn't lend them money. But the one way to drive them into Germany's arms was not to help them," Jones said.

"I have never seen anybody who knows as much world geography as President Roosevelt, or who understands so well the character of peoples in various parts of the world," he said.

It is an asset that the "President never gets discouraged and never thinks any problem is insoluble," Secretary Jones said.

Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the club, introduced the speaker. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Milo Perkins, Mrs. Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Claude Hamilton, and Mrs. Herbert Grove Dorsey.

Kutz Speaks On Improved D. C. Facilities

Improvements in District facilities in the last 20 years and needs still to be filled were discussed by Commissioner Charles W. Kutz at the meeting of the civics-education section of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday at the Y. W. C. A.

Because of the great influx of population, additional filtration capacity and storage capacity for filtered water is needed, and funds are being obtained for this purpose, Commissioner Kutz said.

Because the capacity of the two present incinerators is already exceeded, plans are being prepared for a third incinerator, and money is being obtained, he said.

In answer to a question as to the prospect for improving the appearance of the streets through a larger personnel for street cleaning, the Commissioner said "we have an increased amount" in that service.

Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, chairman of the section, presided at the luncheon. Among guests at the speaker's table were Mrs. Kutz and Mrs. Guy Mason, wife of Commissioner Mason.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, director of the Victory Book Campaign in the District, urged members to contribute books for service men.

'Blackout Tea' Slated Sunday

A "blackout tea," modeled after one which was given in England, will be sponsored by the Zonta Club Sunday afternoon, with only candlelight to penetrate the blackout atmosphere.

A silver collection will be taken, with the fund to be sent to the Zonta Club of Honolulu for war relief work. The party, at which Miss Bertha M. Muth and new members of the club will be hostesses, will take place at 4:30 at the home of Miss Muth.

The tea will be similar to that given by Miss Daisy Bancroft, dress designer and member of the Philadelphia Zonta Club, who was visiting in England at the outbreak of the war. She experienced two air raids in London before returning to the United States. Her tea was to raise funds for war victims.

The Zonta Club will celebrate Defense Day at its luncheon Wednesday at 1 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A., when it will buy a $1000 defense bond.

Mrs. Raymond Clapper will speak on the importance of buying defense bonds and stamps. The program was arranged by Mrs. Robert De Goyler, who is connected with the women's division of the District defense savings unit. Miss Winifred Burwell is chairman of Zonta's stamp and bond committee.

Mrs. Collins to Speak

Mrs. B. L. Collins, membership director for the District of Columbia Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will be the guest speaker of Central Iota Sigma W. C. T. U., Tuesday at 6 p. m., in the E Street Y. W. C. A.

Church Women's Group Will Hold Open House, Tea

The house committee of the Washington Council of Church Women will hold an "open house" and silver tea from 3 to 6 Wednesday afternoon at the headquarters of the Federation of Churches.

Proceeds from the tea will be used toward completing furnishings for the library and dining room of the 25-room building which, in addition to Federation offices, includes dormitory space for young women defense workers.

Mrs. Gould Wickey is chairman of the group in charge of the tea, with others including Mrs. O. B. Atwood, Mrs. Charles Lueck, and Mrs. George A. Ross. The tea is open to the public, with membership of Washington churches especially invited.

Trinity Alumnae Plan Victory Ball

The Washington Chapter of the Trinity College Alumnae Association will hold its twenty-eighth annual dance February 13 at the Mayflower Hotel, for the benefit of the Science Building Fund, according to plans announced yesterday.

In a ballroom decked with flags, Trinity alumnae and their guests will salute America's partners in the war with an "Allied Victory Ball."

The chairman of the ball is Miss Kathryn Galiher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Galiher. Previous to her recent return to Washington, Miss Galiher had been a resident of New York City.

Camp Fire Girls to Aid Sale of Ball Tickets

In the interest of the infantile paralysis drive, the chairman of the Guardians Association of the Campfire Girls, Mrs. Martin Jansson, has announced that a group of Campfire Girls have volunteered to assist in the lobbies of local hotels during the sale of tickets for the President's Diamond Jubilee Celebration.

Among those in the group are Betty Sue Armstrong, Phyllis Bardos, Joan Barnett, Ruth Breslau, Jean Davis, Mary Lou Dobbs, Marjorie Jansson, Joyce Kummell, Elaine Langeman, Joan Niemeyer, Betty Plitt, Betty Lou Polhamis, Carol Shanklin, Helen Sheppad, Sylvia Simmons, Eliza-Sheppard, Sylvia Simmons, Eliza-Sprague and Nancy Wetzel.

Rep. Johnson to Speak

Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, will speak on "Our National Defense" at the meeting of the Democratic Women's National Council at 8 p. m. Monday at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Kossow to Entertain

The local unit of the National Home for Children in Denver will hold a "member bring a member" tea at the home of Mrs. E. Kossow at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Mrs. Doris Samakow is president.

Fraternities Meet Saturday

W. C. A.

The Navy estimates that it needs 380,000 pounds of turkey to celebrate a holiday.

War Program Scandals Told By Truman

net worth on December 31, 1939, as estimated by them. . . . In one case, it (the fee plus bonus) exceeded by nearly 800 times the average annual net profits, in other cases by 20, 30 and 40 times the average annual net profits."

"After the committee had indicated its intention to investigate ship conversion work, a number of companies 'voluntarily' requested the Navy to reduce the payments made to them. This ridiculous situation never should have been permitted to exist in the first place, and necessarily has greatly increased the cost of the shipbuilding program."

"If it hadn't been for taxes, we couldn't have handled our profits with a steam shovel," the report quoted James E. Barnes, Washington representative of the Todd Shipyards Corporation.

Auto Industry Assailed

Automobiles — The enormous existing productive capacity of the automotive industry was permitted to continue manufacturing for civilian consumption chiefly because it leaders misinformed OPM and the War Department about the convertibility of facilities to the war effort. Conversion plans are even now in "a nebulous stage" and, "in plain language," the job of conversion "was not even started well."

Tax amortization—policies governing the legal practice of inducing manufacturers to construct new plant facilities by permitting them larger deductions for taxes than normally are possible, has had this result:

"In some cases, time has been wasted in the construction of necessary facilities; vitally needed materials have been used for purposes inappropriate at the time; an existing tendency to the centralization of economic power has been accentuated, and the Government may needlessly suffer a loss of revenue.

Vandenberg Critical

Republican Senators joined Democrats in a cluster about Truman as he began to read his summary. When he disclosed that shipyard owners had repaid four million dollars to the Navy, Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, interposed:

"Did they put them (the owners) in the Smithsonian Institution?"

But Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, asked: "What happens to the men in procurement responsible for this scandal?"

"They usually are promoted," Truman responded.

"The thing I miss all the time is the final personification—the identification of men who ought to be demoted or put in jail," declared Vandenberg.

"Wouldn't the Commander in Chief (President Roosevelt) be interested in this report as well as Congress?"

"I have sent it to him," Truman replied.

"Whenever there is a military debacle, the Commander in Chief puts his finger on someone and something happens," Vandenberg continued. "I am interested in seeing something happen."

"Some fellows did go to jail," observed Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine, "but not in sufficient numbers to satisfy the committee or the sadistic desires of the Senator from Michigan," Brewster replied.

Sharpest criticism of the report dwelt on aviation procurement and a significantly large part of this portion of the document was devoted to the failure of procurement agencies to use the facilities of small plane manufacturers. Billions of dollars, the report said, are being spent with 19 "favored" plane manufacturers, and almost a billion has been spent in expanding their plants, while more than 60 companies, capable of producing 2000 a month of almost all types of aircraft, have been unable to secure "any substantial place" in the program.

More than half of total pursuit plane production this year, the report declared, will be of a type which Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, rated as no better than "a good pursuit trainer."

"On the drawing boards we have many high-performing pursuit ships. But in January, 1942, very few will be produced which can be considered better than mediocre, and there will be no long-range pursuits, a type so vitally needed for our present operations."

The report blamed "outmoded concepts of aircraft production" and "procedural red tape dating from the lackadaisical period preceding the emergency," for production delays. In addition, it contended, designs are frequently changed, often due to lack of foresight.

The committee charged that there never has been nor is now "any real planned and coordinated program for the production of aircraft."

Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, last night denied asserted inferiority of American planes. All types, including bombers which the committee said rated better than foreign ships, have demonstrated "marked superiority" in combat performance.

Speaking of the tremendous merchant ship building program the report said that "considering the necessity for ships, the conditions under which they had to be built, and the high prices paid simultaneously by the Navy Department in connection with its program, the committee is of the opinion that the Maritime Commission has done a good job."

His Ideals Come First

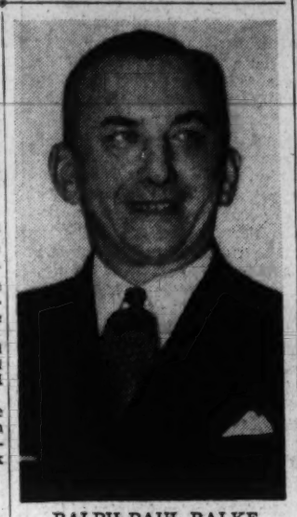
He's Been in U. S. 18 Years; Mother, Brother Are in Berlin



RALPH PAUL BALKE
"I Hope They Don't Put Me in a Mess Hall"

Ralph Paul Balke, whose mother and brother now live in his native city of Berlin, joined the United States Army here yesterday to fight for his belief in the democratic way of life.

As captain of the Wardman Park Hotel dining room, Balke is known as "Paul" to many Senators, Representatives and noted guests at the hotel. He is 40 years old, but enlistment was allowed because of three years' previous Army service.

"I have my beliefs," he said simply, but in a voice underlined with quiet, penetrating emotion. "I want to fight for them."

His wife, an auditor for a private company, said she had hardly been able to hold him back since December 7, when the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor.

His Wife Is Glad

"But after that it became only a question of what day he would enlist," she said as they sat side by side in their apartment against a bookcase heavy with Balzac, Ibsen and Tolstoy, and including Ridpath's volumes on the History of the United States. "I am glad for him to go."

He took his physical examination yesterday. Despite graying temples, he is a healthy specimen of 5 feet 10½ inches and 175 pounds—a blue-eyed, well-set, handsome man. He will leave by bus for Fort Meade at 8 a. m. today. He was told he would probably be enrolled in the Air Corps.

What emotions must fill one who goes now to fight against the country where his mother and brother live one can but guess at, or in some measure feel when quietly talking with the man. Balke heard from his mother only a month ago. His brother is exempt from service in the German army because of a hearing ailment. But he believes he may have cousins in that army.

To him the love of his United States and the appreciation of its freedoms are pervading things with a meaning oft lacking in complacent native-borns.

He came to America at the age of 22. He came because this country had always been his "dream." He enlisted in its army soon after arriving

During World War I he was in Berlin. He has memories of that period. They are memories he does not like to discuss. He is trying to forget about that war. He wants to concentrate on this one.

Hopes to Be Sent to Hawaii

He hopes to be sent to Hawaii. His reasons are two: He believes that there he can best strike back for the treacherous act that was the antithesis of everything in which he believes. And his three years in the American Army were served in the Hawaiian Department. He has a letter from his officer testifying to his exceptional ability as a member of the Quartermaster Corps.

Balke has been at the Wardman Park only a year and a half, having previously been maitre d'hotel at the LaGuardia Airport restaurant and at New York's famed Luchow's on Fourteenth Street. But already he has become an "institution" at the hotel here.

He has one wish from the Army: "I hope they don't put me in the mess hall."

You see, he wants to fight.

Washington Defense

Youths' Stake In Future Deemed Great

Youth's stake in the war was declared yesterday by the division of youth activities of the Office of Civilian Defense to be "perhaps greater than adult's, because youth faces more years in a world dominated by total terror or Christian democracy."

In a statement signed by Jane Seaver and Gilbert Harrison, co-directors of the division, organization of Youth Defense Auxiliaries was asked of all defense units.

The auxiliaries would be non-political and would accept members between the ages of 16 and 25, according to the statement.

In the meantime, a message to youth from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Director of OCD, was being read in New York at a joint meeting of Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. secretaries.

"The role of the college student in civilian defense is extremely important," the First Lady said, asking that as far as possible defense council organizations be duplicated on campuses throughout the country.

By working in defense groups now, she asserted, students will be more able to participate intelligently in the peace at the end of the war.

350 Electricians To Give Day's Pay For D. C. Defense

Three hundred and fifty members of the A. F. L. Electrical Workers Union No. 26 have agreed to donate a day's pay to a fund being raised by the Central Labor Union to provide the District with needed civilian defense equipment, it was announced at a meeting of the fund committee last night.

Union scale for electrical workers is $14.40 a day, which indicates that at least $5040 has been pledged toward the goal of $70,000.

Members of the fund committee are Charles B. McClosky, John Locher, Frank J. Coleman, Robert Lester, James A. Holden, John M. Botts, Willy Arnheim, C. F. Preller, Dante Avon, Frank W. Lee, Paul J. Schwarz, Louis Lopez, C. K. Kreichbaum, F. V. Ream, Ernest Fontana, F. E. Kettner, Ernest Spangler, Fred C. Thomas, F. H. McGuigan, Albert N. Dennis, Joseph C. Hillock, Fred S. Walker, B. A. Kreisler Plays, First Time Since Injury

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (AP).—Fritz Kreisler played the violin professionally for the first time today since he was seriously injured last April by a truck in New York City.

He played in the Academy of Music—but there was no audience. Only sound engineers to record some of the more familiar Kreisler melodies.

It was the climax of months of anxiety over whether he would ever play again with the Kreisler touch.

It was all right.

Two D. C. Army Men Earn Promotions

Charles Louis Mendel, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Mendel, 119 R Street Northeast, has been promoted from a first lieutenancy to a captaincy at Goodfellow Field, San Angelo, Tex., it was learned yesterday. He was graduated from George Washington University in 1938.

Robert Gibson, 4710 Fifteenth Street Northwest, has been made a corporal in a transportation division at Fort Meade. Before joining the Army he was manager of the Gibson Garage, 1467 P Street Northwest.

No Packages Can Be Sent To U. S. Workers on Job

Government girls who are having to spend long hours at their desks no longer can have packages from stores delivered to the office—even if there's no one home to take them in.

The custom has been flourishing in the defense agencies, with vans bringing the girls everything from silk stockings to floor lamps as a result of orders placed mostly by telephone.

Officials regretfully nipped it in the bud—because how can they tell when a package has a bomb inside?

Defense Rally Today At Metropolitan Church

A civilian defense mass meeting will be held at 8 p. m. today in the Metropolitan Wesley Church, 211 D Street Southwest, for the area bounded by Fourth Street Southwest, South Capitol Street, Virginia Avenue and Independence Avenue. John Manning, air raid warden for zone 7, will preside.

Hillsdale Citizens Will Discuss Defense Tonight

A defense meeting for citizens of the Hillsdale area in Southeast Washington will be conducted at 8 p. m. today in the J. G. Birney School, 2429 Nichols Avenue Southeast.

Victory Sidelights

Bilbo Offers Bill to Permit Clergymen to Buy Tires

A bill authorizing the OPM rationing board to sell tires to clergymen of the various denominations was introduced yesterday by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi.

Senator Bilbo told The Post last night that the felt there would be little opposition to the bill, saying that the national emergency had brought increased demands on ministers in making pastoral calls.

Introduction of the bill came on the heels of a letter from the Right Rev. Frederick G. Budlong, Bishop of Connecticut, and inserted in Wednesday's Congressional Record at the request of Representative LeRoy D. Downs (Demorat), of Connecticut.

"I am not suggesting any special legislation as a favor to men in the ministry," said the letter, in part, "but I am raising the question as to whether or not it is of primary importance that spiritual ministrations and pastoral care should be assured to the people of America in these critical days."

Hawaii Attack United Congress, Patrick Says

Representative Luther Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, yesterday told the Federal Bar Association "Congressmen on Capitol Hill who couldn't see eye to eye on anything before Pearl Harbor are agreeing 100 per cent on everything now," at its luncheon at the Harrington Hotel.

Maj. Edward S. Shattuck, general counselor for the Selective Service system, will speak on "The Selective Service in Total War" Wednesday at the Mayflower Hotel at 8 p. m., it was announced.

Announcement was also made that Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of District defense, will speak Thursday at the luncheon to be held at the Harrington Hotel at 12:30 p. m.

Thomas C. Billig, of the Federal Security Agency, has been appointed a member of the Federal Bar Association's executive council, it was announced by William E. Reese, of the General Accounting Office, association president. Ralph F. Fuchs, assistant secretary, Board of Legal Examiners, has been elected to membership.

Deep Red Lights Better Than Blue in Blackouts

Deep red lights are more satisfactory under blackout conditions than the widely accepted blue lights, the War Department advised last night.

Tests conducted by the Engineer Corps showed that deep red is less visible from the air, gives better illumination on the ground, and aids the eyes to become adapted to near or total darkness.

They warned, however, that "indiscriminate" use of red might result in confusion with other standard red signals.

Guards Take No Chances With Ballou's Brief Case

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Superintendent of Schools, is a distinguished looking gentleman, but guards at the Capitol are taking no chances.

"Just a minute, sir. We've got to go through that brief case," they said when he arrived to report to the Tolan committee on school problems.

Brentwood Village Volunteers Sought

Additional volunteers for the Brentwood Village civilian-defense area were called for yesterday. Applicants should register at the firehouse at 1340 Brentwood Road Northwest and be prepared to take a complete course in fire fighting.

Herbert Yocom, chairman of the Brentwood area, announced appointment of the following defense division heads: Mrs. Margaret Cobb, emergency feeding; Mrs. Helen R. Schmerler, housing; Mrs. Sylvia Brotman, education and recreational welfare; David Goldfarb, casualty squad.

Volunteers for any activity other than fire fighting should register at area headquarters, 2500 Fourteenth Street Northeast, Yocum said.

'Our Australian Ally' Is Topic of Lecture

"Our Australian Ally" will be described and illustrated with natural color motion pictures to members of the National Geographic Society tonight at Constitution Hall by Mrs. John C. Walker. Mrs. Walker is an Australian-born American citizen.

The film will show striking contrasts of this land from the interior fastnesses where the bushmen dwell to the ultra modernity of Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane.

Chillum Heights Defense Aides Named

Michael Finan, chairman of the executive committee of the Chillum Heights defense area, yesterday announced the following appointments:

Eugene F. Blanchert and the Rev. M. Elliott will serve on the executive committee, with Blanchert as chairman of the public-speaking division.

The area needs 12 "strong volunteers" to take training as stretcher bearers.

Former Nurse Commits Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued by Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy last night after an investigation of the death of Miss Maud C. Jordan, 43, of 644 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast.

The woman, formerly a nurse at Providence Hospital, was found unconscious in her one-room apartment after a neighbor, Mrs. Maude A. Bishop, detected gas. When police entered the apartment, Mrs. Jordan was slumped over on a sofa and she was dead when a doctor arrived.

Big Texas Posse Hunts 14 Escaped Convicts

Huntsville, Tex., Jan. 15 (AP).—Hundreds of Texas peace officers searched heavily wooded areas of east Texas tonight for 14 convicts who escaped from the Eastham Prison Farm.

Twenty-three men fled last night from the institution, which is set aside for incorrigibles and unusually dangerous prisoners. Two of them were immediately recaptured and seven more were picked up during today's search.

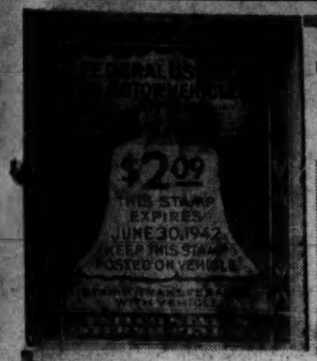
Gummed Up (Wrong Way); Auto Use Stamps Go on Sale



First day business in new automobile use tax stamps was good yesterday at District Postoffices, even though the stickers went on sale with the glue coated on the wrong side.

Bureau of Internal Revenue officials want the stamps—required on all cars after February 1—to be placed on automobile windshields facing out so that "revenooers" and other officials can spot the markers easily. However, the glue is on the back side of the tags as on postage stamps.

Originally, the glue was placed on the back of the 1½ by 2-inch tags because revenue officials understood that regulations in 23 States and the District of Columbia forbade the placing of any insignia on windshields. But officials quickly learned that most States were willing to waive the rules for Uncle Sam.

Now the Internal Revenue Bureau would like patriotic motorists to provide their own glue and affix the stickers to the inside of auto windshields with the face showing on the outside. Next batch of stamps will be properly glued, it was said.

Since the law went into effect, 20 States and the District have notified the bureau that they will permit the stickers on windshields in spite of contrary regulations. The remaining States are expected to fall into line shortly.

The stamps cover the five months from February 1 to July 1 and cost $2.09. Other stamps covering the fiscal year 1942-43, which starts July 1, will be placed on sale later and will cost $5. Present stamps are colored pale green and bear a liberty bell design. They are on sale at all postoffices.

Corregidor, Far East's Gibraltar

Defenses Cut in Rock Withstand Attacks

By Logan Reavis
Associated Press Staff Writer

The fury of the first Japanese plane attack on the rocky island of Corregidor had scarcely passed before the grim United States artillerymen below, standing at gun or computing instrument, knew they could "take it." Theirs was the confidence born of anticipation and training.

In their rocky base, military engineers had contrived bomb shelters and passages like those deep in the heart of the Rock of Gibraltar.

Whirling drills had created chambers for a hospital, food, water and medical storage; for explosives and probably plotting room and mine control stations.

The profuse vegetation which partially covers the island was used to conceal gun emplacements.

Corregidor employs armaments all the way from machine guns, 75's, anti-aircraft guns of several calibers, to guns up to 14-inch at least.

Until these weapons send their screaming projectiles against their enemies—planes, ships or land-based foes—they are practically invisible to ordinary observation. Fire control stations, directors, height-finders, base-end-observing stations, searchlights and sound locators are scarcely to be seen.

The prodigious industry which created this fortress, officially known as Fort Mills, distributes no blueprints of its work. The accompanying drawing is an attempt to visualize the placing of certain features. The exact arrangement is properly a Government secret.

Some water is obtained from springs; it may be that, as at Gibraltar even rain water may be collected and stored.

Corregidor has three companion fortified positions, of which Fort Drum merits passing comment because it probably is the only seacoast fort, designed by United States engineers, with turrets to protect the personnel.

Is Corregidor impregnable? Some time ago, in view of the growing power of the airplane, it was held that the island's defenses required an improvement in guns and emplacement. Like Gibraltar, the island has but a small area for an airplane base. Much as the coast artilleryman favors stopping planes with gun fire, the undoubted assistance of counteraviation cannot be denied.

There is also a question whether the garrison would be forced to capitulate through exhaustion of its food or water supply.

A serious threat—of perhaps more immediate consideration—lies in the possibility that Gen. MacArthur and his force, occupying the neighboring Bataan Peninsula, may be forced to surrender or retreat from this area. In that case, it seems doubtful whether the fortress could maintain its effectiveness in the face of the continuous shelling which the Japanese could accomplish from the Marlveles Mountains—some rising over 4000 feet—that dominate the southern extremity of this peninsula.

So long as Corregidor resists, the Japanese face the threat that superior American Fleet action can recover Manila.

A year ago a correspondent, member of the Corregidor garrison, wrote that "the tension is becoming more critical day by day" and that "every effort is being made and every measure taken to place the Philippine department in a high state of preparedness for any eventuality."

The Manila Bay harbor command instituted continuous and intensive training in every phase of defense and beach landings. Competitive contests increased the efficiency of the various regiments.

So they were ready.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

No More Saturdays Off For War Dept. Workers

No more Saturday afternoon holidays for War Department employes. They have been suspended for the duration by Secretary Stimson. This week the 25,000 War employes will go on a 48-hour work week. The longer work week will apply to all field and departmental employes. Secretary Stimson said the order was issued under the provisions of an executive order which gives department heads authority to fix working hours of their employes. Commerce Department employes will begin working a 44-hour week on Monday and on January 26 the Interior employes will go on a 44-hour schedule.

Interstate Commerce Commission employes are placing their hope against decentralization in two laws. ICC's organic act says that the organization shall be located in Washington and the appropriation act which supplied the money to build the ICC Building stated the building was to be used by the ICC. Only a part of ICC is threatened with decentralization. It wouldn't make sense to move it all out as a duplicate organization would have to be set up by Joseph Eastman's Office of Defense Transportation.

No Federal employe, whether he be employed in the War Department or in the National Archives, will be deferred from military service just because he happens to work for the Government. That's the word from Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director. The general's opinion, however, doesn't stop employes from trying to be transferred to agencies where they believe they can get occupational deferments.

Some agencies request local boards to defer employes—and some employes have even been hired with that understanding—while other agencies refuse to recommend exemption for any and all workers. A uniform Government policy on deferments is sadly needed and one is under consideration by the Council of Personnel Administration.

Despite all the rumors, Justice officials are certain that its Lands Division, all or even a part of it, won't be moved from Washington. Transfer of the division was discussed with the Budget Bureau, that much is admitted, but when Justice offered—and its offer was accepted—to move all its Immigration and Naturalization Service to Philadelphia, the officials believe that move closed out further decentralization of the department.

President Roosevelt is concerned over the shortage of highly trained administrative personnel in the Federal service. Yesterday he sent letters to Chairman Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission, and Frederick M. Davenport, chairman of the Council of Personnel Administration, in which he asked them to map out a long-range plan for the recruiting and training of administrative personnel. The President suggested that the plan cover the identification of talent already available in the Government service and the training of personnel in colleges and universities.

In his letter, the President reiterated his faith in Civil Service by writing that the competitive principle of the merit system must be continued . . . Mike Straus has been appointed war work coordinator at Interior and his able assistant, Walt Onslow, has moved up to his job as information director . . . Leland S. Reid, Wage and Hour's No. 1 inspector, has been appointed executive officer of Office of Price Administration's Kansas City office.

Interior's power division employes are being assigned to war work of the department. The division hasn't fulfilled the Secretary's fondest hopes . . . UFWA has started a commendable drive to get Federal employes to donate blood to the Red Cross. The first group contribution will be made today by officers of the Labor Department local. The officers are Oscar Witmer, Edward Fruchtman, Roy Patterson, Edward Adzigian, Sol Wallen and Fred Joiner. National Representative Henry Rhine is heading the drive.

Earl G. Harrison, the Philadelphia lawyer who made a hit with everyone by his handling of the registration and fingerprinting of the five million aliens, has been appointed a special assistant to the Attorney General

The Commandments—Revised

Shreveport, La., Jan. 15 (AP).—The Caddo Parish jury and a number of ministers in a ceremony last summer unveiled a bronze plaque in the courthouse bearing the Ten Commandments. Today the plaque was removed, because (1) the Second Commandment had been omitted (2) the Tenth had been divided into two and (3), all but the first was misnumbered. A new plaque will be installed.

Going to Bite the Japs

Prescott, Ariz., Jan. 15, (AP).—"The Marines won't take me because I'm short two teeth," 20-year-old Jack Jones dejectedly told his dentist here. The dentist then took X-rays and found two rear molars imbedded in the gums. A few minutes of oral surgery sent Jones back to the recruiting station, his face swollen but the required number of teeth in view.

Henderson To Testify on Taxi Tires

Will Appear Before House Group Today On Bill to Give Cabs Utility Status

Price Administrator Leon Henderson will testify before the House District Committee when it begins hearings at 10 a. m. today on a bill designed to give local taxis a public utilities status, thus enabling them to receive priorities in tires and equipment.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, the committee chairman, announced last night that District officials appearing before the group today on the measure will include the Commissioners, Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Director of Highways Capt. H. C. Whitenhurst.

Representative Randolph is the sponsor of the bill which would classify taxis as public utilities.

Tire Theft Bill Approved

A bill making theft of automobile tires and equipment in Washington a felony during the duration of the war, punishable by a maximum prison sentence of 10 years, was approved at a special meeting of the House District Committee yesterday.

Also approved was a bill permitting the District Alley Dwelling Authority to borrow funds from public or private sources to continue its 15-million-dollar low-rent housing program.

John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, told the committee that the authority does not contemplate competition with private building.

Charles J. Rush, secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board, declared that local private builders have made committments for 8000 housing units to help accommodate the 40,000 Federal employes expected to come to the District by next July 1.

Pay Boosts Up Again

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday made a further effort to get pay boosts for District police and firemen with the introduction of a bill. Monday the House turned down his first attempt at legislation which would have made increases of nearly one and one-half million dollars.

The new Schulte measure confines rises to men of the rank of captain and lower. It would cost the District about $240,000 if the new pay rises were enacted, the Indiana Congressman estimated.

The wage scale offered for privates in the Metropolitan, White House and Park Police forces and in the Fire Department would be:

First year, $2000; second year, $2140; third year, $2280; fourth year, 2420; fifth year, $2560, and more than five years, $2700 annually.

The increased salaries for police officers of the rank of captain and below would be: Captain, $3900; lieutenant, $3350; sergeant, $3050. Fire Department: Captain, $3300; lieutenant, $3140; sergeant, $2900.

The bill provides that the increases would become effective February 1.

Two District bills became law yesterday when the President affixed his signature to the measures.

Transportation Question

One would permit out-of-town bus companies to transport school children into the District in unlimited numbers without charging the transportation companies the $100 annual license fee required of local concerns.

The act also provides that out-of-town buses may carry regular sightseeing fares here only 15 days out of the year before the license fee will be exacted.

The other bill prohibits parking on private or public property in Washington without the consent of the owner.

On the District legislative front Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, announced the membership of a subcommittee which will consider amendments to the local Alcoholic Beverage Control Act passed by the House Monday.

The House amendments prohibit price advertising by local liquor stores and the licensing of new stores within 600 feet of the property boundary lines of schools, churches and other public institutions.

Businessmen's Group Elects Bowdler Chief

Louis L. Bowdler, past president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, last night was elected president of the Northeast Businessmen's Association, succeeding Arthur Hartung.

Other new officers are John Slocombe, first vice president; Andrew Gemney, second vice president; George G. McLeish, secretary; Julius O. Cardin, reelected treasurer for a fifth term; Joseph P. Bailey, legal counsel; Raymond G. Dunne, assistant legal counsel. The executive committee includes Dunne, chairman, Hartung, Cardin, J. P. Rogers and Edwin Geisel.

The organization announced purchase of a $1000 defense savings bond.

Mrs. Libby Foer, Gas Victim, Dies

Mrs. Libby Foer, 57, of 1916 Seventeenth Street Northwest, died in Emergency Hospital last night of gas poisoning suffered a week ago. Mrs. Foer was found unconscious in the kitchen of her home by her son, Walter, January 8. Gas was escaping from jets in the room.

Assistant Coroner Christopher Murphy issued a certificate of suicide.

'Racketeers' Pose as D. C. Lawyers, Bar Women Are Told

Inadequate District of Columbia legal rules are permitting "lobbyists, racketeers and chiselers," falsely posing as lawyers, to exact a "heavy tribute" from the uninformed, Kenneth N. Parkinson, chairman of the committee on legislation of the District Bar Association, charged last night at a meeting of the Women's Bar Association at the New Colonial Hotel.

Present rules permit persons who are not members of any bar in the United States to call themselves District of Columbia lawyers, Parkinson asserted.

"It was our conclusion years ago that there are literally hundreds practicing before various departments and governmental agencies who were not members of our bar, yet held themselves out as such," he said, "and I am convinced that the same condition exists today, as it did exist and will always exist unless corrected by statute."

Who Are Bar Members

Parkinson pointed out that the only actual members of the District of Columbia bar are those approved by the District Court. Other lawyers, members of the bar of the highest court of the States from which they came, are permitted to practice before the Court of Appeals, but are actually not members of the District bar. But no rules exist to stop others from practicing before Government agencies, he said.

To remedy the situation, Parkinson suggested the adoption of a law forbidding anyone to practice before a Government agency unless he is actually a member of the bar in the jurisdiction in which he maintains an office, and providing criminal penalties for persons who claim to be lawyers, but actually are not.

Proposed legislation before the Senate designed to curb lobbying by former Government employes by forbidding them to handle matters in which the Government has an interest for two years after their withdrawal from Government service was criticized by Parkinson as "going too far."

Law Practice Suffers

The large number of persons posing as lawyers who are not actually lawyers has hurt the practice of law in the District, he asserted.

The fact that some of these "alleged lawyers" are prosperous indicates that "hundreds, if not thousands of people in and beyond the District are the victims of a deliberate fraud," he said.

George P. Barse, counsel to the comptroller of the currency, told the group that recent regulations placing Government lawyers under civil service had ended Government discrimination against women lawyers.

"Your prospects of advancement in civil service are brighter than ever before," Barse said.

The women lawyers concluded their meeting with a discussion of pending district legislation led by Mrs. Charlotte A. Hankin, chairman of the group's committee on legislation. Approved "in principle" were bills to merge the police and municipal courts, create a department of recreation and provide stricter regulations for charitable institutions.

Postlude By Ray C. B. Brown

Markova, Baronova Enthrall With Ballet Performance

C. C. Cappel Concert Bureau presents the Ballet Theater on Thursday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Peter and the Wolf (music by Sergei Prokofiev), Naughty Lisette (music by Peter Ludwig Hertel), Beloved (music by Schubert-Liszt arranged by Darius Milhaud). Conductors: Antal Dorati and Mois Zlatin.

Last evening the Ballet Theater opened its second and last program in Constitution Hall with Adolf Bolm's choreographed adaptation of Sergei Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," the fantasy for children which the National Symphony Orchestra introduced here last week. The amusing spectacle was all the better for previous acquaintance with the music, which has such a catchy tune for Peter, and such impertinent themes for the animals of a modern Aesop's fable. Jerome Robbins danced the part of the irrepressible and fearless Peter, while Nora Kaye was the bird, Karen Conrad the duck, Sono Osato the sleek, white cat, and David Nillo the wolf.

BROWN

Another type of fantasy was exemplified in "Beloved," a series of dream pictures supposed to pass through the head of a composer as he improvises at the piano and relives the storied past. Darius Milhaud arranged the music by orchestrating one of Liszt's "Pilgrimage" pieces as a prologue, and translating from piano to orchestra the Schubert-Liszt "Soirees de Vienne. To these lilting strains the day-dreamer recalls his village sweetheart, his riotous days in the Bohemian quartet, and his encounter with "la femme fatale."

This ballet's sole reason for being is as a vehicle for the beautiful dancing of Alicia Markova, and that is reason enough. While she was on the stage, every moment was satisfying to the eye, for she has an enthralling artistry compounded of dignity and grace, poise and eloquent movement, and during her absences one endured the conventionality of the action while awaiting her return. Anton Dolin, who can be a personality in the dance when he chooses, reduced himself, or was reduced by the choreographer, to a melodramatic actor of the Victorian era.

Irina Baronova was the star of the last ballet, "Naughty Lisette," which used to be "Le Fille Mal Gardee" once upon a time. Her technical skill, her lightness, her humor and her glowing vitality make her a perfect foil for Alicia Markova. Both are great dancers, each in an individual and distinctive way. Other leading characters in the farcical plot about a French farmerette who wishes to force her daughter into marriage with a witless heir and is foiled were Semon Semonov as Madame Simone, Dmitri Romanov as the true lover, Nikolai Orlov as the wealthy vinegrower and Ian Gibson as Alain, the would-be bridegroom.

Nothing can make me believe the statement in the printed program that the music for "Naughty Lisette" was written by, or even taken from the works of Johann Wilhelm Hertel, a serious minded composer of piano sonatas, symphonies and oratories, who died when Beethoven was 19. It is much more likely to be Peter Ludwig Hertel (1817-1899), of Berlin, who composed a number of ballets popular in their day. Someone must have taken too hasty a look into an encyclopedia.

Mrs. Thorpe Again Named Chairman Of Barney Board

Mrs. George C. Thorpe was elected to her fifth term as president of the board of the Barney Neighborhood House, a settlement supported by the Community Chest at 470 N Street Southwest yesterday.

Other elections included that of Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr as first vice president of the directing board; Col. Henry P. Erwin, second vice president; Frank C. Baldwin, third vice president; George E. Fleming, treasurer, and Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, secretary.

Miss Ellen A. Vinton was reelected honorary president, and Mrs. Charles J. Bell, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, and Mme. L. Dreyfus-Barney as honorary vice presidents.

Newly elected to places on the board membership were Loftus Wesley, Edward Stafford, and Mrs. Walter O. Boswell. Members reelected were Mrs. Frank C. Baldwin, Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Mr. Fleming, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Miss Mary L. McQuade, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Mrs. Mary Stewart, and Mrs. Thorpe.

12 Sites Weighed for U. S. Offices

Planning Board Keeps Locations Secret for Fear Of Rise in Prices

The curtain was parted—but not all the way—yesterday to reveal something about the forthcoming expenditure of 25 million dollars for construction of more wartime office buildings in Washington and vicinity.

At a meeting of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Director John Nolen, jr., reported:

Twelve sites are under consideration. A few are in nearby Maryland, none in Virginia.

The Soldiers Home grounds, where it has been proposed to erect one or more of the "tempos," is not among the 12.

Eleven of the structures would have an average capacity of 2500 workers. The smallest would accommodate 1000, the largest 6000. The twelfth will be a combination shop and cafeteria building, situated at Seventh Street and Independence Avenue Southwest.

Site Divulged

Only other site divulged was that at Friendship, the McLean estate on upper Wisconsin Avenue, whose acquisition was announced recently. Reason for withholding the locations is that all of the others are privately owned and officials fear that publicity would result in their prices being boosted.

Reporting on site-hunting activities by Public Buildings Administration, which is handling the office expansion program, Nolen said the 12 were selected for their proximity to commercial districts, transportation facilities and areas where defense housing projects are under way or planned.

The building scheduled for the Friendship tract will house 1500 employes and will be coordinated with the large residential project to be erected on adjoining land by the Defense Housing Coordinator, said Nolen.

He recommended that in this ambitious development, provisions be made for extending Glover-Archbold Parkway through the west portion of the tract, connecting on the north with Tilden Street.

Nolen and T. S. Settle, commission secretary, submitted a separate report on studies which have been made by Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer toward providing 22,000 new dwelling units in the metropolitan area.

10,000 Privately Financed

The general scheme is that 10,000 shall be privately financed, 7500 built by Defense Homes Corporation (Federal loan agency) and 4500 by some such public housing agency as the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Nolen and Settle recommended, in substance, that caution be exercised before embarking upon such an ambitious program. While conceding that mounting housing congestion calls for relief, they warned that a 22,000-unit venture involves many obstacles.

There must be assurance, they said, that water, sewerage and other utilities will be extended to the proposed housing developments. Schools must be provided for the tenants' children. A vast quantity of construction material would be required, and this involves priorities. Mass transportation was mentioned as another problem.

The planning body, devoting the first day of its January meeting in the new Interior Building to defense matters, was informed that recreational facilities normally attracting 285,000 annually have been withdrawn from use and displaced by wartime utilities.

Among them are 27 softball and 7 baseball fields, 55 tennis courts, 5 football gridirons and 3 hockey fields.

D. C. Must Have Subway, More Police, Randolph Says

Because the days of the "slow moving" District of Columbia are "gone forever" and a large, bustling city is here to stay, there are going to have to be some changes made, Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, told a Federation of Business Men's Association's banquet last night.

Among those needed, he said, are these:

1. A "vast improvement" in the present "cumbersome" form of District government.

2. A subway system.

3. Five hundred to 600 more policemen.

Regarding transportation, he mentioned that 400 new buses had been ordered. E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., said last night that the first of the buses will be here Monday. They seat 45 persons each, as compared to 30 to 40 for the average bus now used.

In his speech at the banquet, held at the Hay-Adams House, Representative Randolph pulled no punches in expressing his opinions on many things that be regarding the present District government. Among objects of his wrath was the way Congressmen's time is wasted.

"Think of it!" he exclaimed. "Men elected from their own Congressional districts in their own States sitting around a table to name a street in the District of Columbia!"

He said his comment that the present form of District government could be "vastly improved upon" is "no criticism of the present Commissioners." These men, he said, are fine gentlemen and doing the best they can under the circumstances.

He said the District is going to have a subway system "so why not now instead of five or ten years from now?"

"It should be brought about right now, when it can be brought about," he avowed.

He said that always, "war or peace," the population of the District itself would be a million persons. "And I mean just the District, not the metropolitan area."

Randolph touched on the District health program by saying those in charge of it had not been "hard-hitting" enough in their efforts to get Congressional appropriations.

He said he admired Leon Henderson, "a jolly fellow," but didn't consider it a "patriotic endeavor" to "take a man's investment and rip it apart," as he said he considered was done by Henderson in the case of auto dealers.

A force of "500 or 600 additional policemen" will be necessary, he declared, "as sure as I stand here."

Other parts of the program included a talk on defense bonds and stamps by Frederick A. Ballard, representing the District of Columbia Bar Association; a talk on the Red Cross by Mrs. J. Jeune Carter, of its speakers' bureau, and the adoption of a resolution praising Gregory Hankin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, for ordering a crosstown bus line through Klingle Road.

Traffic Kills 1 Maryland, 2 D. C. Men

Another Driver Has Narrow Escape When Train Wrecks Machine

Three persons were killed yesterday in traffic accidents in nearby Maryland and in Pennsylvania and another narrowly escaped death when his truck was struck by a train.

The dead are:

Samuel Tyrol Wheeler, 60, 1360 Peabody Street Northwest.

Norman Jackson, 435 Franklin Place Northeast.

Boley suffered fatal injuries yesterday when his car overturned and caught fire on Defense Highway, near Annapolis. Members of the Glenn Dale Rescue Squad found him lying in the roadway beside the flaming machine. He was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital.

Car Skids Off Road

In an automobile accident near Norristown, Pa., Wheeler's car skidded off the road and crashed into a row of guard rails. Wheeler was removed to Norristown by a passing motorist and collapsed while he was preparing to telephone friends in Washington for another car. He died soon afterward.

Wheeler, a prominent real estate broker, had negotiated several large deals here, including the Statler Hotel site purchase. He had been here for about two years and maintained offices in the Colorado Building. Before coming to the capital, he had been in the real estate business in New York for many years and had a home in Cranford, N. J.

Trucks Collide Head-on

Jackson, a truck driver, was killed when his truck crashed head-on into another truck a mile west of Hall's Station, on Central Avenue. The accident occurred at the same spot where three persons were killed last year. Gerald E. Costley, Negro, 1872 Savannah Place Southeast, Jackson's companion, suffered severe injuries and was removed to Casualty Hospital.

Wilmer A. Grimes, 23, of Linthicum Heights, Md., suffered head injuries when his sand-laden truck was struck by a northbound train at a railroad crossing at Branchville, Md. Police said the truck was cut in half, throwing Grimes 50 feet from the tracks.

Yale to Select 'Big-Name' Football Coach

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Portrait of a guy at home with a deadline to beat:

Snaps shut the Subtreasury of American Humor in the midst of a Mencken story, sighs and guesses he'd better go to work. Eases self out of living room chair and moves toward hall closet where portable typewriter should be. Unearths it beneath two pairs of galoshes, a wire network of fallen coat hangers and three sections of Christmas train track. Hopes there's some press paper around the house.

POVICH

Blithely sets up his typwriting contraption, knowing he hasn't the faintest idea of a topic for his piece. Stares interminably at the keys, and then runs hands through hair. Wonders whether those white specks on his black machine are cigarette ashes or dandruff. Rumples his hair by way of making a test and learns the worst. Promises self a shampoo, sometime, and feels better about it.

Decides he'd better start batting something out and wonders what it'll be. Dismisses idea of commenting on cancellation of national golf tournaments by U. S. G. A. on account of war crisis, because nobody cares. Lights cigarette and wonders if he can still blow eight rings with the same puff. Blows eight rings and is very well pleased. Remembers he has work to do and is not pleased. Stares at typewriter and is suddenly struck with the idea and that it is between him and starvation. Feels better toward typewriter.

Poises Hands Over Keyboard

Ruminates for a bit about baseball and toys with the idea of writing about Joe DiMaggio's 1942 salary. Realizes he doesn't know much about DiMaggio's 1942 salary except that he got $27,500 last year and is threatening to ask in the neighborhood of $50,000 next season. Makes a mental play on words by thinking of $50,000 as a nice neighborhood. Recalls that Hank Greenberg had to quit his $55,000 contract with the Tigers last spring to work in Uncle Sam's Army for $21 a day once a month. Recalls that there is work to be done, and no joking.

Poises hands over typewriter keyboard but can't muster a thought. Discovers that the wrong end of a cigarette is hot. Runs hand over scalp and wonders if front hair will reach down to teeth. Tries it and makes it. Wonders how he'd look with crew haircut. Wonders whatever became of Eric Von Strohelm. Debates whether or not to go all the way to the kitchen for a drink of water. Decides it's too much of a hike at this time and vetoes the idea. Overrides veto and happily discovers a beer on ice.

Resolutely returns to desk and determines to go to work. Speculates about the St. Louis Browns as a topic and abandons that idea. Thinks it over again from the angle that the Browns drew only 170,000 fans at home last season and were living off the league, as it were, drawing drawing more than 450,000 fans in road games. Decides nobody much interested in the Browns. Wonders if many racing fans know that the maximum number of starters in a race is governed by the width of the track because, under the rules of racing, each horse is supposed to have 5 feet of racing room.

Gazes at messy ashtray and is convinced his growth must be stunted by this time. Crosses legs beneath desk and whacks shin. Reaches down to rub shin and whacks head on desk. Can't decide which hurts the most, feels very unhappy. Recalls, for no reason at all, that letter from a reader addressing him as "Dear Jughead." Resolves never to take self too seriously. Wonders if there is another beer in the ice box.

Doesn't Fancy Lady Horses in Spring

Mulls the idea of doing a winter book piece on the Kentucky Derby. Suddenly recalls that Alsab, the favorite, is by a dam that sold for only $90. Also that fillies almost never win the Derby, because lady horses are prone to be romancing in the spring and don't keep their minds on racing like the colts. Decides it's too early for the Derby as a topic and how about Benny Hogan, who won the $10,000 Los Angeles open? Sympathizes with Freddy Corcoran, the P. G. A. publicist, whose job it is to glamorize the dead-panned Hogan, and dismisses the whole idea.

Looks at keyboard and berates self for never having learned the touch system. Looks at wall and sees plaster with its own idea of V for victory. Looks at watch and discovers, dammit, that he has missed Elmer Davis with the news. Realizes this isn't getting his work done, and wonders how he has been able to bat it out every day all these years. Decides one more time won't hurt, and starts banging away with both fingers and it comes out like this.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 15.—Toughest civilian-life habit Private Joe Louis will have to break is the overpowering stupor which comes over him about 9 a. m. The long years of training for fights schooled his system to wake up early in the morning (for road) but to expect to sleep from about 9 until noon.

CONSIDINE

Now that he's safely ensconced in the Army let us say that once again this son of a simple Negro cotton chopper has handled himself with a dignity and distinction. When you come right down to it, the last week was pretty trying for him. In the first place he risked his title for nothing—risked a tremendous possession with no hope of gain. Then he gave up the kind of easy life to which his fists had accustomed him by voluntarily cutting short the period before his induction. He was yanked suddenly from the comparative chi-chi of a suite in the finest colored hotel in the country to the raw, clapboard reality of Camp Upton. The endless praise which has always rolled off his powerful sloping shoulders was replaced by curt military commands. Anyway, under all this pressure he has conducted himself with the shy but easy grace that has marked him since his first light.

We think that if it were left up to Joe, he'd prefer to take pot luck with the bedraggled looking colored draftees who shuffled off with him to their Upton barracks. He probably will wind up as a kind of traveling salesman in uniform, touring Army camps to keep up the interest and enthusiasm of draftees for military service. That would be his best contribution to Army life. But, as we said, we think that he'd prefer to remain just another guy named Joe.

Before we let the fellow rest a few days, as a topic, we want to say that Bill Corum has a good idea about starting a Joe Louis hospital cot fund. Bill would open this drive to every sports fan in the country, enabling them to contribute any amount to the fund to provide free hospital beds for men and women who otherwise could never afford much needed medical treatment. It would help perpetuate Joe's name for years to come.

We're all sweetness and light today, so let us rush into print with a plug for baseball before the delirium passes.

The old game has come through darn loyally in the national emergency. A good chunk of its leading figures have gone off to war with high hearts, and no complaints about giving up tremendous incomes—though all of them know that when they come back to baseball, if they get back, the same owners who are now clapping them on their backs will refuse to pay them the money they were getting when Uncle Sam called.

Now Nelson Rockefeller's foundation for the cementing of inter-American relations has dipped into the game and extracted our pal, Moe Berg, of the Red Sox. We can't think of a better choice for a good-will man. Moe will be the first to admit that a little too much has been made of his penchant for languages. In fact he is always modestly lopping off about eight of the languages over which he is popularly supposed to hold complete sway. But the truth is that he speaks Spanish and French more than fluently. His linguistic talents will serve him in good stead when he goes off to do his bit to keep the Americas in line. But, primarily, he was chosen because he is a pleasant, good-natured, tactful, intelligent man who can do a good job in a spot like the one into which Rockefeller has placed him. The best thing we can say about Moe is that he is as well-liked by the morons of baseball as he is by the college-bred men in the game. The game should be proud of him.

Md., C. U. See Action Tonight

Maryland will play its first home game of the season against Washington College and Catholic University will entertain the unbeaten Mason-Dixon Conference leaders, Loyola of Baltimore, in an all-home card for the local college basketball teams tonight.

The Terps will be meeting their only victims of last year's 22-game schedule in the Shoremen, whose chief claim to fame this season is a 40-39 victory over the University of Baltimore in the State's major upset to date. The Shoremen have lost two Mason-Dixon Conference games against no victories and lost all three games in an Eastern Christmas week tour.

Catholic U. has a little matter of revenge for a 58-28 beating the Loyolans handed them in a December meeting in Baltimore. The Greyhounds maintained their unbeaten pace in the conference Wednesday night with an overtime triumph over Western Maryland's improving Terrors.

Maryland will stick to its usual 8 o'clock starting time while the Cards will also play at 8, a half-hour earlier than usual.

Coach Burt Shipley will show the Maryland students his all sophomore club, including Ernie Travis, the District's leading scorer with a 16-point-a-game average. The Terps have won twice, over Richmond and Virginia, in eight starts.

Gallaudet is the only college club in action tomorrow visiting Randolph Macon for a Mason-Dixon Conference encounter.

Alumni to Have Voice in Selection Of New Mentor; Steiner Considered

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 15.—Plans to bring a "big-name" grid coach to Yale will be crystallized Saturday when the university's advisory football committee meets in New York, it was learned authoritatively today.

This meeting, which starts the belated search for a successor to resigned Spike Nelson, is ultra-significant for two reasons: (1) It gives recommending voice to Eli alumni for the first time in 36 years, and (2) it indicates that Yale, at last, will attempt to recapture former gridiron glory.

The committee seeks a coach with a national reputation for winning, but one who also would be qualified to shift into an intra-mural sports setup should the war cause drastic curtailment of varsity athletics in 1943 or '44. And he need not be a Yale grad.

Four to Be Present

Four committee members will be present at Saturday's meeting: Chairman Edwin Foster Blair, George Adee and Douglass Bomeisler, all of New York, and Bob Hall, of Philadelpia. The fifth member, Lieut. Clint Frank, is with the Air Corps in Texas, and will give his opinions by telephone. This committee and Yale's director of athletics, Ogden D. Miller, have received many applications for the job, but "not a single man has been interviewed yet."

Coaches likely to be considered include Lon Stiner, of Oregon State's Rose Bowl champions; Don Faurot, of Missouri; Frank Leahy, of Notre Dame; Jim Crowley, of Fordham; Red Blaik, of Army, and Lou Little, of Columbia. If the man selected already is under contract, arrangements may be made to take care of the situation. One authority says it's virtually certain that Yale will spend money for a pilot this time, upping the ante considerably from its usual $8000 or $10,000 a year.

Spike Nelson's one-year regime, with but one victory in eight games, climaxed a lengthy slump in the Eli football fortunes and caused such a crisis in relations between Yale alumni and the board of athletic control that President Charles Seymour of the university invited an alumni committee to recommend selection of a new coach.

Must Be Approved

The committee's recommendation must be approved by the board of control and also by the Yale Corporation, which formulates the university's policies. In view of the situation that brought about the committee's invitation, recommendation will be tantamount to hiring.

The Yale Corporation, at last week's meeting, made preliminary plans for a full 1942 schedule of varsity athletics, and is expected to make the program definite at next month's meeting. The only important change being considered concerns the annual Yale-Harvard crew race on the Thames at New London. Because New London is a submarine and Coast Guard base, the race is expected to be shifted to the Housatonic River at Derby, Conn., and halved from 4 miles to 2.

Giants' Davis Enlists In the Air Corps

Davis, who is 27 and single, was on the Giants' 1941 roster.

Nelson, Still Red-Hot, Leads Oakland Open

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 15.—Byron Nelson, of Toledo, Ohio, shot a 3-under-par 67 today to lead the field at the end of the first round of the $5,000 72-hole Oakland Open Golf Tournament. The former United States Open and P. G. A. champion posted a 33—34.

The two-time national golf champion, never a winner on the California leg of the winter tournament trail, set the pace for the 144 starters. Par for the Sequoyah course is 35, 35—70.

Nelson chalked up 5 birdies during the round and made two errors, each accounting for a bogey. He chipped too boldly on the eleventh and hit a tee shot over the green on the fourteenth.

Otherwise Nelson, a specialist with the irons, played championship golf—the kind that won him the Open in 1939 and the P. G. A. in 1940.

Tenth Attempt

It's the tenth year Nelson has been trying to win a tournament in this State.

A stroke behind were clustered the tournament favorite, Ben Hogan, and three Californians. Hogan turned in a pair of 34's for his 68. Grouped with him were Mike DeMassey, with 35-33; Bill Nary, 36-32, and Lawson Little, the one time amateur king, with 34-34. Little blew a chance for a tie with Nelson by taking a 6 on the par 5 eighteenth.

Hogan, the starting favorite and still the most popular choice because of his recent victory in the Los Angeles Open, had no excuses and needed none. He was right up with

Zivic Fights Robinson Tonight in New York

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 15.—Joe Louis is in the Army now and out of the headlines for a while, so the secret can come out that Fritzie Zivic and Ray Robinson will take pot-shots at each other for 12 rounds tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden for a crack at Red Cochrane's welterweight title.

Although this return match has been on the books for weeks, the hullabaloo over Louis' defeat of Buddy Baer and his joining up to do his fighting for Uncle Sam left tomorrow's tussle a somewhat mysterious meeting, not publicly exposed until now.

However, from the looks of things Gus Fan and the missus are going to see that it gets quite a bit of attention. From under Promoter Mike Jacobs' hat comes the tip that this tea party will draw a gate of over $30,000, possibly reaching $40,000, and that 12,000 or more may turn out for the festivities, the winner of which is slated to tangle with Cochrane February 20 in an infantile paralysis fund benefit fight.

Robinson, undefeated in 27 straight trips to the post since turning professional a year and a half ago, is 1 to 2 to repeat his October

C. U. Winner, 53-50, Over Hopkins

Just enough power for a decisive spree in the last few minutes was generated by Catholic University's basketers last night as they beat out Johns Hopkins, 53-50, in an exciting struggle on the Brookland court.

Their fifth triumph in seven starts the Cardinals owed to the combined efforts of Dick Scanlon and Freddy Rice, who accounted for five and three field goals, respectively, as the hosts dug out of a deficit Hopkins had handed them early in the second half. The fast pair thus managed for a split in scoring honors, each with 14 points.

Hopkins rushed into an early advantage and clung to it until the eventual winners found the range near the end of the opening period. Then they were hot enough to take a 28-22 margin at the half.

Again C. U. faltered as the second period started, giving Hopkins another hope, but that evaporated quickly as Scanlon and Rice went to work.

Nat Pitching Hopes Jolted As Rookie Mulligan Enlists

The Nats were dealt another jolt by the war yesterday. President Clark Griffith was advised that Dick Mulligan, bright young pitching prospect, had enlisted in the Army Air Corps, at his Trenton, N. J., home.

Mulligan, who thus joins Shortstop Cecil Travis and Outfielder Buddy Lewis in the contingent of former Nats now in Army uniform, had been regarded as a regular member of the Nats' 1942 pitching staff despite his lack of major league experience.

A left-handed knuckle-baller, purchased late last season from the Trenton club of the Class B Interstate League, Mulligan pitched one game for the Nats near the end of the 1941 campaign. He was beaten by the Boston Red Sox, but errors figured in his defeat and Manager Bucky Harris was impressed with his pitching.

Mulligan showed Harris superb control of his knuckle ball and the Nats' bosses were impressed also, with his calmness on the mound. "He's certain to be a big help to us next season," said Harris in the waning days of the 1941 campaign. "I've never seen a rookie, particularly a left-hander, with such poise in his first big league game."

The Nats first became interested in Mulligan early in the 1941 season when he pitched against them in an exhibition game at Trenton. Negotiations for his purchase were opened following that game.

Eagles Play Hockey Benefit Here Tonight

New York's rapid Rovers are to go after their fifth victory in seven starts over the Washington Eagles tonight when they invade Riverside Stadium for an important Eastern Hockey League game at 8:30 o'clock.

Ten per cent of the gross receipts will be donated to the Blood Bank Fund sponsored by the Washington Post in the interest of Children's Hospital.

One of the largest crowds to witness a hockey match locally is anticipated as the Eagles return to full strength for the first time in two weeks as Paul Courteau, who has been nursing an injured left leg, skates back into center.

The return of Courteau following Tommy McCormack's successful comeback against the Atlantic City Sea Gulls last Tuesday night provides the Eagles with a one-two punch that has been missing in recent starts.

Leading Scorers on Rovers

The Rovers have shut out the Eagles on home ice thus far this season, taking both games by 3-2 scores. Five of the six games involving these teams have been decided by one goal, New York taking three of these and Washington two. The Rovers won another close one, 4-2.

The fast and fiery Rover boys will turn loose no fewer than five of the Eastern League's leading individual scorers in Hubert Macey, Bill Robinson, Gil Nordin, Lewis Medynski and Bob Kirkpatrick, Macey is tied with Baltimore's Andy Chakowski as runner-up to individual leader Tommy Burlington, of Atlantic City, with 46 points. Burlington has 57.

Paul Corteau, currently enacting a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde role for the Eagles, plays Dr. Jekyll by being the only Washington player among the Eastern League's scoring standouts and Mr. Hyde by playing the penalty pews to the tune of 70 minutes—the latter performance making him the undisputed league leader. He is tied with Baltimore's Ab McDougall and Boston's Lloyd Gronsdal for seventh place with 36 points.

A Money Player

Probably the most bothersome individual among the Rovers insofar as the Eagles are concerned is Bob Kirkpatrick, brilliant center. Kirkpatrick recently scored both goals as New York forged into an early 2-0 lead over the Eagles in Madison Square Garden, only to lose out in a stretch finish, 3 to 2.

In the Rovers' last appearance at Riverside, Kirkpatrick not only played a great defensive and passing game, but also fired the last period shot that brought New York home victorious over the locals, 3-2.

Colonials Toy With Hoyas; Zunic Leads

Roll Up Margin of 31-16 in First 29 Minutes as G. U. Is Held to 4 Baskets

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

George Washington and Georgetown lured 4000 basketball fans to Riverside Stadium last night with the promise of a renewal of their red-hot intracity rivalry, but after 40 minutes of play the Hoya fans had a right to ask for their money back. The final score of 45-36 for G. W. was a compliment to the losers who were never really in the one-sided ball game.

An idea of Georgetown's impotency can be gathered from the fact that they made just four field goals in the first 29 minutes of play and were behind at the time, 31-16.

Matt Zunic, G. W.'s daredevil forward who seemingly covers the entire court with about four of his lengthy strides, took personal care of the hapless Hoyas with an 18-point performance which included eight field goals from every possible position on the court.

Ties Series at 3 Each

Zunic scored 14 points in the first half as the Colonials rolled up a 21-15 advantage at the intermission and when he lost his scoring range in the second half, Roy McNeil and Bobby Gilham took up and kept the Hoyas well back of their G Street rivals.

George Washington's deserving triumph squared the modern series at three games each and gave Georgetown a season's record of three victories and four defeats against three and five for the Colonials. It was their first triumph against major opposition.

The principal reason Georgetown failed to improve on its four field goal record at the three-quarter mark of the ball game is that they seldom had a chance to shoot. G. W. was protecting its points with zealous guarding and every time a Hoya found himself with the ball a G. W. player was covering him. The Colonials followed the ball closely all evening and on numerous occasions batted it from their opposition's hands and monopolized the play off the backboards.

Schmidli Stars for G. U.

Charley Schmidli helped the losers to bring the score to respectable proportions with three field goals and four foul shots for ten points in the last five minutes, starting when G. W. was in possession of a 42-25 advantage and the ball game.

Referee Paul Menton and Al Doran were prominent in the proceedings, putting five men out of the ball game on personal fouls: Schmidli, Bill Bornheimer and Buddy O'Grady, of the Hoyas, and Roy McNeil and Joey Gallagher, of G. W. Bornheimer drew his usual early fouls and was little help to the Hoyas as he sat out most of the contest on the bench.

Catholic University to Play Football Again This Season

1942 Team To Be Led By LaFond

Cards to Attempt Six Mason-Dixon Games; American U. Listed for Sept. 26

Catholic University will have a football team next season after a year's absence from the gridiron, Director of Athletics Eddie LaFond announced last night, but the scope of its activity will be confined to the Mason-Dixon Conference and teams of that caliber.

Four games have been scheduled and negotiations are pending for two more. The schedule will not exceed six and they should provide a stern test for the Cards who are beginning all over again after once ranking with the better teams in the East for a number of years.

American University will be the Cardinals' first opponent and the game comes early in the season, or September 26, to be exact. The lone road game listed to date is with Western Maryland at Westminster October 17, but one of the two games that may be arranged possibly will be on a foreign field.

Washington College will play at Brookland November 7 and a game with Mount St. Mary's also is carded for the Brookland bowl, although no definite date has been agreed on.

LaFond, whose football ability, both as player and coach, has been overshadowed by his work in the squared circle, will handle the gridmen unassisted. No spring training sessions are planned and the general scholastic set-up will permit only a brief period of practice before the curtain raiser, but he confidently expects to have a team able to give a good account of itself in its own class.

LaFond will be assured of a squad of at least 30 men at the start of the campaign, for more than that number pledged themselves to report for the squad in the referendum in which the undergraduates voted for the sport's return. This number may suffer because of scholastic difficulties, the draft, and other causes, but the general spirit on the campus is one of confidence and determination and the Cards will come up with a fighting outfit unless the omens are misleading.

Goldsboro Natators Show In Meet Here

Goldsboro Swimming Association will be well represented in the Shoreham Open Swimming Meet tomorrow although the little North Carolina city will sent only three girls and a boy to Washington.

With more than 90 entries already in the hands of Charlton Graves, chairman of the committee in charge, and more than 100 expected, the Tarheels can expect a swift brand of competition.

Two of Goldsboro's girls are 14-year-old Peggy Pate and Evelyn Barbee, not yet 14 but already blossoming out as one of the topnotch mermaids of the South Atlantic sector. Comely Lessie Mallard and Ben Ward, the lone male, round out the squad.

Miss Pate holds the American short course record in the 50-meters breaststroke which she hung up last summer in the Carolinas A. A. U. meet at Tarboro, N. C. She has greatly improved since then, especially over longer distances, as the records bear out. Last summer at Richmond she swam the 100-yard course in 1:24.4. Several weeks ago, competing against Maria Lenk of the visiting South American team, she negotiated the same distance in 1:17.

Ruth DeChastain Rolls Season's High Set

Ruth De Chastain, of Beta Chi No. 1, rolled the highest set of the season last night in the Intersorority League by posting a 348 at the Hi-Skor alleys.

High individual game was garnered by Gertrude Johnson, of Sigma Phi Gamma No. 2. Beta Chi No. 1 tallied high team game of 528 and high set of 1500, the latter count a season high.

Unbeaten Fives From Roosevelt, Wilson Play

Game Set for Tech High Gym as Part Of Twin Bill; Western Engages Tech

The ranks of undefeated pre-season favorites in the interhigh basketball series will be pared to a solitary team today when Roosevelt and Wilson, the survivors since Western and Eastern were the victims of upsets, come to grips in one half of a doubleheader at Tech gym. In the first game, at 3:30, Tech takes on Western.

A supplimentary schoolboy feature to public school action will be Georgetown Prep's invasion of Gonzaga for the initial Catholic Prep title game of the year. Coach Orrel Mitchell of the Little Hoyas, opposes the boys he coached last year for the first time.

Roosevelt's Riders appear to hold an edge in today's big interhigh meeting, at least on the strength of series play so far. Faced by a favored Western club last week, they were out front most of the way and finally were clever enough to win in an overtime.

Vinson Was Out

Wilson, on the other hand, had a horrible time of it nosing out Tech, which it was supposed to trample at will. An argument in its favor, however, is the fact it played without Capt. Freddy Vinson, floor general, who was out of town.

No matter who comes out on the long end, the game should develop into a scoring duel between the Riders' Charley Howard and the Tigers' Don Hillock. Vinson and Roosevelt's Frank Redinger may also be involved. All are basket sharks.

Western should take the opener, but there is no guarantee that the Raiders will if Tech comes up with another of such performances as it hurled at Wilson. The Maroons have lost their last three starts but qualify as one of the most improved fives in the city.

A total of 13 games are on the local and nearby schedule for this afternoon and tonight.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

Roosevelt vs. Wilson at Tech, 4:30.

Md. State Golf Body to Meet In Baltimore

Maryland State Golf Association officials are expected to vote to go ahead with at least half the association's schedule next season in the annual meeting at the Roland Park branch of the Baltimore Country Club tonight. The meeting at 8:30 p. m. will be preceded by dinner at 7 o'clock.

Wiffy Cox, president of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., will attend with the Congressional Club delegation and will attempt to work out a series of events in line with the pro setup and do away with conflicting one-day affairs of former years.

A majority of the delegates from District clubs are opposed to the United States Golf Association's move of doing away with the tournament schedule and they are expected to vote on the fullest possible card for the State association tonight.

Edgar Lucas is slated to take over as president, succeeding John MacKenzie, while Dr. R. A. Keilty, of Washington, will remain first vice president.

The Middle Atlantic Golf Association will meet tomorrow night at the University Club, and Manor Club will bid for the annual amateur championship regardless of the association's viewpoints on next season's schedule.

The women golfers will meet Monday at Kenwood to decide on their war-time activities.

St. John's Beats Eastern, 36-34, In Overtime

For the second time in two days, St. John's basketers emerged from an overtime game with a victory yesterday, this one coming over the skidding forces of Eastern on the latter's court, 36-34. It was the losers' second straight beating, after winning the first seven outings of the year.

Victors over Anacostia by a 47-44 count Wednesday after one extra session, the Johnnies necessitated two yesterday before stopping the White Tide. And again it was Chuck Dudley, junior center, who accounted for the winning points.

St. John's was on the short end of a 34-32 score early in the first overtime, Mike Leib having put the Tide on top with a set shot, when Dudley came through with the tying basket. Two minutes of the ensuing "sudden death" period had elapsed when Dudley again connected. He dribbled around his guard and dropped in a snowbird to decide matters.

Scores 11 Points

In addition to the important points, Dudley also scored the most. His total of 11 edged out Teammates George Hughes and Larry Cooke by 2 points. Eastern's best scorer, as the Johnnies repeated what Central did to Eastern Tuesday, was Leib with 10 points.

A valiant rally by Eastern almost unseated St. John's in regulation time after the winners had led all the way. After trailing by 13-6, 20-14 and 28-20 at the end of the previous quarters, the Tide's late spree brought the score up even at 32-32 for the end of the regular game.

Dudley's 11 points brought to 48 his total for the week. Wednesday he turned in the highest individual effort of the year when he managed for 24 points against Anacostia and Monday he kicked in 13 more as his team whipped Mount St. Josephs, 35-30.

College Group To Aid Navy Sports School

By the Associated Press

The Navy called on a group of leading educators yesterday to assist in working out an athletic program designed to keep Uncle Sam's sea fighters in top trim.

Prof. Philip O. Badger, of New York University, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, was announced as the head of a seven-man committee which will inspect the Navy's school for physical instructors at Norfolk, Va., next Monday.

A naval spokesman said the educators had been requested to submit "constructive criticism of the Navy's program in this field." At Norfolk, the Navy is training men who later will be assigned as athletic directors at the various stations.

Members of Badger's "critical" inspection group will be Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, of Princeton; Prof. T. Nelson Metcalf, University of Chicago; Prof. Charles H. McCloy, Iowa State; Prof. Seward C. Staley, University of Illinois; Dean Carl P. Schott, Penn State, and Dr. Frank S. Lloyd, of N. Y. U.

Extra! Joe Louis Is Stopped— By Writer's Cramp

By the United Press

Yaphank, N. Y., Jan. 15.—Joe Louis, who has stopped quite a line of fighters in his days in the ring, stopped an Army line today—with a pencil.

He was going through a processing building to be outfitted with uniform and equipment when fellow selectees began to ask his autograph.

Joe's willingness to scribble his name delayed the line so often that Army officers finally ordered the autographing stopped.

'It's Safe to Come West,' Diamond Trainees Are Told

'Pants' Rowland, Head of Cubs' Farm, Assures Bucs, A's and White Sox Players

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 15.—Mr. Rowland, a nicely tailored figure in chocolate brown, glanced hurriedly toward an open window in his office, peeked under his desk, then spoke.

"Nope, not even a wild rumor hiding under there," he said. He consulted his watch. A nice piece of jewelry.

"I think," said Mr. Rowland, "that you can tell the boys back East that it's safe. Tell 'em to come on out."

Mr. Rowland, first name Clarence and often referred to familiarly as "pants," was speaking for the benefit of his baseball pals. Chiefly he was concerned with the Chicago Cubs, but included too were the White Sox, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia Athletics.

"They may get a big surprise when they come out here for spring training," continued "Pants," new president of the Cubs-controlled Los Angeles Coast League club.

May Find Patrons

The surprise, he explained, may be that they'll find real, live patrons sitting in the stands in more plentiful numbers than ever before for their exhibition games.

"The crowds they drew at that golf tournament here the other day proved that people are dying for sports attractions. I hear they had 30,000 people in the four days it was held, counting those that sneaked in free."

Mr. R. was just about correct. The Los Angeles Open did attract almost that many and they paid something like $22,000 for the show. It was the biggest in the tournament's history.

It was also most significant.

Rumors Scarce

"Do you know," asked Clarence of someone, possibly himself, "that I haven't heard but one groundless rumor in four days, and I traced that one down. It came from Chicago."

As matters stand, and despite reports to the contrary, the four clubs will train in their usual camps—the Cubs at Catalina Island, the White Sox at Pasadena, Pittsburgh at San Bernardino and the A's at Anaheim.

Woodward Wins Over Franklin Day

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Jan. 15.—Franklin Day School five lost its second decision of the year to Woodward Prep, of Washington, here today, a stinging 58-30 routing that improved on a 19-16 victory earlier in the season.

After building up a 21-8 margin at the half, Woodward won as it pleased.

Billy Noyes, captain and only veteran on the invading quintet, continued his high scoring for the club with 18 points. Andrews, Shrader and Lemaster kicked in 13, 12 and 11, respectively.

For the hosts, Norton and Childs were high with 8 points apiece.

Fitzpatrick Upsets Schaefer, 50 to 37, In Billiard Play

By International News Service

Chicago, Jan. 15.—John Fitzpatrick, of Los Angeles, playing in the World's Three-Cushion Billiard Tournament for only the second time, scored a major upset today when he defeated Jake Schaefer, the Cleveland balk-line specialist, 50 to 37, in 41 innings.

The victory was the second straight for Fitzpatrick and left him with a .500 percentage for his first four matches. Schaefer's defeat was his third in four games and virtually eliminated him from the championship picture.

Otto Reisley, the Philadelphia giant killer and three-time winner of the three-cushion meet, handed Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, his second defeat, winning 50 to 43 in 60 innings. It was Reiselt's third win in five matches.

Bill Gordon, of Chicago and Wilfred Reid, of Buffalo came in second with a 69 while tied at 70 for third place were Bill Livie, Cleveland, and Tom Skipper, of Elmira, N. Y., and Charley Mayo, of Lido, Long Island and Mike Brady, of Boston.

The regular senior P. G. A. tournament will be played Saturday and Sunday.

Ex-Wife Roots For Billiard Star. She Gets Half of Swag

By International News Service

Chicago, Jan. 15.—The former wife of Arthur E. Thurnblad, 1931 three-cushion billiards champion, was pulling hard tonight for him to repeat in the world's championship tournament now underway.

The reason: Judge Joseph Sabath ordered Thurnblad to give her half his winnings—after deducting $100 for training expenses.

Profiting by experience—the billiards star asked and obtained an injunction to restrain his former wife from molesting him while he is engaged in the tourney. He pointed out that on previous occasions when he has been in Chicago for the annual tournament, Mrs. Turnblad had him arrested because he was arrears in support money for their seven-year-old son.

Horwits, Former Ledger Writer, Joins A's Staff

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (AP).—Al Horwits, president of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, today was appointed director of public relations for the Philadelphia Athletics. He formerly was with the Evening Public Ledger which suspended publication 10 days ago.

Connie Mack, who announced Horwits' appointment, said he had sent contracts to all the A's pitchers, but that practically all of them wanted more money to sign.

Pastor's Bout Here Starts Busy Schedule

The veteran Jimmy Johnston, who was recently honored by the Ring magazine for turning in the best managerial job of the year in the handling of his heavyweight fighter, Bob Pastor, plans a crowded calendar for the former N. Y. U. football star in 1942. The first battle of the busy program will find Pastor, who was also cited for his fine comeback last year, facing Claudio Villar Monday night in Promoter Joe Turner's opening show of the new season in the W Street arena.

After his engagement with Villar, Pastor is tentatively scheduled to meet Lee Savold here, two weeks from Monday and he will follow this with a meeting with the sensational Lem Franklin in Cleveland, February 13.

May Meet Baer

A fight with Maxie Baer is also on the fire. Mike Jacobs has offered Baer, former heavyweight champion, the matcl. for March or April.

A victory for Pastor over Franklin may land him his third shot at Champion Joe Louis in an Army Relief Fund fight. Franklin holds a five-round knockout victory over the massive Abe Simon, a stablemate of Pastor's, who went 13 rounds with Louis before succumbing.

Pastor's fight with Savold is contingent on his winning over Villar. Promoter Turner's plans are to match Savold with the Pastor-Villar winner. Savold has beaten Villar but has never fought Pastor whom he is anxious to meet, realizing a victory over the Saratoga warrior would probably lead to a championship fight.

Pastor Here Tomorrow

Turner talked to Johnston in New York by telephone yesterday, and he was informed that Pastor will arrive tomorrow and continue training at the arena. He has been working out in Stillman's gym where an abundance of sparring mates provided full drills.

Villar is also expected to be here tomorrow. The Spanish fighter who has been fighting out of Cuba since his arrival from Europe, is being conditioned for his fights in America by Harry (The Horse) Raskin, former handler of Buddy Scott.

Eight Teams To Bowl for Post Benefit

Eight teams, instead of the six which competed last year, will go into action in the Fraternal Blood Bank Bowling Tournament at Convention Hall on February 8, furnishing one indication that the benefit for The Washington Post Blood Bank Fund will be highly successful.

American Legion and Knights of Pythias pinmen have been added to the original entry list, and under their respective heads, Ernest Campbell and Herman Wealthall, are expected to increase the competitive angle as well as the proceeds. The latter will go to the Children's Hospital.

Distribution of tickets to the tournament was completed yesterday, heads of the Blood Bank Committee announced. These went to every alley in and near Washington.

In hopes of improving the sale of tickets, the committee further planned a contest between all alleys, with suitable prizes to the winner and runnerup.

It was confidently hoped by all concerned that the February 8 event, which will start at 7:30 p. m. for a lengthy stand, will be able to double last year's contribution to the Blood Bank. In 1941 the worthy charity was benefited by $568.

Saguenay II, $51 for Two Shot, Wins Hialeah's Feature Race

High One Is Second, With Alaking 3d

He Rolls Captures Second Division Of Alhambra Purse To Return $28.30

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 15.—E. K. Bryson's Saguenay II, bred in France by R. Sterling Clark, inaugurated his 5-year-old campaign with a bang here today. Making his Florida debut in the first half of the split Alhambra Purse, the bearer of the red, white and blue silks wore down A. C. Snyder's High One, the favorite, by a length and paid $51 for $2.

H. P. Headley's Alaking trailed High One by three lengths for second position. The well-supported Army Song was badly outrun. Choppy Sea, as usual, eliminated himself by breaking a poor last.

Saguenay II outbroke his rivals from the outside position but Al Bodiou rushed High One up so fast after the start that Apprentice Willie Mehrtens eased the ultimate winner just behind the pace. High One never gained a daylight advantage. In the final strides, Mehrtens outrode Bodiou and his mount drew away, being timed in 1:24 3-5 for the 7 furlongs.

Today's attendance of 7698 surpassed the 5469 of the corresponding day a year ago.

There was a marked similarity in results of the two divisions of the Alhambra. He Rolls, like Saguenay II, was a long-shot winner and was making his winter debut after resting since the Maryland fall season. The favorite in both sections finished second and both starts were ragged.

He Rolls, representing Cedar Farm and victorious in the Arkansas Derby last spring, gave Conn McCreary a double as he charged up from well back of the early leaders and clicked by two lengths in 1:25 2-5. He returned $28.30. W. M. Jeffords' Riding Light, used up racing with Signator, was second by four lengths over Circle M Ranch's Star of last winter, Get Off. Signator was slow leaving the gate. He had to be rushed to gain a narrow lead, then weakened. Arestino had no chance with the break.

A Rare Specimen—He Battered Joe Louis

Fishing

with JACK BELL

New York State sportsmen, who went down without a fighting chance when the plumage law sponsored by the National Audubon Society was passed last year, at least have their dander up. A "free-for-all" conference was held Monday, January 12, before Litgrow Osborne, conservation commissioner of New York.

About 25 amateur and professional fly tyers, sportsmen and fishing tackle dealers were on hand, including Ray Bergman, well known fly-tyer and writer, and Karl G. Frederick, president of the New York State Conservation Council.

JACK BELL

The New York State statute has been proposed as a "model law," to be adopted by the other States, by the National Audubon Society. Under the New York State law all commercialization of wild bird plumage will come to an end April 15, 1947. The bill permits this period for dealers to dispose of stocks on hand. Under this law a hunter who legally kills a game bird may use the plumage to tie his own flies, or he may give them away, but he may not sell the feathers. This means that the sportsman cannot possibly purchase certain plumage that is not obtainable in his own State. Commercial dealings will be restricted to domestic geese, ducks, pigeons, domestic ring-neck pheasants, ostriches and domestic pea fowl.

Interest in this law has aroused Nation-wide interest among sportsmen and conservationists. In speaking to the delegates at the conference the commissioner said he was willing to lend himself to any reasonable amendment to the law as far as fly tyers are concerned. The result was the appointment of a committee to draw up recommendations to exempt the fly tyers from the law prohibiting the use of wild bird plumage on fishing flies manufactured for sale.

A breakdown of hunting license returns for Maryland shows that 1941 fell behind 1940 by a total of 1911. Despite this fact, the cash return for 1941 was greater by $8,281.02. In summing up the year's fiscal business, State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte explained that this was made possible only by the large increase in nonresident and State-wide license fees.

LeCompte, looking toward the future, believes that in this day of rapid transportation that doing away with the county resident license would be a step toward improvement. Residents of any county may now purchase a hunting license to hunt only in his own county for $1.25. A uniform resident State-wide license fee of $2.50 would only be fair, and would equalize the cost for the privilege of hunting for every resident of the State. Baltimore sportsmen now must purchase a State-wide hunting license for $5.50.

These funds are earmarked for the use of the State's game department. This is their only source of income. Actually not 1 cent of the taxpayers' money goes toward the support of this department.

Tabulation of game kill cards, which is now under way, will give the officials some idea of the amount of game which has been killed in the State. From this data LeCompte says they hope to determine whether the hunters are killing game faster than it can be produced in the State.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission reports a definite reduction in hunting accidents during the recent open season. Although as many licenses as usual were sold, there were about 40 per cent fewer fatal accidents and about 10 per cent less nonfatal accidents.

The riflemen, strange as it may seem, turned in a better record than the shotgun shooters. This may be partly because a majority of deer hunters now are wearing red while hunting in the woods.

The open season of 1941 on antlerless deer in Steuben County, N. Y., was ordered in an effort to reduce the high deer population and to bring about a ratio between bucks and does. Frank B. Willey, an Arkport farmer, says "the females do need thinning out." In support of this contention he reports the unusual experience of being chased by a doe. Willey took refuge in a barn and was compelled to remain behind closed doors for some time before the doe finally gave up the siege.

By the United Press

Montreal, Jan. 15.—Nick Metz took a pass from Syl Apps in the overtime period to score the goal that gave the Toronto Maple Leafs a 3-to-2 triumph over the Montreal Canadiens in a National League hockey game tonight.

Toronto held a 2-to-0 lead going into the final period, but loosened up on defense and Joe Benoit and Johnny Quilty notched the tying goals for the Canadiens.

Blackhawks Defeat Brooklyn, 7 to 4

New York, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—The Chicago Black Hawks defeated the Brooklyn Americans, 7 to 4, here tonight in a National Hockey League contest before a crowd of about 7500.

Max Bentley opened the scoring at 8:01 to give the Hawks an edge, but Mel Hill evened it up with an American tally at 10:55. Cully Dahlstrom followed with a pair of goals a little over a minute apart to give the visitors a 3-to-1 lead going into the second session. In this period Norman Larson and Joe Krol tallied for the A's 18 seconds apart to again knot the count. Before the period was over Doug Bentley netted a tie-breaking Hawk goal.

In the final session each team tallied once in the first five minutes, then Art Weibe sealed the issue for the Hawks when he beat Earl Robertson with a minor penalty shot. Doug Bentley added another one at 17:43.

4 Providence Men Get All-Star Posts In Hockey Ballot

Providence players dominated the selections of Washington hockey writers last night in the league-wide balloting to determine the makeup of the Eastern Division All-Star team which is scheduled to meet the Western All-Stars in a Red Cross benefit game at Cleveland on February 3.

Four members of the second-place Providence club were named by the Washington writers who, like writers in other cities, were restrained from selecting local players. Final selection of the team will be determined from a consensus of the choices of hockey writers, fans and coaches in each league city.

Bank Excess Reserves Leap $170,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that lendable excess reserves of banks jumped 170 million dollars to a total of $3,560,000,000 in the week ended January 14. The increase was attributed mainly to Treasury spending.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended January 14 member bank reserve balances increased 275 million dollars. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of 244 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and 47 million dollars in money in circulation, and increases of four million dollars each in Reserve Bank credit and Treasury currency, offset in part by a decrease of two million dollars in gold stock and increases of four million dollars in Treasury cash and 19 million dollars in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on January 14 were estimated to be approximately $3,560,000,000, an increase of 170 million dollars for the week."

Cold Cuts Gain In Rail Loadings

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 737,172 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 60,838 cars, or 9.0 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 25,537 cars, or 3.6 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 68,931 cars, or 10.3 per cent, compared with 1940.

All classes of freight except ore loadings showed increases from the preceding holiday week. The rise in total carloadings, however, was less than seasonally expected because of extremely cold weather in many sections of the country.

Farm Production Goals Increased for 1942

Declaring that events since Pearl Harbor had materially broadened demands for American food, the Agriculture Department today increased its 1942 production goals for hogs, corn for livestock feed, oil-bearing crops, rice, eggs, dry beans, and vegetable crops for canning.

The department said that since the original goals were announced last September, the United States had become involved in the war and was now looked upon not only as the arsenal but the food store of the United Nations.

To meet these new demands, the department said farmers would have to produce as never before and put "every acre of land, every hour of labor, and every bit of farm machinery, fertilizer, and other supplies to the use which will best serve the Nation's wartime needs."

Officials said crop loan programs, Government purchases under lend-lease and relief programs, and sales of Government-held feeds would be employed to provide, insofar as was possible, price incentives.

Rigid crop control restrictions will be retained on wheat and cotton. Slight increases will be allowed for tobacco. Stating that large stocks of these crops already exist, the department said production beyond crop control allotments would be a "waste of labor and supplies."

Crop control limitations on corn were eased somewhat. The 1942 planting goal was increased from 90 million acres to 95 million. This is still short of the acreages planted before the AAA programs were inaugurated. Planting allotments of commercial corn belt farmers will be increased 10 per cent. No marketing quotas will be imposed on the corn crop.

Because of increases in farm production of hogs and chickens, the department said larger feed supplies would be needed. To supplement corn and to release storage space for 1942 crops, the department said it would convert some Government-owned wheat into livestock and poultry feed at prices comparable with corn.

Healy's Resignation Received; Not Yet Accepted

Robert E. Healy, only "charter member" of the Securities Commission, has submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt, the White House said yesterday, but the Chief Executive has not yet accepted it.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early intimated that Mr. Roosevelt might have asked Healy to continue on the job for a while. He said the President had written Healy and that the question of the resignation was "unsettled as of the present time."

Healy was reported to have viewed with little pleasure the selection of Ganson Purcell as chairman of the commission to succeed Edward C. Eicher, whom the President has nominated to be Chief Justice of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

Wholesale Price Index at New 12-Year High

Led by a sharp advance in agricultural commodities, wholesale prices continued their steady upward trend during the week ended January 10, but remained 0.9 per cent below the January average of the boom year of 1929.

The Bureau of Labor statistics index of 900 price series advanced 0.7 per cent during the week to 95 per cent of the 1926 average, a new 12-year high. The index was 11.5 per cent higher than in the corresponding week of 1937.

Last week's upward movement was due to an increase of 2 per cent in farm product prices. This was attributed partly to Senate passage of a price control bill authorizing higher farm price ceilings.

Prices of fuel and lighting materials and house furnishings declined during the week while hides and leather products remained steady.

Retail prices also continued upward, the bureau reported, in a survey covering the month between November 18 and December 16. This rise was said to have been moderate in comparison with earlier months, but it boosted the cost of the family food bill to 16 per cent above the average of a year ago.

Bank Failures in 1941 at Record Low

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that bank failures sank to an all-time record low of eight in 1941.

Even these eight were small banks that had only $3,726,000 deposits between them, nearly all of which was insured and paid to depositors by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Officials credited this low bank mortality to several factors, including improved business conditions resulting from the defense program, previous elimination of weak banks by State and Federal action, and mergers or loans arranged to prevent collpase of a few other threatened banks.

Bank failures have been declining ever since 1933, when all banks were closed temporarily during the national bank holiday and only the strongest banks were permitted to reopen. Official statistics class 4004 banks with $3,600,000,000 deposits as failures that year, although many of these reopened later after getting new capital or being strengthened in other ways.

At the beginning of 1934, the Federal Government arranged to insure all deposits up to $5000 through the FDIC. Since then, the largest number of bank failures in one year was 59 in 1937. The 1940 total was 22.

Truck Load Measure Given Senate Unit

The Office of Production Management asked a Senate subcommittee yesterday to approve legislation which would empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to override State regulations on limits on sizes and weights of trucks crossing State lines. The OPM's position was submitted in a letter to Chairman Andrews (Democrat) Flordia, of a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee. The letter said:

"Shipments have frequently been delayed because of restrictions on truck sizes and weights imposed by a few States and municipalities strategically located on important commercial routes.

"Removal of these restrictions would greatly facilitate transportation of war materials."

I. G. Luhrsen, executive secretay of the Railway Labor Executive Association, opposed the proposal as unnecessary, and David Kaplan, spokesman for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, urged its adoption, saying that frequently drivers were arrested for loads which were legal in the State of their origin and in the State of destination, but illegal in a State crossed en route.

Army, Navy to Coordinate Cotton Duck Buying

The OPM disclosed yesterday that the Army and Navy, for the first time, had agreed to coordinate their purchases of an important material and go into the market together to round up all needed supplies of cotton duck.

To fill the huge order resulting from such a pooling of procurement facilities, OPM said, mills manufacturing fabrics for the automobile industry will be converted as far as possible of production of duck for tents, leggings, hammocks, gas masks, and other military purposes.

Estimates of the total Army-Navy requirements for an undisclosed period have been given to the industry.

Your Federal Income Tax

By Bureau of Internal Revenue

No. 12—Time for Filing Returns

Income tax returns of citizens are required by law to be made on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of the taxable year, which for most individuals is the calendar year. Since March 15, 1942, will fall on a Sunday, such returns for the calendar year 1941 must be filed on or before midnight of Monday, March 16, 1942.

Returns by nonresident alien individuals must be made on or before the 15th day of the sixth month after the close of the fiscal year, or on or before June 15, 1942, for the calendar year 1941.

If placed in the mail, the returns should be posted in ample time to reach the collector's office, under ordinary handling of the mails, on or before the due date. The envelope should bear proper postage and be addressed to the "Collector of Internal Revenue" at the correct address in the district where the taxpayer's legal residence or principal place of business is located. If he has neither, the return should be mailed to the Collector of Internal Revenue at Baltimore Md.

The regulations grant an extension of time for filing returns of income up to and including the 15th day of the sixth month following the close of the taxable year in the case of American citizens residing or traveling abroad, including persons in the military or naval service on duty outside the United States. In all such cases an affidavit is required to be attached to the return stating the cause of the delay in filing, and taxpayers who take advantage of this extension of time will be charged with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum on the first installment of the tax from the original due date until paid.

Bendix Employment Estimated at 40,000

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 14 (AP).—Vincent Bendix, president of Bendix Aviation Corporation, told stockholders at the annual meeting today the company is continuing capacity production in all divisions to meet wartime demands.

Employment in the 20 Bendix plants throughout the country now totals more than 40,000, he said.

Retiring directors were re-elected and later the directors renamed officials and voted a dividend of $1 a share on the capital stock, payable March 2 to stock of record February 6. The same amount was paid last December 1.

Stock Market Holds Steady In Dull Trade

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 15.—It was a fairly well balanced stock market today with small gains and losses sprinkled over most departments.

While selling was never urgent, there was enough of it to retard recovery attempts elsewhere. The list lacked a definite direction at the start and, at the close, trends still were befogged.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 38.3. Dealings were negligible throughout and transfers of 446,770 shares compared with 610,100 yesterday, and were the smallest since October 14 last year.

News Stimulant Lacking

The financial sector could find nothing outstanding in the news to touch off any real speculative or investment buying although a little support was accorded favorites on the idea the recent decline may have gone too far and that the list was in a good position to resume the forward swing on the appearance of any worthwhile developments.

Bullish forces had to contend with sketchy international affairs including the drive of the Japanese toward Singapore. Chilling sentiment to some extent also was the growing Atlantic submarine menace, with a second tanker attacked almost at New York's back door.

American Telephone was one of the few bellwethers to lose more than a point. While this company's estimated 1941 net more than covered the $9 annual dividend rate, it was under that of 1940 and some offerings were attributed to fears taxes and rising costs of operation would affect the current year's earnings.

Steels Depressed

Steels again were a trifle depressed by the threat to production of the growing scrap shortage. Rails held to a slim groove despite a more than seasonal drop in last week's freight loadings. Plans to ration passenger automobiles brought scant response from the motors.

Stocks finishing moderately ahead included Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Co., Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, American Smelting, Montgomery Ward, General Motors, International Harvester and United States Gypsum.

Bonds were mixed. Among commodities grains lagged but cotton ended with advances of 60 cents to $1.20 a bale. At Chicago wheat and corn were unchanged to off ¼ and ⅝ of a cent a bushel, respectively, while hogs were 15 cents lower to 10 cents higher.

Curb prices were ragged. Up a bit were St. Regis Paper, Pennroad and N. J. Zinc. Declines were posted for American Cyanamid "B," Bell Aircraft, Creole Petroleum and Glen Alden Coal. Volume here was around 87,000 shares versus 88,000 Wednesday.

Latest Profit Statements

Air-Way Electric Appliance Corporation, including Toledo Vacuum Cleaner Co. and Air-Way Branches, Inc., for the 48 weeks ended November 29, 1941, reported net profit of $100,035, or $6.06 a share on the 7 per cent first preferred stock, compared with net earnings of $39,609, or $2.40 a share on the first preferred for the year ended December 28, 1940. On February 10, a special meeting of stockholders will be held at Toledo, Ohio, to act upon a proposed merger with Toledo Vacuum Cleaner Co.

Penroad Corporation reported net income from investments of $2,727,507 for 1941, equal to 39 cents a share, compared with $2,083,068, or 28 cents a share, in 1940.

John Morrell & Co. reported net profit for the fiscal year ended last October was $1,706,261, equal to $4.38 a share. The meat-packing concern's inventory system was changed and as a result this figure was not directly comparable with that of the previous year. However, on the basis of inventory valuation formerly used, earnings were $2,815,000, or $7.23 a share, compared with $1,994,905, or $5.12 a share, the fiscal year ended November 2, 1940.

Swift & Co. Votes Special Dividend

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP).—Directors of Swift & Co. declared a special dividend today of 30 cents a share and a regular quarterly of 30 cents, both payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 2.

Meat packing plants will be busier than ever this year processing and distributing increased supplies to feed the armed forces and civilian population, John Holmes, president of Swift & Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting.

He said Swift's employes now exceed 73,000 persons, an all-time high and a gain of 10,000 in two years.

Shoppers' Aid Asked in War Economy Drive

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 15.—The Nation's shoppers were asked today by officials of the OPA and OPM to help America's war conservation program by adopting a practice of "take it with you."

The request was issued in a joint statement at the National Retail Dry Goods Association convention by Dan A. West, deputy director of the consumers division of the Office of Price Administration, and Lessing Rosenwald, chief of the Bureau of Industrial Conservation of the Office of Production Management.

They said the practice would make a real contribution to the job of winning the war in two ways:

1. By saving every bit of paper that we can to assure a sufficient supply of containers to ship munitions, food and clothing to America's fighting men at home and overseas;

2. Relieving pressure on our domestic trucking facilities.

The added:

"The response of the public to the appeal for the salvage of waste paper has been most gratifying. Thousands of tons are being collected every day and are finding their way to the pulp mills to be processed for military uses. We can go a step farther by saving paper at the source."

Many small purchases made in retail stores, they said, could be carried home by the shopper without great inconvenience, thus greatly reducing the amount of paper required for wrapping. Articles for delivery are wrapped in far heavier paper than when they are taken away by the customer.

The official pointed out that rationing of tires and allocation of trucks to defense agencies threatened to bring about a critical situation in retail deliveries.

"Merchants who do not offer extra service at the expense of our national conservation," they said, "are doing their part toward winning the war."

These figures covered the parent company only, and did not include its proportionate interest in the undivided profits of subsidiaries. The 1941 earnings included a partial estimate for December.

For the 12 months ended November 30, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported earnings of its subsidiary companies of the Bell System, applicable to the stock of the American Co., were $193,914,668, or $10.38 a common share, compared with $204,253,916 or $10.93 a share in the preceding 12 months.

Propulsion Ties for Pin League Lead

Propulsion won two games from Machine Shot No. 2 in the Model Basin League at the Ice Palace to go into a tie with Machine Shop No. 1 for first place despite the high single of 136 rolled by Archie Booth. Howard Porter's 361 high set for Machine Shot No. 1 was of no avail as the team dropped three in a row to Electric Shop, but the latter quintet had to roll team highs of 617-1684 in posting the wins.

BROOKLAND

The Brookland Merchants were paced by Lou Kreamer, Cannon's Restaurant, with a 171 single and 412 set but his team dropped two to Pioneer Laundry, the latter team also winning high set with a total of 1732. Washington Oil Burner rolled 621 for high team game. Erick Sieling, MPM Market, had near highs of 150-396 to help take three games from Rudy's Tavern, while a 383 by Leo Sorel aided Modern Way Movers take two from the Washington Oil Burner team. Phil Heffelfinger's 381 for Brookland Hardware was the blow his team needed to win a pair from Brookland Bakery, while both Rod Willie Esso and Diamond Cab scored sweeps over opponents.

ARCADIA

Ruth Schooley, R. F. C. No. 1, led the Ladies' Federal League at Arcadia with individual highs of 148 and 372, but the team highs were garnered by G. P. O. when they posted a 540 game and 1541 set.

SILVER SPRING

The Silver Spring Friendship League found that Al Masson, Wakefield Dairies, with 143-417, and Dick Masceri, his teammate, with 143-405, were the leading pinsmen for the night and whose scores helped win team honors after a 602 game and 1752 set. Gebuhr, of Herzog's Men's Wear, sparked a three-game win over Stewart Bros. with his 138 game and 352 set to take over the league leadership.

FORT DAVIS

Irving Rizzi To Return To Brewers

Out of the lineup the last two games, Irving Rizzi, captain of the 1941 Georgetown University basketball team, is due to return to action Sunday night at Turner's Arena when the Washington Brewers meet the champion Philadelphia Sphas in an American League game.

A portion of the gate receipts will be turned over to the Naismith Memorial Fund in honor of Dr. James A. Naismith, founder of basketball.

Rizzi suffered an infected throat before the last Spha game in Philadelphia, and also missed last Sunday's contest that the Brewers won from the New York Jewels.

Rizzi is a guard, and is expected to see considerable action against the champions. Petey Berenson, who was injured when he crashed into a wall in the Philly game, is still out of commission.

Mack Posnak, coach-manager of the Brewers, was in Philly last night attending the American League meeting and had hoped to sign up a couple of players.

Besides the Naismith benefit, it will be "ladies night" at the arena. All feminine fans will be admitted free when accompanied by escorts. Service men will be admitted for half price.

Most of the crackshots were within a jump of the lead. Exceptions included Horton Smith and Jimmy Thomson, both in the 76 class, and Dick Metz, 1939 winner here, with a 75.

Leonard Dodson, of Kansas City, defending champion, turned in a first round par 70 to tie with six others, including the home course pro and a well-liked favorite, Merk Fry.

Eagles Play Here Tonight

importantly in the doings of the Eagles is Alex Sandalack, rugged defenseman.

Two weeks ago Sandalack was involved in a flying collision with Tommy McCormack, Eagle center, which resulted in a recurrence of a leg injury that kept McCormack inactive until last Tuesday night. Earlier in the season Sandalack engaged Paul Courteau in a fist fight that resulted in a one-game suspension for Courteau when it resulted in his third major penalty.

Art Thompson, quiet Eagle winger, is the local player who has played havoc with the Rovers recently. The fast skating Thompson has produced the winning goals in two consecutive decisions gained by the Eagles over the Rovers at Madison Square Garden by scores of 3 to 2 and 4 to 3.

Victory tonight would send the Eagles within 6 points—or three games—of the Rovers, who currently are installed as runner-up to the league leading Boston Olympics.

Openly Operated Handbooks Menace New Orleans Racing

Fair Grounds Still Losing Money Despite Cut in Purses and Expenses

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Jan. 15.—The revival of horse racing in New Orleans is facing disaster somewhere in the tangled web of Louisiana politics.

The Fair Grounds, under new management after a year's idleness following abandonment of racing by the Louisiana Jockey Club, has done just about half as well as expected since opening of a 42-day meet on Christmas Day. The daily take has been slightly under $54,000, instead of the $100,000 operators anticipated.

One track official declared "we have had to cut many of the top purses and reduced personnel expenses, but we're still losing money."

Most informed sources placed the principal blame for the low "take" at the track upon the operation of illegal handbooks, reliably estimated at more than 200 in the city and its environs. One authoritative source estimated the "bookies" were taking "conservatively $20,000 a day" from the track.

Sylvester W. Labrot, jr., president of the Fairgrounds Breeders' and Racing Association, declined to discuss the handbooks but said "we've had some tough breaks such as the war and a stretch of bad weather."

In the past, the handbooks have been closed tightly during local race meets. This year they are operating openly despite protests from newspapers and others.

A recent public statement by John F. Clark, jr., chairman of the State Racing Commission, cited the Louisiana laws against bookmaking outside a track enclosure and decried "lack of cooperation of the city and State police in handling the handbook situation in New Orleans."

The city and State administrations are locked in a bitter political fight, leading up to an election January 27 in which Mayor Robert S. Maestri seeks to return to office against Herve Racivitch, supported by members of the State administration although Gov. Sam Jones has not openly indorsed him.

The State has collected a little more than $30,000 in taxes from the track thus far, less than half of the amount that would have been received had the take reached expectations.

Racing circles believe the 1943 program may be abandoned if an adjustment is not reached before then.

G. W. Scores Over Hoyas At Riverside

last night in Bobby Gilham, who played his first inspired ball game of the season and kept the Hoyas' fancy Dan well under control all evening. Gilham did not confine his efforts to watching O'Grady for he pushed in 11 points, most of them on spurts under the basket.

Ed Gustafson, McNeil, Myers and Gallagher all gave Zunic and Gilham ample assistance as G. W. clicked at home for the first time this year. They made a minimum of mistakes and until Schmidli found his hot hand in the closing minutes it looked as though G. W.'s margin might reach 25 points.

Zunic continually brought down the house with his first half scoring antics. He sneaked under the basket for a two-pointer which opened the game and after Bornheimer made good twice from the foul line and O'Grady dropped a pot-shot, Zunic countered with a midcourt score. He easily faked Ken Engles out of a play for his third field goal and followed with a one-hand pivot shot and then batted in a follow-up after taking the ball off the back board on three shots within a few seconds time.

He potted two more before the half and added a pot shot and two fouls in the second half. He was taken out with five minutes to play in the first half when he and Charley Schmidli tangled on the floor.

Georgetown's small, fast freshmen courtmen remained unbeaten with a convincing 56-40 victory over the Colonial Cubs in a preliminary. It was the first defeat for the G. W. frosh and left Georgetown with a 4-3 edge in the modern series renewal.

The Colonials overcame a 7-1 deficit to tie the game at 11-all early in the second quarter, but fell behind 29-16 at half time and G. U. was in command, 42-31, at the end of the third period.

Andy Kostoka was again high scorer for the Hoyas with 17 points, while Miggs Reilly made 13 and Billy Hassett 11. Dan Kraus left the game early when his bandaged leg gave way. Si Wagman flipped in seven potshot field goals to lead the Colonial Cubs with 14 points.

Following the varsity game, the Sacred Heart 119-pounders defeated the Georgetown Prep team of that class, 10-3, in the third game of the night.

Robinson Fights Zivic Tonight

performance, when he came on to take the decision from the battle-scarred Pittsburgh warrior. Off his record, Ray figures to be the odds-on favorite. The skinny Hahlem Hammer has stiffened 20 of the rivals who sampled his Sunday shots; he's young and fast and can hit. But——

In the ten years the youngest of the five flying Zivics has been fighting he has always looked better in a return match. Fritzie's record shows that half a dozen times, after losing to a rival the first time out, he came back to flatten the same rival later. On only one occasion—when he blew the welterweight championship to Cochrane—has he ever been beaten in a fight at longer than ten rounds—and this is Robinson's first crack at a route longer than the sprint distance.

Picks Pittsburgher

More than that, Fritzie is fighting for the life to which he has become accustomed. Until he arrived to punch Henry Armstrong out of the ring late in 1940, Fritzie was strictly a coffee-and-cake guy in the fraternity of nose flatteners. He has enjoyed immensely the heavy sugar on the big time and won't give it up without a rassle.

As a result, this corner takes a stab at the long shot and tabs Fritzie to outpoint the Harlem beanpole, who hasn't fought for three months.

Steele Pins Strangler Lewis On Arena Mat Before 2000

End Comes After 23 Minutes of Battle At Turner's; Match Is Rough

Ed Strangler Lewis' wrestling comeback suffered a minor setback last night when the big Strangler was struck by a piece of Steele, specifically Ray Steele's fist, in the feature rassle at Turner's Arena before a crowd of 2000 howling fans.

In a bout that started as a grade-A barroom brawl, Ray Steele took the decision after some 23 minutes of scuffling when he clubbed Lewis with a knotty paw as they broke at the ropes. Lewis crashed ponderously to the mat where Steele pounced on him with a body press to end the match.

Before the end, which came with appalling suddenness, Steele and Lewis were having a time of it, with both gentlemen receiving more than a fair share of unnecessary roughness. Referee Casey Berger also came in for a portion of the mayhem when he was forced to threaten Steele with fisticuffs in order to break up some of the winner's unorthodox athletics.

Match Starts Fast

Both men started fast at the bell as Lewis clamped on with his famed headlock, but the swarthy Steele slugged his way out of it. This was the signal to throw niceties to the wind, and from there on the grapplers presented a reasonable facsimile of a pair of prehistoric monsters battling over the last piece of dinosaur steak. Slugging, gouging and illegal use of knees were all a part of the routine.

Finally, Lewis enveloped Steele with a bear hug on the ropes. As Berger ordered them to break, Big Ed stepped back—and that was a tactical error. Steele sneaked over a haymaker that floored Lewis, and then pinned him with a body press.

In a dramatic address from midring, Lewis assured the patrons that he had no alibi, but that he thought foul deeds had been perpetrated upon his person.

In the cofeature, titian-haired Mildred Burke, the undisputed ladies' champ, pinned wild-eyed Gladys Gillem in 13 minutes with a back drop and body press. This can hardly be classified as news inasmuch as Miss Burke is always beating up other ladies with monotonous regularity.

The champ entered the ring wearing snowy white trunks, her ornate titular girdle and a new marcel. Miss Gillem showed her restraint in arraying herself in somber black tights, which showed her off-shade platinum tresses to some advantage.

Swings at Referee

Gladys gave a hint of her nature when she unabashedly took a swipe at Benny Bortnick, the arbiter, as he was giving instructions. Then at the bell she streaked across the enclosure and mussed the Burke marcel with a headlock. From there on the girls were all over the premises, with Gillem occasionally renting the air with Comanche shrieks.

After a few minutes of this, Mildred calculated that the customers had gotten their money's worth so she came off the ropes on a fast rebound and caught Gorgeous Gladys with a back drop and body press, and then rushed for her dressing room.

Emil Dusek and Freddy Grobmier stormed to a stalemate in as rugged a 30 minutes as old Hysteria Hall has witnessed in many a night. Each man was tossed to the crowd on at least three occasions, and much of the carnage occurred outside the ropes.

Cowboy Luttrell, the Terrific Texan who was slugged by Referee Jack Dempsey in a match in Atlanta some months ago, made portly Frank Judson give up in 22 minutes on a leglock.

In the opener, durable Milo Steinborn made short work of Roy Reynolds, bear-hugging him into submission in nine minutes.

IT SMELLS GOOD—IT IS GOOD—The United States Army—the best fed in the world—is seeking even better diets through the cooperation of a group of the Nation's outstanding home economists. Women food experts visited the bakers and cooks school of the Quartermaster Corps at Fort Meade, Md., to make a first-hand study of Army mess management. Policeman Tried in Jail Shooting Case

A First Precinct policeman went on trial before the three-man Police Trial Board yesterday, accused of having fired a shot at a prisoner in the precinct cell block last summer. On trial with him were three other policemen who are charged with failing to report the alleged affair.

Private Arnold F. Jackson, accused of firing the shot, denied all knowledge of any such happening in testifying before the board. The prisoner involved is Roland J. Lindsay, convicted rapist, who is now awaiting electrocution on February 3, and who accused Jackson of firing his service revolver at him.

Others on trial are Lieut. Loraine Johnson, charged with neglect of duty for failing to report the alleged shooting; Private Frank B. Knapp, under the same charge, and Private George W. Bromley, charged with conduct prejudicial to the reputation and discipline of the force for being with Jackson when the alleged shooting took place.

Formal charge against Jackson is conduct unbecoming a police officer.

Lieut. Johnson told the examiners that when he made a routine inspection of the cell block shortly before midnight, Lindsay complained that a shot had been fired at him. Johnson said, however, that investigation convinced him that the charge was groundless so that no report was made. He said he thought Lindsay was feigning insanity from his actions.

He said that he had heard an explosion earlier in the evening, but believed it to be a firecracker. Other witnesses said that firecrackers were frequently shot off around the precinct as "pranks."

The trial board is made up of Inspector Ira E. Keck and Capt. Oscar Letterman, of the Police Department, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Matt Mahorner. Sessions are being held at the Fourth Precinct Station and are scheduled to resume today at 10 a. m.

Another assistant corporation counsel, Fred J. Icenhower, is conducting prosecution of the case, while the policemen are represented by Attorneys Harry Whelan, John H. Burnett and James A. O'Shea.

D. C. Employe Dies In Ambulance After Attack

According to Mrs. James Nokes, sr., his mother, he fainted at the office of the Street Cleaning Department, Thirteenth and G Streets Southeast, after turning in his truck at the close of the day's work. In addition to his mother, he leaves his father, a 14-year-old daughter, Dorothy Lee; a 12-year-old son, James Howard; two sisters and a brother.

He lived at 3807 M Street Northwest. Funeral arrangements have not been completed, but services will be held Monday at Congress Street Methodist Church with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

D. C. Employer Bases Pay Rises On Cost Index

A District employer, hard pressed to keep a permanent staff of employes in the face of competition from defense industries, expanding Government agencies and the armed services, has tried to stabilize his working force by giving pay raises based on the Department of Labor cost of living index for Washington, it was learned yesterday.

The plan was worked out by W. W. Reed, manager of the John P. Agnew Coal Co., and applied to 40 persons employed on a regular weekly basis. An additional 90 employes working on an hourly basis were granted wage raises of from 5 to 15 cents an hour. Total increases will cost the concern an estimated $7000 to $8000 a year, Reed said.

By placing the plan in effect, Reed gave these affected an 8.4 per cent increase in pay, to conform with the present cost of living index of 108.4 which was calculated as of last October 15. When a new index figure is announced shortly as of yesterday, payrolls will be adjusted accordingly, Reed said, provided the index does not go above 110. A 10 per cent increase was all the concern felt it could stand, he said.

Reed described himself as satisfied with the new pay plan, saying that it helped the coal firm retain several experienced employes who would otherwise have left for more lucrative employment.

Higher wages paid out under this plan were a contributing cause of the 25 cents a ton increase in coal prices announced yesterday by Agnew. Other District concerns announced similar price increases.

Y.M.C.A. Prepared To Aid American Prisoners of War

The Y. M. C. A., through its World's Committee, is ready to aid American prisoners of Japan when permission is granted by the Japanese, Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the organization in Washington, reported yesterday.

The "Y," it was stated, supplies prison camps with equipment for recreation, educational, cultural, occupational and rehabilitation activities as well as for religious worship. Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, is a member of the National War Prisoners Aid Committee of the Y. M. C. A.

Y. M. C. A. work for prisoners in the Far East will be directed by neutrals, probably from Switzerland and Sweden, DeGast was informed.

Woman Jailed Under New Vagrancy Law

First conviction under the District's new vagrancy statute was recorded in Police Court yesterday when Thelma Hammersly, 23, no fixed address, was found guilty by Judge Hobart Newman.

Policeman Frank Strader, jr., and Detective Sergt. Harold Hodge charged the woman under Section 3 of the new law after she had been arrested in the 600 block New York Avenue on charge of soliciting prostitution.

Her case was the first to appear at Police Court under the act, which includes a provision that "any person leading an immoral or profligate life who has no lawful employment and who has no lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source," shall be "deemed a vagrant."

Arrested early yesterday, the defendant pleaded guilty to the prostitution count but said she was innocent of being a vagrant.

It was testified that she had been observed on several occasions and that she solicited Strader in the 900 block of Seventh Street Northwest, and took him to a room on New York Avenue.

Records introduced to the court disclosed the woman had been convicted of soliciting in 1940.

Judge Newman sentenced her to 180 days in jail, 90 days on each of the charges.

Police officials last night praised the new statute and described the law "as just what we needed to rid the city of undesirables."

Listen! with Glynn

It was a rather devastating glimpse into the future—a future in which you'll be able to see the person to whom you're talking on the telephone—that was given by CBS's television station to listener-viewers in and around New York a couple of days ago.

The show was being done for the U. S. Treasury's "Buy a Bond" campaign, and to give you an idea of just how popular a sport televiewing is becoming, 48 persons called up within a few minutes after it went on the air to announce they were seeing and hearing it. And, of course, they put in their orders for bonds, $75,000 worth, as a matter of fact.

Clearly shown in the studios was a set of specially installed telephones, their numbers written large on cards beside them. Operating them was a group of Treasury cashiers. The persons who had television sets could look them over, choose whichever one he or she liked best, call him up and watch his reactions as he talked back.

It's only fair to announce that also in the television studio was the glamorous songstress, Tamara, of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" fame, and several other well known entertainers, and that when Tamara manned (?) one of the telephones the calls from male listeners seemed to increase in a somewhat enormous manner.

The thing was so successful that they're going to repeat it shortly.

U. S. Possessions To Get Six-Month Food Reserves

By the United Press

Plans have been perfected for a 50 million dollar reserve food stock program for Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Alaska and the Virgin Islands to enable them to withstand any interruption of communications, it was disclosed last night.

The money, provided in part by Congress and from President Roosevelt's emergency fund, will be used to fill warehouses with essential foodstuffs, required by the special needs of each area.

Many shipments already have reached Hawaii, whose program was launched immediately after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The Hawaiian plan, for which a 35 million dollar revolving fund was established, calls for huge stores of rice, wheat, canned milk, butter and cattle forage.

There will be enough food on hand at all times to enable the islands to withstand a six-months siege. In the interim stocks will be sold to the islanders and replenished. This is to prevent spoilage and at the same time maintain the necessary reserves.

Contract Bridge

A no-trump hand, this one at a game declaration, is shown in today's box Declarer was Mrs. Olive Peterson, of Philadelphia, and she made her contract by a safety play. Knowing that she would be defeated if the two finesses which faced her lost, Mrs. Peterson developed the diamond suit immediately and forced out West's only card of entry. Later she took the second finesse in clubs, but East now had no more spades, West's suit, and so could not put his partner in the lead in any fashion.

The six of spades was opened and won by the ace in the closed hand. South cashed the ace of diamonds and led another diamond, which West won with the king. This play would permit the king, if in the East hand, to take a trick which could have been captured, but it would make game a certainty, as it would prevent West from regaining the lead after his spades were established.

West returned a spade after winning the diamond, and declarer held up until the third round of the suit. The club finesse then was taken and lost to East, who now had no more cards of his partner's suit to lead. South made her contract, taking two spades, a heart, three diamonds and three clubs.

ADA Shelves Slum Program For Duration

Slum clearance as such has been shelved for the time being by the Alley Dwelling Authority in favor of building dwellings on vacant sites to relieve the Washington housing shortage, the ADA annual report for 1941 revealed yesterday.

"After the war, emphasis will again be on slum reclamation," says the report, submitted to Congress by David Lynn, chairman.

"The staff of the authority, however, is noting slum reclamation sites which can be used for a post-war program, unless their menace to the public health compels earlier action," Lynn said.

As of June 30, 1941, the Alley Dwelling Authority had erected and was operating 915 low-rent dwelling units. Since then 996 others have been completed and are occupied. Approximately 1800 more are in the planning stage, the report continued.

During the past fiscal year the ADA reported receipt of 7104 tenancy applications—3416 from white families and 3688 from Negro. In addition, 2655 preliminary forms were filled out by prospective applicants.

Since that time the total number of applications and requests for forms has increased to 15,000, according to the annual report, which was prepared by John Ihlder, ADA executive officer.

The year also witnessed a victory for ADA in the Supreme Court, which upheld its right to acquire property for public housing by right of eminent domain.

Paul Redington Funeral Held In Falls Church

Funeral services were held yesterday for Paul G. Redington, 66, of Falls Church, Va., wildlife conservationist, who died Monday following a long illness. Services were held at the Falls Church Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Redington was the creator of the "Three R's of Conservation—Research, Regulations, and Refuges." He was chief of the Federal Bureau of Biological Survey from 1927 to 1934, a period in which he successfully advocated the Migratory Bird Conservation Act providing for the establishment of a system of waterfowl refuges.

A native of Chicago and a graduate of Dartmouth College and Yale Forestry School, Mr. Redington entered the Bureau of Forestry in 1903, transferring to the Biological Survey after 23 years' service.

He returned to the Forest Service in 1934, serving as an adviser and later supervisor of the Shoshone National Forest, retiring in 1938 due to failing health.

Mr. Redington was a former president of the Society of American Foresters, a life member of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, and a member of the President's Timber Conservation Board in 1930.

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Mrs. G. N. Church, jr.; two sons, Edward Dana and Paul G. jr.; a sister, Miss Elizabeth Sterns Redington; a twin brother, John Chase Redington, of Wilton, Conn., and a half brother, Theadore T. Redington, of Pasadena, Calif.

Baby Hippo Put On Cow's Milk Diet at Zoo

Baby Vic was flourishing yesterday, but no thanks to her 2-ton mama.

The baby hippopotamus, born Wednesday morning, was placed on a cow's milk diet, served a la bottle, as her mother persisted in a regrettable disinclination to feed the 80-pound offspring nature's way.

Vic drank a pint in the morning and a pint in the afternoon. At the controls was Frank Lowe, assistant head keeper. He managed to get to the little one after Mama Pinkie had been lured out of her tank and separated from Vic by a movable partition.

"'Course, it's possible," expounded Ralph Norris, another keeper, "that Pinkie has fed the baby a meal or two without us knowing it. But we don't think so."

The pachyderm house, closed to the public Wednesday afternoon and all day yesterday, probably will be reopened this morning to give the public its first glimpse of baby Vic.

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Otis Skinner, dean of the American stage, who died January 4, named his daughter, Mrs. Cornelia Otis Skinner Blodgett, of St. James, N. Y., residuary beneficiary of his estate valued formally at "more than $20,000," according to his will filed today.

Mrs. Blodgett, monologist and writer under her maiden name, also receives all her father's personal effects including theatrical wardrobes, stocks in apartment interests and his rights and interests in manuscripts and plays.

The Actors Fund of America and the Players Club each were given $1000, as was a brother, William L. Skinner, of Proctorsville, Vt.
